FRANK AND STATE COMPLETE BRIEFS TO SUPREME COURT

SAY DISORDER CHARGES ARE GREATLY ENLARGED

Frank's Brief, Filed Saturday in Washington, Pronounces Trial a Travesty of Justice.

Asserting the right of every state of the union to make and enforce its own criminal laws, free from interference or supervision by the federal courts, and citing the decisions of the supreme court of the United States itself to support this contention, the brief of the state of Georgia in the Leo M. Frank appeal to the supreme court was completed Saturday night after several weeks of persistent work by Solicitor General Hugh M. Dorsey and Attorney General Warren Grice.

Within a few hours after the completion of the brief Mr. Dorsey left for Washington. The rules of the supreme court requiring that a printed brief be filed, Mr. Dorsey took with him the first copy of the brief off the press of the official state printer—Charles P. Byrd.

Attorney General Grice will leave Sunday for Washington, and he and Mr. Dorsey will file the brief in the supreme court on Monday. The brief of counsel for Leo M. Frank was filed on Saturday. The hearing before the supreme court is set for next Tuesday.

Upholds Rights of State.

The brief is a voluminous one, containing eighty-five pages and citing over 200 judicial decisions, not only from Georgia and the United States supreme court, but also from many other states, to uphold the contention that the Frank verdict is legal, and should stand.

The principal argument of the state is that the absence of Frank at the verdict, from waiver by his counsel, was not a denial to him of any inherent right, and in no way injured him, but that at most it was a mere technical irregularity, and that the state of Georgia has the sole right to decide what the effect of such an irregularity shall be, and whether or not it shall be the ground for setting aside the verdict.

The incorporation of the due process clause in the fourteenth amendment does not result in an overturning of well settled principles and established usages prevailing in the states, to deprive the states of the power to establish other systems of law and procedure, or alter the same at their will," reads one of the principal subheads of the brief.

On this subject the brief quotes many United States decisions to the effect that "due process of law" was not denied Frank in allowing his absence at the rendition of the verdict. One of these was the famous Hurtado case, in which case, which held that a state could take away the right of indictment by a grand jury in felony cases if it desired, provided its laws apply to all citizens alike, thus securing to them "due process of law."

Disorder Greatly Enlarged.

With reference to Frank's charges of disorder at the trial, the state's brief calls attention to the fact that these same charges were embodied in the bill of exceptions on the appeal to the Georgia supreme court for a new trial, and that they were passed on by the court when the trial was denied.

The brief stresses the fact that "rebutting proof" was submitted by the state which disproved the disorder charged by Frank, and that this very important "rebutting proof" is not included in the record which is submitted to the supreme court of the United States by Frank in his appeal for the writ of habeas corpus. It is stated also in the brief that these charges of disorder are greatly exaggerated and enlarged by Frank in his petition.

Claim State's Jurisdiction.

On "the question of the jurisdiction the brief says: "The supreme court of Georgia had jurisdiction to determine whether Frank's counsel could waive his presence, and even if this court should think that ruling error, habeas corpus cannot correct it." An extended line of decisions is quoted in support of this argument. The closing paragraphs of the brief are as follows:

"In view of the foregoing authorities we respectfully submit that the supreme court of the United States should in this case determine that on a trial for murder in a state court the due process of law clause of the fourteenth amendment does not guarantee the right to be present of the defendant when the verdict was returned; and that this court ought to find that he cannot in any event now be discharged in view of the final judgment refusing a new trial in the case where the defendant did not make the fact of his absence, when the verdict was returned, a ground of the motion, nor claim that the rendition of the verdict in his absence was the denial of a right guaranteed by the federal constitution.

"The above ought to follow more readily, especially since this court has already refused to grant a writ of error in a case where the alleged jurisdictional question was presented in a motion filed at a time not authorized by the practice of the state where the trial took place.

"And certainly habeas corpus is not an available remedy under the facts disclosed.

"All of which is respectfully submitted.

OLIVER IS BLAZER, ASSERTS BROTHER

Greenfield, Ohio, Man Intends to Claim Whatever Estate Was Left by Man Killed in Leesburg.

Cleveland, Ohio, February 20.—(Special.)—Erk Blazer, of Greenfield, Ohio, declares that A. D. Oliver, who was murdered at Leesburg, Ga., is his brother. Charles Blazer, and says that the body will be sent to the home of a sister, Mrs. Maud Limes, in Cincinnati, where he will see it. He declares that he was informed through a Cincinnati newspaper that persons who were with Oliver at the time of his death declared that the dying man confessed that in reality he was Charles Blazer. He will claim any estate left by Oliver.

The two Blazers are sons of E. S. Blazer, a county banker. "Charles left home eight or ten years ago," said Blazer tonight over the long distance phone. "At one time he went by the name of Harding, but we lost trace of him and I do not know whether he ever used the names of Ray or Boyd.

"He was a machinist, the same as I am, and now is about 35 years of age. We had not heard from him or seen him for more than five years. He left home to seek his fortune and we do not know where he went. From the information I received from Cincinnati I am sure that the man who died under the name of Oliver is my brother."

Erk Blazer is a hard working machinist of Greenfield, a small village at the northeastern edge of Highland county. The family is well and favorably known in that section. Blazer says that he and neighbors as well as his sister in Cincinnati can identify the body as that of Blazer and talked as if the identification had been settled and arrangements made for the shipment of the body to Cincinnati. He could not describe his brother as he says he has not seen him for several years.

SIX MEN NOW HELD FOR OLIVER'S DEATH.

Leesburg, Ga., February 20.—(Special.)—Minter Kennedy, wanted in connection with the murder of A. D. Oliver here Wednesday night, came to Leesburg this morning and surrendered to Sheriff Moreland. Kennedy phoned to the sheriff last night when he heard he had a warrant that he could come here today.

A. C. McDuffie, of Atlanta, agent for the Penn Mutual Life Insurance company, is here investigating the $2,000 life insurance policy on the life of Oliver. This policy is said to be in the possession of C. W. Chance.

The six men under arrest are not locked in jail, but are in the custody of two officers, who are guarding them.

Detectives C. P. Moore are here from Macon, but for what purpose has not yet been ascertained.

Of the six prisoners who now are here awaiting hearing next Wednesday are G. W. Chance, cashier of the Bank of Sandersville; Claude Chance, his son; Minter Kennedy, of Smithville; Jimmy Black, Roy Jones and J. S. Webb, all of Sumter county. They will be given a preliminary hearing Wednesday.

The so-called "murder car" that is said to have been traced to Macon is to be viewed by a negro, who, being a negro, is positive that he can identify it.

Both sides are making great preparations for the commitment hearings on Wednesday.

A. R. Howell, former county school superintendent, and former business associate of A. D. Oliver, was arrested late this afternoon at the request of Atlanta authorities who claim to have a warrant charging him with forgery.

CAREER OF OLIVER IN SOUTH GEORGIA.

Thomasville, Ga., February 20.—(Special.)—The death of A. D. Oliver, who was at one time styled the J. Rufus Wallingford of south Georgia, brings to mind to many people the various stories of his spectacular career while at Climax. It is said that when Oliver first began his operations at Climax he joined the church there and made talks to the children in Sunday school, giving them much good advice. Among other things he advised them to begin early and save their money, and told them for every cent deposited in his bank he would pay them two. Many took his advice to their sorrow.

When Oliver bought out the bank at Faceville the people there were a little doubtful about him, and to let them know how much money he had at his command he brought from his bank at Climax $126,000 in currency in his au-

How a Manufacturer Made a Market

A certain manufacturer wanted to introduce his goods in Atlanta, but the dealers were cold.

Thereupon he began a vigorous advertising campaign in The Constitution.

People began to ask about the goods in the stores and retailers grew interested.

It was not long before every dealer was carrying the line because the public demanded it.

Today the retailer is ever on the alert to co-operate with the manufacturer when the latter is a newspaper advertiser.

The storekeeper knows his success lies in giving people what they want and there is little question about their wanting good goods when they are advertised in The Constitution.

MAY HEAD FIRE AND POLICE

CAPTAIN W. R. JOYNER
Joyner is slated to lead fire department and Hall to head police department.

COL. ORVILLE H. HALL

Mayor James G. Woodward Has Indorsed Councilman for Position, and Many Members of Council Heartily Favor the Move.

PLAN TO MAKE JOYNER FIRE COMMISSIONER; TO END ALL WRANGLES

Mayor Woodward Opposes Creation of Any New Jobs. Hall Admits He Has Been Asked to Accept Position as Police Leader.

Colonel Orville Hall, commander of the Fifth regiment, of the state national guard, and representative of the third ward in general council, is slated for election as head of the Atlanta police department, and W. R. Joyner, state fire inspector and former fire chief, is scheduled for appointment to the new office of fire commissioner, provided the present slate goes through.

Colonel Hall's selection is the culmination of a number of conferences among members of council who have been active in advocating complete reorganization of the police department.

Mayor James G. Woodward, heretofore regarded as one of the bitterest friends and foes of Colonel Hall, has indorsed him for the place.

Colonel Hall has been identified, more or less, during the past two years, as a member of the anti-Woodward element in the general council. His sentiment has been closely allied to Carlos Mason and Aldine Chambers, the recognized leaders of the opposition to the mayor, and the indorsement of Colonel Hall by influential members of both factions indicates that the council of Atlanta will present a solid front on the police situation within a few weeks.

BOTH FACTIONS FOR HALL.

Effectual efforts on the part of leaders in the movement had the effect of keeping the matter a secret until Saturday. News that both factions were working quietly in an attempt to get Colonel Hall to agree to accept the place leaked out when it was learned that another personage than Mayor Woodward himself had assured Colonel Hall of his support.

When questioned by The Constitution Saturday, Colonel Hall at first declined to discuss the matter. He finally admitted that he had been asked if he would accept the place of inspector. He said that since members of council approached him last he has been urged by his friends to make a definite announcement.

"I have been thinking the matter over carefully," Colonel Hall explained, "and as yet I have not reached a decision. As I understand the situation, the scheme is still in an embryonic state, and anything that I might say now is premature. However, I can state without fear of violating confidences that strong pressure has been brought to bear."

Colonel Hall said that he assumed that the leaders in the movement were acting with secrecy and for the reason that their plans be made public. Under such an assumption, he did not even inform his wife of the fact that he was considering the proposal.

POMEROY CONSIDERED.

Since the reorganization of the 1915 general council the police department has been one of the problems of the city government which did not menace members alike have given considerable thought.

Saturday it was learned that three other men had been discussed as possibilities. They are all, with one exception, military men. General J. Van Holt Norris, adjutant, was first named, but for some unknown reason attention was directed to Major E. E. Pomeroy, and it is understood that Mayor Woodward could not be induced to give his absolute and unqualified indorsement of either. The mayor said that he regarded Colonel Hall as best equipped of the three to take charge of the police department, and when the mayor made it plain that he would indorse Colonel Hall, despite his political affiliations, the others went to him.

It is said that Mayor Woodward, not later than last Friday, informed Colonel Hall personally that he would support him for the place of inspector of the police department. More recently the mayor told The Constitution:

"I regard Colonel Hall as a high-class man and just the sort of man for the place of head of the police department. He is well acquainted with the affairs of the city, is a thorough disciplinarian, and a business man capable of handling the men and spending the $202,000 appropriated by the city for maintaining the police department. He is the right man for the place."

There are very few members of council who have not been made acquainted with the plan to reorganize the police department. Those who have not been conferred with, according to leaders in the movement, will be urged to go into a caucus within a few weeks for the purpose of determining upon what basis the reorganization will be effected.

CREATE NEW OFFICE.

It is certain that an ordinance and charter amendment will be drafted. Instead of having a chief as head of the department, it is planned to create the office of inspector or superintendent of police. The salary, it is said, will be $4,500 or $5,000 a year. The qualifications of the inspector will be such that only a man of long military training will be eligible.

It is understood that the place of chief now occupied by Chief Beavers

GEORGIA TO WORK FOR SHIPPING BILL

Eighty Trade Bodies Called to Meet Next Tuesday to Take Action on This Important Measure.

All of the eighty trade bodies in Georgia have been called to hold special meetings next Tuesday, February 23, for the purpose of taking some action in regard to the shipping bill which is now before the United States congress.

The call has been issued by Charles J. Haden, president of the state chamber of commerce, at the request of John L. Moss, a prominent manufacturer of Athens, and chairman of a special committee of the Athens Chamber of Commerce on such matters.

The request will be made that each trade body wire the result of its deliberations to Senators Smith and Hardwick, and to the Georgia Chamber of Commerce as early as possible.

In his call Mr. Haden states that the passage of the shipping bill is of such vital importance to the people of the south and to the business interests of Georgia that he knows that the trade bodies will wish to act and let the representatives of Georgia in the national congress know exactly what is the attitude of the people of this state.

"After the trade bodies of the state have acted," states Mr. Haden, "we will appoint a delegation from them to visit Washington and hold a conference with Senators Smith and Hardwick. We believe that if Senator Hardwick, who is reported as opposing the shipping bill, is shown how unanimous is the sentiment of our people in favor of the bill, that he will change his position."

He also stated that he believes that the sentiment of the business people of Georgia is unanimously in favor of the passage of the shipping bill and that Senator Hardwick will not act adversely in the face of such a sentiment.

The notices of the call for the meetings will be sent out at once so as to reach all the trade bodies in the state in time for the meetings to be held.

METHODISTS DROP FIGHT FOR VANDY

Southern Church to Devote Its Energies to Upbuilding of Institutions at Atlanta and at Dallas.

Memphis, Tenn., February 20.—The educational commission of the Methodist Episcopal church, South, in session here, today decided to abandon the contest for control of Vanderbilt university and to devote all its energies to the upbuilding of the educational institutions to be established by the church at Atlanta, Ga., and Dallas, Texas.

Claims of the church to jurisdiction over Vanderbilt university were denied by the Tennessee supreme court several years ago and the commission was empowered, by the last general assembly of the church, to finally dispose of the controversy, either by the transfer to the eight original patronizing conferences of whatever rights the church might retain and the institution of further litigation or by the abandonment of the contest. The latter course was decided upon, the commission finding that, as a result of the decision of the Tennessee court, it was "wholly without power to transfer anything, either right, title, or interest, to the patronizing conferences.

"So believing," the commission declared in resolutions adopted, "the commission is unwilling to stultify itself by the execution of a worthless transfer and is further unwilling to authorize the institution of any further suits in futile litigation."

"But in so doing," the resolutions continue, "the commission desires to voice a final protest against manipulations by which Vanderbilt has been lost to the church."

Representatives of the patronizing conferences attended today's meeting and concurred in the action taken by the commission.

EXAMINING DERRINGER, BOY OF 8 IS KILLED

Burney Will Banks Is Shot Through Heart at Home of His Grandmother.

Burney Will Banks, 8 years old, lies dead at the home of his grandmother, 84 Culberson street, having been shot through the heart Saturday afternoon by a derringer which he had taken from the mantelpiece.

Burney and his little sister, Mary Elizabeth, have been staying with Mrs. Mary B. Banks, while their parents, Mr. and Mrs. G. L. Banks, of 89 Jones avenue, were visiting in another town. In all their romps about the room they had never broken their grandmother's command that they "mustn't touch" the pistol.

The gun was pressed on the mantel where the aged lady could easily reach it. And so long had it lain there that it seemed no more harmless than the vase beside it.

Saturday afternoon about 3:30 Burney went into the room alone. The loud report of the gun brought the aged grandmother and the others in the house to the little boy's assistance. It was too late. It is supposed that Burney took the gun from its place and was shot while examining it. In the absence of the dead child's parents no arrangements have been made for the funeral and interment.

FOUR MEN CONVICTED OF HOLDING UP TRAIN

Muskogee, Okla., February 20.—Jack and Joe Davis, Buck Burdoff and Bob Worthman were found guilty in the federal courts here today on charges of conspiracy to delay the United States mails when the Missouri, Kansas and Texas Railroad limited train was held up and robbed at Wirth, Okla., in October, 1912. The men had been acquitted in the state courts.

When the robbery occurred the bandits blew the express safe and secured $7,500. The car also was a mail car.

Music Festival Association Announces the Dates on Which Tickets Will Go on Sale.

The Atlanta Music Festival association, under the auspices of which the grand opera season of the Metropolitan Opera company, of New York, will be held in the Auditorium-Armory during the last week in April, on Saturday afternoon issued a statement concerning the sale of tickets.

It is announced that prices will be the same as those of previous years.

The statement follows:

"March 3 at 10 a. m.—Sale of boxes only.

"March 4, 5 and 6, at 9 a. m.—Sale of season tickets.

"Commencing March 8, at 9 a. m., the public sale of season tickets will be transferred to the Cable Piano company and the Phillips & Crew company, where they will be continued until March 27.

"A resolution of the board of directors of the Atlanta Music Festival association directs that no guarantor shall be entitled to purchase more than eight season tickets, only one of which shall be an aisle seat. Should a guarantor purchase a four or six-seat box, the number of seats in the box purchased are to apply on the total purchase.

"It is requested that the guarantors bring their written notices or, in case a representative is sent, that a written order be given such representative, stating the number of seats desired. In no event will seats be sold to a person other than a guarantor, on verbal order."

GERMAN SUBMARINE SINKS BRITISH SHIP IN THE IRISH SEA

SUBMARINE NEAR ROUTE OF THE ATLANTIC LINERS

Investigation Shows Norwegian Steamer Belridge Was Sunk by Submarine, and Norway Is Expected to Hold Germany to Account.

London, February 20.—A German submarine made its appearance in the Irish sea this morning and torpedoed, without notice the British coasting steamer Cambank, of 449 tons register. Three of the crew were killed and a fourth was drowned while the men were being taken to the boats.

Except for the loss of life, the sinking of the Cambank was not in itself a serious matter, but the presence of a German submarine near the route which the Atlantic liners take on their way to and from Liverpool and along which many steamers pass daily, is bound to cause some uneasiness.

It is true that this is not the first time that a hostile submarine has been in these waters, but the last one to visit them gave the crews of three ships which she sank an opportunity to leave the vessels before sinking them.

The Cambank apparently had slowed down to pick up the Liverpool pilot when she was observed by the submarine and torpedoed. The Cambank was 8 miles off Amlwych bay, on the coast of Wales.

While the sinking of this steamer has caused no international complications, a serious situation may arise out of the torpedoing of the Norwegian steamer Belridge, which, according to the British admiralty, was struck by a torpedo off Folkstone.

The Norwegian foreign office has ordered the Norwegian consulate at London to investigate this affair and report immediately, with the object, it is believed, of thanking the authorities to Germany if the facts are as stated by the British officials.

SURVIVORS DESCRIBE SUBMARINE'S WAR.

Liverpool, February 20.—(Via London.)—Without warning, a German submarine sank the British steamer Cambank a few miles east of Linas Point in the Irish sea about 11 o'clock this morning. The explosion killed the third engineer and two firemen. Another member of the crew was killed in an attempt to jump into a boat. The remainder of the crew and the pilot, twenty in all, were saved.

One of the men in describing the experience of the Cambank said:

"We were bound from Huelva, Spain, for Liverpool with a cargo of copper. When outside of Amlwych, on the north coast of Wales, we took aboard a pilot. We had gathered speed when a periscope was observed about two hundred yards away. The engines were reversed, but while the vessel was turning the submarine discharged a torpedo which struck us amidships.

"We launched the lifeboats and managed to pull clear before the Cambank sank. We had no time to save anything save most of us were scantily clad and much exhausted when a boat took us in charge and towed us into Amlwych harbor."

A steamer which has arrived here reported that she had been warned by the Cambank that there was a submarine in the vicinity. She at once put on full steam and, being a speedy vessel, reached port safely.

ANOTHER NORWAY SHIP SENT TO THE BOTTOM.

Nakskov, Denmark, February 20.—(Via London.)—The Norwegian steamer Bjarko struck a mine at 8 o'clock this morning and sank. Her crew was saved. This is the second disaster to Norwegian vessels since the German sea zone decree went into effect.

The tank steamer Belridge, the first Norwegian vessel to meet with disaster in Germany's war zone, was torpedoed yesterday by a submarine near Folkestone and was beached, badly damaged.

The Bjarko was a small vessel 128 feet long and 286 tons gross.

London, February 20.—In connection with the damaging of the Norwegian tank steamer Belridge by an external explosion off Folkestone yesterday, the admiralty announced tonight that seven pieces of metal found aboard the Belridge after she was beached at Walmer have been examined at the admiralty office and proved beyond doubt to be pieces of a discharged torpedo.

GIVEN TEN MINUTES TO LEAVE SHIP.

Cherbourg, February 20.—(Via Paris.)—The story of the sinking Tuesday of the French steamer Ville de Lille by a German submarine off the Barfleur lighthouse, east of Cherbourg, has been brought here by the vessel's boatswain.

The submarine, he said, was the U-14,

Russian Forces Turn On Pursuing Germans And Administer Defeat

VICTORY OF RUSSIANS UPSETS GERMAN PLANS

Whole of the German Line Along East Prussian Frontier Reported in Danger. Anglo-French Forces Continue to Force the Fighting on the Western Front.

London, February 20.—The Germans have been defeated by the Russians at the Fortress of Ossowets, in Russian Poland, according to advices received here from Petrograd, are now retreating to the East Prussian frontier. Should this prove to be correct the German plans would be entirely upset, as defeat at this point would endanger the whole of their line northward along the East Prussian frontier.

In the remainder of Poland and in the Carpathians, where severe fighting continues, there has been no change in the relative positions of the opposing armies, while in Bukowina a battle is being fought along the Pruth river. Retirement to this position would be an advantage to the Russians, as it considerably shortens their line and enables reinforcements to reach them more easily.

The Serbians and Austrians are again locked in battle across the Danube and have in turn been bombarding Semlin and Belgrade, respectively, and the positions near those cities. This may mean the commencement of a new campaign, or perhaps it is an attempt by the Serbians to help relieve the pressure on the Russians.

FIGHTING FIERCE ON WEST FRONT.

On the western front fighting continues with ever-increasing intensity. The offensive which the Allies took early in the week has brought about activity all along the lines and attack and counter-attack are reported more and more frequently. Both the British and French seemingly made considerable progress at the outset of the offensive operations, and this made it imperative for the Germans to deliver counter-attacks to regain the ground which they had lost. In carrying these out the Germans have shown the desperate spirit which has characterized their previous operations under similar circumstances.

In so long report covering the week's operations in Flanders, a French "eye-witness" claims for the French many minor successes and the repulse of German counter-attacks.

The Germans, too, make similar claims; so that the public is left to guess as to the outcome of the week's flare-up.

BEATEN GERMANS ARE IN RETREAT.

Petrograd, February 20.—(Via London.)—The German forces have been badly beaten in their attempt to force Ossowetz, 20 miles northeast of Lomzas, in Russian Poland, after a stubborn artillery battle, according to a telegram from the Russian general staff to high personage here. The Germans are reported to have suffered heavy losses, and are now retreating to the East Prussian frontier.

FRESH PROGRESS MADE BY FRENCH.

Paris, February 20.—(Via London, February 21, 12:07 a. m.)—The following official communication was issued by the war office tonight:

"In Belgium and along the whole front as far as and including Rheims, there have been cannonades and fusillades.

OSCAR WANTS A WIFE, AND SOME MONEY, TOO

Looks Like The Constitution Will Have to Employ a Matrimonial Editor.

There is a man in south Georgia, whose first name is Oscar and whose ambition is marriage, who asks The Constitution to find him a wife who won't spend her money for ready-to-wear goods and who will stay at home and mind her own business.

He doesn't want a woman with riches, but she must be financially able to buy a small farm in south Georgia, on which he can go to work and make a living. She needn't have a lot of money or an excessive amount of charms, but she must have dark brown eyes or blue ones.

His last name begins with a W., and further details will be supplied by writing to The Constitution.

Matrimonial Editor Needed.

If this business keeps up The Constitution will have to employ a matrimonial editor. First, it was Colonel James J. Roberts, the South Carolina hermit, who had more money than he knew what to do with, but couldn't find a wife. Then along came "Chick," the fair brunette, asking a husband who could furnish a bungalow and victrola.

Now it's a gentleman from south Georgia, Blackshear, to be geographically definite. He says he is a bachelor, aged 30 years, with 6 feet of height, a slender figure, blonde hair and no bad habits except a fondness for the ladies. He says he has no hereditary afflictions that he knows of and has been told that he could qualify several different ways for a eugenic ceremony.

His letter is as follows:

"Editor Constitution: I noticed in your issue of the sixteenth that you were trying to get a husband for 'Chick.' I hope she will be lucky enough to find the right man. Now, if you will find me a wife, I will feel grateful to you the rest of my life. I am a bachelor 30 years old; I weigh 158 pounds, am 6 feet high, slender, am blonde, with a Roman nose and no hereditary afflictions that I know of. I have been told that I am eugenically qualified. I have no bad habits except that I love the female sex.

"The kind of a woman that I want for a wife is of this description: She must be between 28 and 25 years; weigh between 125 and 140 pounds. Her height must be between 5 feet and 5 inches to 5 feet 10 inches; she must have fair complexion and corresponding hair, with dark brown or blue eyes, and a medium-sized nose. She must be healthy and a good cook and must know how to keep the house.

I Love the Chickens.

"She must know how to raise chicken and aigs, after which she is around the house. She must be one that will stay at home and attend to her own business and let other people take care of their own. she must be one that will take care of what I make and not spend it all for stylish dry goods. She must not be quarrelsome and high tempered; if she is, she must be able to control herself. I am of a quiet disposition. She must be that way, too.

"I will not marry a woman for riches, but she must be able to buy a small farm in south Georgia and equip it with work stock and implements and will make a living for her that she will be proud of. I would like you would send my name from the public.

"If you undertake to help me in this way, have all my mail sent to you and then forward it to me.

"Yours very truly,

"OSCAR W.

"P. S.—I was born and raised on a farm and know how to farm. If I was financially able to buy a farm and equip it with the necessary implements, I wouldn't need a wife that way."

DRUGS EXCITE YOUR KIDNEYS, USE SALTS

If Your Back Is Aching or Bladder Bothers, Drink Lots of Water and Eat Less Meat.

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore, don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entire urinary tract. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean, by flushing them with a mild, harmless salts which removes the body's urinous waste and stimulates them to their normal activity. The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In 24 hours they strain from 15 to 20 grains of acid and waste, so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active.

Drink lots of water—you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate clogged kidneys, also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink, which everyone should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this. Also keep up the water drinking, and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache.

ROTARIANS TO PUT ON ANNIVERSARY JUBILEE

Rome Club Coming to Atlanta Tuesday to Join in the Celebration.

Throughout the entire country, Tuesday will be celebrated as the tenth anniversary of "Rotary." February 23 was the date on which the first Rotary club was founded.

The Rotary Club of Atlanta, one of the "livest wire" branches of the organization anywhere in the country, is planning a big jubilee in honor of the anniversary, that will continue from early morning until late at night. The Rotary Club of Rome, Ga., will be in Atlanta as the guests of the local organization.

The Rome delegation will reach the city over the Southern railway at 11:50 o'clock Tuesday morning. In the contingent will be some of the most prominent business men of that city. They will be escorted by a delegation of Atlanta rotarians to the Winecoff hotel to "get acquainted." Then will follow a luncheon at Kuhn's cafe, with the program in charge of the Rome delegation.

The visiting rotarians will be taken by the Atlanta club members on a sight-seeing trip of Atlanta, after which they will adjourn to the banquet room of the Capital City club. There will be several prominent speakers at the banquet, and the souvenirs are expected to be elaborate.

URGES IMPORTANCE OF STOPPING SPREAD OF CATTLE DISEASE

Dr. Peter F. Bahnsen, state veterinarian, has just returned from Chicago, where he attended the meeting of the United States Live Stock Sanitary association, an organization completing of state and federal officials in charge of live stock sanitary control work, and now urges that Georgia cattle raisers buy no stock from quarantine states.

The session just ended was called primarily to discuss the existing crisis caused by the spread of foot and mouth disease and to propose uniform regulations that will effectively prevent the spread of the disease without unnecessarily restricting the movement of live stock.

"Bringing this highly contagious disease to the open range section of the south would be a national calamity; it would place an almost insurmountable embargo on the growing live stock interests in the south and would prove a staggering blow to the propaganda of diversified farming," says Dr. Bahnsen.

"As a result of the existing restrictions of movements of cattle traffic in stockers and feeders is nearly at a standstill; the restricted movement of finished feeders to the markets makes their sale on home markets, or better yet, on the farm, an act of prudence and profit.

"This stagnated condition in the breeding and feeding centers can lead to but one final result, and that is an abnormal scarcity of cattle, swine and sheep, especially cattle.

"In view of the facts herein set forth, the state veterinarian urgently recommends that no breeding stock be sold for slaughter, and that no stock for any purpose be purchased in states under federal quarantine on account of foot and mouth disease."

Akers and Payne Write Commending Armistead On Fair Appropriation

Alderman Jesse Armistead, who held up the proposed city donation of $75,000 to the Lakewood fair by motion to reconsider in the aldermanic board, has been called upon by J. S. Akers, of Inman, Akers & Inman, and by J. Carroll Payne, both of whom commend his position in the following written statement.

Mr. Akers says:

"I interviewed twenty prominent men, all public-spirited gentlemen and big taxpayers, and found only one in that number who did not condemn the scheme in toto.

"Atlanta and Fulton county need to have this money spent in other and better directions. We are suffering in these war times a general depression in all business. Many are out of employment and it behooves everybody to economize in every way possible. School salaries have in some cases been reduced and after contracts were made with teachers. More schools and better educational facilities are needed in the city and every department is suffering for lack of funds—funds to furnish necessities for all the people, rich and poor.

"How foolish, then, to put all this money into such a scheme as a fair at Lakewood. Nobody would go there when they knew. To witness the fairs at Piedmont park the last two years of its existence there, I understand the retail merchants of the town left behind them more, if so, while sympathizing with them in the dullness of trade, I respectfully submit that the remainder of our people don't feel called on to make this sacrifice for them at this time.

"I sincerely hope that others who feel as I do on this matter will assert their views on the measure should be killed by the aldermanic board in the interest of true economy."

My Payne Protests.

J. Carroll Payne writes:

"First, the city of Atlanta, with her streets and sewers in their present condition, has no right to divert $15,000 of its revenue for fair purposes. There is a large sum of money lying idle in the bank which could be used for sewer purposes if this year's appropriation were sufficient to enable the city to complete the job, and this money will continue to remain idle, though if properly withdrawn would greatly aid the present conditions by putting this fund into circulation.

"The mayor and some of the merchants have an idea that labor will be greatly aided by this fair project, and that the city will be benefited by the large crowds coming to Atlanta in the fall. The city could give aid to labor in general by using the $15,000 in repairing its streets, which, year after year, are patched here and there or entirely neglected. We tax-payers have a right to complain when we find the city preparing to spend our money on a fair, and when we know and see the crying need of a better and more useful application of this fund. Has the city the legal right to divert $75,000 of the yearly revenues of this city for fair purposes? If she can divert this sum, what would prevent her spending $250,000 for that purpose, or any other sum?

"There has never been a successful fair held in this city since 1895, if you can call that one successful. This year is no year for a fair. The people are tired of fairs, and we will be wasting our money in attempting one. The large crowds expected will exist only in the imagination of the newspaper space writers.

"The Georgia people are in no humor this year to spend money on fairs and we will go flat next fall, should we attempt one. The citizens of this city are in no humor to subscribe $75,000 to this project, or I am greatly mistaken, and the chamber of commerce will so find it.

"What I have written will doubtless be unpopular with the papers and the Whitehall street merchants, but it is the truth, and time will show it."

Book Reviews in Tabloid

The Home of the Blizzard. Being the story of the Australian Antarctic expedition 1911-1914. By Sir Douglas Mawson, with over 300 photographs, sixteen color plates, drawings, maps, plans, diagrams, etc., in two volumes.

The author's object in writing this book is to give to the lovers of explorations, especially Antarctic, a true history of the expedition 1911-4914. The two handsome volumes are not only interesting to the explorer, but readable to all who enjoy travels.

Sir Douglas Mawson writes of the labors of 60 men through 60 degrees of longitude in the severest climate ever recorded—the velocity of the wind for a whole year averaging 50 miles per hour. The stories of their adventures in these winds and drifting snows are but added thrillers of the experiences of men in the past who have helped to make up the world's history.

The Australian Antarctic expedition is known as one of the largest scientific undertakings of modern times. The first explorers of a new sphere untouched by the foot of man, the members of the party discovered new lands and islands which is added wealth of scientific information and besides this they climbed a claim upon a large land area for the empire.

The author, while of English birth, has lived since a child in Australia and for the past few years has been on the staff of the Adelaide university. Being well known as an explorer, having joined Sir E. Shackleton's exhibition of 1908, he was already experienced in exploring when he set out upon an Antarctic expedition of his own. He was backed by scientific societies both in Australia and Great Britain. His staff was composed of men of ability and for the first time wireless telegraphy was used in Polar explorations. Sir Douglas Mawson tells of many tragedies, thrilling experiences, etc., and for thirty-one days and nights after the death of his last two comrades he was alone in the Antarctic walking through falling snow and blizzards, how he rescued himself, how he found food, how he arrived at a certain point just in time to see the ship on which he was to return, has not only been written, but the author is now enjoying a successful lecturing tour of the United States. (J. B. Lippincott Company, Philadelphia.)

FICTION.

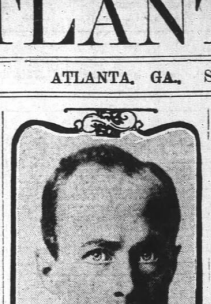
My Heart's Right There. By Florence L. Barclay. The author of "The Rosary," and many other interesting and impressive volumes of fiction, has written another very sweet story; this time it is a tender little patriotic story of the European war from the standpoint of the woman who is left behind.

One of Mrs. Barclay's reflections is worthy of repetition: "If this war has already served to turn our mind's eye away from the contemplation of our own particular stew-pan-bowl, savor" to the great essentials of life; if it has begun to give us a wider, a more extensive outlook, not bounded by our particular horizon, but by our knowledge of the needs of others; if it has done this for us, in our own individual lives, which, after all, go to make up the great hole of national life—then already we see a gleam of the eternal good which is going to work out from this apparently intolerable evil." (G. P. Putnam's Sons, New York and London.)

The Final Verdict. By Sidney L. Nyburg. Six stories of men and women. The table of contents gives you some idea of the intensity of the plots of these startling stories of men and women: "The Fruits of Victory," "A Study in Blackmail," "With All Her Worldly Goods," "A Legal Fiction," "The Honor of the Profession" and "The Ward of the Court." The world sometimes criticizes the life of a young lawyer, not realizing that it is made up of something more than a series of petty duties, but if you will read this book you will get an insight into the profession that will cause you to change your opinion. The stories, while not claiming to be real, have for a foundation the question "Where human law does not often defeat its own end by being unable to deal with the problems that are in a realm transcending its scope."

The author covers a field that is seen in our courts almost daily—human law and justice; the rights of the human being and the demands of society; the terrible heart struggles of a witness who, perhaps, wears a mask, the fainting defendant and the lawyer trying to meet the demands of justice.

This is the field covered by Mr. Nyburg in a thrilling and dramatic style in which the young lawyer is the leading character in one story and the lawyer who reads the final verdict in these stories will no doubt find his self comparing notes with his own experience. (J. B. Lippincott company, Philadelphia.)



SIR DOUGLAS MAWSON.

The Red Mist. By Randall Parrish. The author's last story is full of war, and while it is not over the European war, yet at this time the reader will find it exceedingly thrilling. General Jackson, to make certain investigations in West Virginia, chooses for this mission a certain confederate sergeant of artillery because of his intimate knowledge of a part of the country which at that time was partly controlled by the federal troops, but overrun by guerrillas, Sergeant Wyatt, in the role of a federal recruiting officer, makes the attempt which proves, for the very beginning to be full of exciting adventure. In a seemingly deserted house he finds a young girl whom he loved as a child, and to save her from the guerrilla chief whose prisoner he was, he marries her. He was shortly afterwards captured and condemned to death. The girl's loyalty and the nobility of the character of the man she trusted help to increase the interest and the war story, which is one of the many and many romances woven around "Stonewall" Jackson's men. Illustrated by Alonzo Kimball. (A. C. McClurg & Co., Chicago.)

LATE BOOKS.

Sheep's Clothing. By Louis Joseph Vance. Author of "The Lone Wolf," "Joan Thursday," etc. Illustrated by James Montgomery Flagg. A mystery story woven around a pretty girl and the smuggling of a rare jewel. (Little, Brown & Co., Boston.)

The Turmoil. By Booth Tarkington. A story strong of American business life—a charming romance with a business man for the attractive hero. It is written in Tarkington's original style and is sure to be a favorite with popular. (Harper & Brothers, New York.)

USE WITH BOOK REVIEWS

On the Fighting Line. By Constance Smedley. This book, says the author, was written and the title chosen long before the outbreak of the war, therefore it is not strictly a war book, the incidents have no military shadow, and if by reading between the lines there might be something prophetic it may be traced to social conditions the world over at this time. (G. P. Putnam's Sons, New York.)

MISCELLANEOUS.

Confessions of Frederick the Great and The Life of Frederick the Great. By Heinrich von Treitschke. This work for the first time has been translated into English. Edited with a topical and historical introduction by Douglas Sladen, with a foreword by George Haven Putnam. Mr. Sladen is the author of "The Real Truth About Germany," from the English point of view. The preface is very interesting and the foreword shows that Mr. Putnam has been studying conditions in an effort to solve the question being asked every day since the outbreak—"Who is responsible for the war?" He says in the beginning "It is my opinion, an opinion which I believe is being held by the great majority of Americans, that this conflict will go down to history as the war of German aggression," etc. (G. P. Putnam's Sons, New York and London.)

Problems of Community Life. An outline of applied sociology. By Sebastian Eldridge. Sixty problems of community life are distinguished and analyzed. Men and women are now doing a great deal toward improving social, industrial and political conditions in this country, but there is still more work to be done. Reforms are recommended when demanded by the logic of the situation on being analyzed. The author urges humaneness rather than justice in social relationships. This work offers a program of reform whose execution will keep men and women of this century always busy, always planning help for their less fortunate fellowman. (Thomas Y. Crowell company, New York city.)

Paths of Glory. Irvin S. Cobb's tremendous stories of the great European war is just received. In speaking of it he says, "I tried to write of war as I saw it at the time that I saw it, or immediately afterward, when the memory of what I had seen was fresh and vivid in my mind." (George H. Doran company, New York.)

An Ethical Problem. By Dr. Albert Leffingwell, late president of the American Humane association. He is also the popular author of many other interesting books, among them "Rambles in Japan Without a Guide;" "The Morality of London," etc. (G. Fell & Sons, Ltd., London, and C. P. Fi.rell, publisher, New York.

FROM THE FATHERLAND—NEW YORK.

Searchlights of the War. By Dr. Bernhard Dernburg. Former colonial secretary of the German empire. Among the subjects discussed are "Germany and England—the real issue, England's share of guilt; Germany and the Powers; the Ties That Bind America and Germany; Germany's Food Supply and When Germany Wins.

Austria-Hungary and the War. By Count Albert Apponyi. The author of this interesting pamphlet was for 44 years one of the leading figures of Hungarian public life, was formerly speaker of the Hungarian parliament, and has been for years one of the active leaders of the inter-parliamentary peace union.

The Case of Belgium. By Dr. Bernhard Dernburg. In the light of official reports found in the secret archives of the Belgian government after the occupation of Brussels.

Current Misconceptions About the War. Karl H. von Wiegand's interview with the crown prince. "What is German "Culture?" Has the United States guaranteed Belgian neutrality?" "Chaos in the rules of war. The contribution levied against Brussels, are among the interesting topics.

GRIST FROM HARPER'S LITERARY MILL.

Harper & Bros.

Gertrude Atherton, whose new book "California, An Intimate History," recently published, says that she always goes to some new place to do a new piece of work so that her mind will not be distracted for a moment by old associations. "I should stagnate if I settled down luxuriously in one spot. It was in New York city that my last novel was written."

Dr. John P. Mahaffy, well-known as the author of "Old Greek Education," has recently been appointed as the new provost of Trinity college, Dublin.

Irving Bachellor remarked in an interview not long since how he came to write "Keeping Up With Lizzie." "The thought was suggested," he said, "by a talk I had with a well-known New York physician regarding the education of his daughter. He was a man of some humor and we had many a laugh over his troubles with the 'Lizzie' problem. I began to look about me and saw that the world was full of 'Lizzies'—that the 'Lizzie' type of woman was the prevailing feminine type. I went to my camp in the Adirondacks and got busy with 'Lizzie.'"

Booth Tarkington's new novel is at last on the market, having spent the past two years writing it. It is needless to say that Tarkington's friends, especially the short story admirers, are glad that the book has been published.

Zane Grey's new novel, "The Lone Star Ranger," is a tale of Texas border life in the '70's, giving a picture of the contest between the outlaws and the rangers.

Dr. Allen Wyeth, whose book "With Sabre and Scalpel," has some interesting experiences in which he is seen in the role of a fighter. He is now putting forward a scheme to secure perpetual peace for this country. Dr. Wyeth has recently delivered a lecture "The Great Republic," in which he advocates one country, one flag, one national language from Panama to the Arctic Pole. He is an old confederate soldier and believes that the verdict of the civil war opened the vista not only of the reunited north and south, but of the ultimate union of all Latin-America.

Can it be true that some readers of Margaret Delands book "The Hands of Esau," have wondered where she got the title? If this is true, it proves the recent assertion of Joseph S. Auerbach's statement in his book "The Bible and Modern Life," that "a generation has grown up without the benefit of Bible-reading."

BRIEFS FROM THE CENTURY COMPANY.

The new addresses of the Century company is now 353 Fourth avenue, at 26th street, New York city. For thirty-three years these quarters have been in historic Union Square, but it was necessary to move on account of the need of a more up-to-date building.

Professor Arthur I. Andrews, of the department of history and public law, Curtis college is using Herbert Adams Gibbons' "The New Map of Europe" as a text and as required reading in his classes.

Charles D. Stewart, author of "The Fugitive Blacksmith," and several other books, both serious and humorous, has become the executive clerk to the governor of Wisconsin.

Harry A. Franck, author of "A Vagabond Journey Around the World," etc., is still engaged in seeing South America. He expects to visit every one of the twenty states of Brazil before he returns, and no doubt his new book will bring the reader in closer touch with the South American people.

Oliver Herford has been called in to illustrate Infanta Eulla's articles on the great personages of Europe, which will begin in the March Century, under the democratic title of "Cabbages and Kings."

James Harvey Robinson, professor of history at Columbia university, and author of "The Development of Modern Europe" and who received his doctor's degree from a German university, has written for the January Century an article, "An Explanation of the German Point of View."

Among other interesting articles in January Century are "Swept and Garnished," by Kipling, a story of the war; "The Soul of the French," which is a picture of old Paris and new France, by Samuel P. Orth, author of "Germany's Destiny."

Knew a Bargain.

(From the Chicago News.)

A commercial traveler had taken a large order up in Aberdeen and endeavored to impress upon the canny Scottish manager who had given the order a box of Havana cigars.

"Naw," he replied. "Don't try to bribe a man. I ken the like o' them—and I am a member of the kirk."

"But will you not accept them as a present?"

"I coudna," said the Scot.

"Well, then," said the traveler, "suppose I sell you the cigars for a merely nominal sum—say, sixpence?"

"Weel, in that case," replied the Scot, "since you press me, and not liking tae refuse an offer o' that meant, I think I'll be taking twa boxes."

MISS MARIAN BANKHEAD.

The honor of being the queen of the cotton ball, the big event with which Washington closed its social season in a blaze of glory, February 15, was awarded to Miss Marian Bankhead, granddaughter of United States Senator Bankhead. Miss Bankhead is a student at Fairmont seminary, one of Washington's most exclusive girls' schools in Washington, and is well known socially throughout the south.

Having all the charm for which southern girls are noted, she has taken a prominent place in Washington society. She selected six of her southern friends at the seminary to be her maids of honor.

The natal day of Washington reminds us that no day is too short to gain strength from its lessons.

His character was a mountain of virile strength which, backed by invincible determination, brought us safely through the crisis and shaped the future for the best.

This store lives and learns that its future may be rightly shaped through its determination to do the work of today with enthusiasm over the task.

The lesson taught by the natal day of Washington sinks down deep, encourages us to put forth greater effort, and stimulates the purpose to achieve.

Quickest, Surest Cough Remedy is Home-Made

Easily Prepared in a Few Minutes. Cheap but Unequaled

Some people are constantly annoyed from one year's end to the other with a persistent bronchial cough, which is wholly unnecessary. Here is a home-made remedy that gets right at the cause and will make you wonder what became of it.

Get 2½ ounces Pinex (50 cents worth) from any druggist—put into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. Start taking it at once. Gradually but surely you will notice the phlegm thin out and then disappear altogether, thus ending a cough that you never thought would end. It also loosens the dry, hoarse or tight coughs and heals the inflammation in a painful cough with remarkable rapidity. Ordinary coughs are conquered by it in 24 hours, or less. Nothing better for bronchitis, winter coughs and bronchial asthma.

This Pinex and Sugar Syrup mixture makes a full pint—enough to last a family a long time—at a cost of only 54 cents. Keeps perfectly and tastes pleasant. Easily prepared. Full directions with Pinex.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, rich in guaiacol, and is famous the world over for its ease, certainty and promptness in overcoming bad coughs, chest and throat colds.

Get the genuine. Ask your druggist for "2½ ounces Pinex," and do not accept anything else. A guarantee of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this preparation. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

pagne district under good conditions. We have repulsed several counter attacks, and made fresh progress north of Perthes by occupying the wood which the enemy had strongly organized.

"In the Argonne there have been a few engagements of little importance. At Les Eparges, southeast of Verdun, after having repulsed the sixth counter attack by the enemy, we delivered a fresh attack, enlarging and completing the progress realized yesterday. We took three machine guns, two trench mortars and 200 prisoners, including several officers.

"In the positions which we carried at Xon we found the bodies of soldiers belonging to four different regiments."

The communication issued in the afternoon says:

"In Belgium: The enemy bombarded Nieuport and the dunes. His batteries were effectively countered by ours. The Germans appear to have employed important forces in yesterday's attack against our trenches to the east of Ypres. After a heavy bombardment of our positions, the Germans attacked with the bayonet, but were repulsed, and our artillery held by its fire the reserves which were to have supported the first line attack. The German losses were very high.

"From the Lys to the Oise, and on the Aisne in the region of Ary-au-Bac, great artillery activity prevailed.

"It is confirmed that the enemy's losses in the campaign of the last few days have been considerable. According to a statement of prisoners, a battalion has been destroyed.

"On the heights of the Meuse, towards eight yesterday the enemy delivered his fourth counter attack against the trenches which we took at Les Eparges. This attack was beaten back, like the three preceding ones, by our artillery.

"In the Vosges the enemy continued unsuccessfully his counter attacks on Hill 607, south of Lusse. South of La Feeht the enemy succeeded in gaining a footing in the eastern spur. Fighting continues at this point, where we had an advanced post. Rain and snow are falling in the Vosges."

ALLIES REPULSED, GERMANS CLAIM.

Berlin, February 20.—(By Wireless.) The official statement given out today by army headquarters says:

"In the western theater of the war: "Strong French forces yesterday attacked the German positions in the Champagne region to the north of Perthes and to the north of Lesmesille. All attempts to break through the German lines, however, failed. In some places the enemy entered into the advanced German trenches, where fighting still continues. Otherwise the enemy was repulsed and suffered heavy losses.

"To the north of Verdun a French attack was also repulsed. Near Combres preparations for renewed French attacks were made by violent artillery bombardment.

"Fighting still continues in the Vosges. The Germans stormed the enemy's main positions at 1,600 meters on the heights to the west of Sulzern and also on Reichsackerkopf, to the west of Muhlbach. We have in possession of the height to the north of Muhlbach, so that Sulzern and Sandernach have been occupied by the Germans after a battle.

"In the eastern theater of war: In the district to the northwest of Grodno and to the north of Suwalki there has been no important change.

"To the southeast of Mlawa the enemy has been driven back into his advanced position of Lomza.

"South Mozyrz, southeast of Przesnysz and east of Racionz, there have been engagements of a local character. From the south of the Vistula there is nothing new to report."

FIGHTING SEVERE, AUSTRIANS REPORT.

Vienna, February 20.—Via London, 19.52 p. m.—The following official communication was issued here today:

"In Russian-Poland yesterday heavy artillery and rifle fire was severe. Vigorous fighting developed against the Austrian advanced positions captured by us in the region south of Tarnow and on the Dunajec river. Our counter attacks were repelled with losses.

"On the Carpathian front the general situation in the neighborhood of Wyszkow remains unchanged. Fighting is in progress almost everywhere.

"In southern Galicia the enemy has been unable to maintain his strong positions to the north of Nadworna. Yielding before our attacks the Russians retired in the direction of Stanislau pursued by our cavalry."

AUSTRIANS DRIVEN BY THE RUSSIANS.

Geneva, February 20.—(Via Paris.)—A Cracow dispatch says the Russians have been forced to abandon Przemysl with new heavy artillery, and have driven the Austrians back along the line from Krasno-Jadelo-Gorlice.

The Austrians are reported to have suffered heavy losses in the past three days at Wyszkow, near Dukla pass.

WOMEN KILLED BY AUSTRIANS.

Paris, February 20.—It was semi-officially announced in Paris today that an Austrian aeroplane flew over Cettinje, the capital of Montenegro, on February 19, and dropped nine bombs. Two women were killed and four children were wounded by the explosions, according to the statement.

RUSSIANS REPULSE OBSTINATE ATTACKS.

Petrograd, February 20.—The following official communication from the headquarters of the commander-in-chief was issued tonight:

"Actions on February 19 on the right banks of the Bohr and Narew rivers (Poland) were fought in the region of Osowee and the roads to Lomza, Ostrolenka, Prasnyez and Plonsk, taking on the character of counter-attacks.

"On the left bank of the Vistula we have repulsed weak attacks by the enemy on the lower Bzura, (yer U Wlocz, south of Rawa, near Meszonow and on the upper Vistula and the Nida, near Bechinez. Dounatel, and Jahnd. We have repulsed an offensive operation by an Austro-German detachment.

"In the Carpathians we repulsed obstinate attacks near Nasonki and Kosolobrez. Attacks of the Germans between Tuchla and Wyskow were marked by especial tenacity.

"The heights northwest of Sonozuw, which has been captured by the enemy, were occupied following a fortunate counter-attack with bayonets. In the region of Klausse we made advances.

"At Przemysl we repulsed easily two sorties of the garrison which, in distress, inflicting grave losses upon them."

AUSTRIANS ORDERED TO SOW SPRING WHEAT

Venice, February 20.—(Via London.) The recent appeal issued by Signor Raineri, the minister of agriculture not to leave a single plot of ground in Italy waste uncultivated, was followed today by a peremptory decree by the Austrian government ordering land owners to sow immediately every available part of their ground with spring wheat. Where necessary, local authorities are empowered by the decree to requisition labor for this work and to recover from the sale of crops the expenditures incurred. Failure to comply with the edict is punishable by heavy fines or imprisonment.

The minister of agriculture was quoted as saying in his appeal Thursday:

"Peace depends more than ever upon the work in the fields this spring. The power of the army and the security of the state are conditional upon the productiveness of agriculture."

The question of food supplies in Austria-Hungary is daily becoming more acute, according to Geneva dispatches, and the government has consequently issued strict orders. The shortage of fodder for cattle is greatly increasing the gravity of the situation.

RUMANIA WILL CONTINUE HER ARMED NEUTRALITY

Petrograd, February 20.—(Via London.)—The Russian minister to Rumania, M. Poklevsky-Kozell, reported today his best information was that Rumania would continue her armed and watchful neutrality.

AMERICA STANDS ON THE WARNING GIVEN GERMANY

United States Will Make No Further Move Regarding the "War Zone" Until Some Overt Act Is Committed.

Washington, February 20.—The United States probably will make no reply, for the present at least, to either the British or German notes regarding, respectively, the use of the American flag on foreign vessels, and the dangers to neutral shipping in the naval war zone about the British Isles, but will stand firmly on its warning against destruction of American lives or vessels.

Many officials who know the situation expect some further move only in event of an overt act. This was indicated in high official quarters today after the official texts of the communications had been read. The documents will be further examined, however, to determine whether there is anything in either note which, if not answered now, might be construed later as an admission.

In the case of the note to Great Britain objecting to any general use of the American flag by British vessels, the communication from England was not regarded as altering the original warning of the United States against the measure of responsibility which would seem to be imposed on England if any American vessels or lives were lost as a result of such general practice, although the denial of any intention to make frequent use of the neutral ensign was reassuring to officials.

Emphatic Warning to Germany.

The American government, already, it was pointed out, has stated in emphatic language that Germany would be held to "strict accountability" for any loss of American vessels "or lives" and this warning is construed by administration officials to be sufficiently broad to cover the case of any American citizens aboard belligerent vessels.

Some high officials are urging that the United States, having made itself sufficiently clear in its correspondence with both Germany and Great Britain, should now remain silent and observe developments. The arguments in both the British and German communications charging violations of the rules of international law and warfare, it is held by American government officials, are of no concern to the United States. The breaking down of the doctrine of international law as between belligerents does not, in the view of high officials here, affect the relative status of the nations between the United States and Great Britain and Germany with whom this country is at peace.

The position of the United States is on the right of a neutral to demand certain treatment for its ships and commerce regardless of the respective actions of the belligerents.

Further correspondence with the belligerents is opposed by many officials on the ground that the American government ought not to be drawn into a discussion of the charges which Great Britain and Germany have made toward each other.

Subject of Contraband.

There is every prospect, however, that the long British note replying to the American protest of December 26 on the subject of contraband will bring forth a rejoinder from the United States.

The discussion therein is one of the academical principles in international law, and while officials here admit that the commerce of the United States has been treated since much better by the British than before the protest was sent, they are unwilling to set any precedent by acquiescence in several of the British contentions.

The state department of late has received comparatively few complaints of detentions and seizure and the opinion prevails among officials that the American note has had its desired effect.

As for the note which Great Britain sent in the case of the American steamer Wilhelmina, bound for Germany with a cargo of foodstuffs, now held by the British prize court, the state department will enter into no further correspondence on the subject, awaiting, as has been the customary practice, the decision of the prize court before making diplomatic representations. The decision of the court is expected, however, to be made within a reasonable length of time and if, in the opinion of the state department, there is a denial of justice to the American owners, a protest will be entered.

CASE OF WILHELMINA TO PRIZE COURT.

London, February 20.—The case of the American steamship Wilhelmina, whose foodstuffs cargo, bound from New York for Germany, was seized by British authorities, probably will be taken before a prize court very shortly and it is expected the hearing will be brief.

A. G. Hagg, attorney for the Wilhelmina's owners, believes there will be no dispute as to the main facts and that the prize court will have nothing to adjudicate beyond the international questions involved.

UP TO UNITED STATES, SAYS GERMAN EDITOR.

Berlin, February 20.—(Via London.) Berlin newspapers today published a Washington dispatch quoting Secretary Daniels as saying no American warships will be used to convoy American merchantmen.

The Kreuz Zeitung alone comments on the dispatch. It says:

"If this report is correct, and Secretary Daniels' declaration expresses the attitude of the cabinet, the responsibility for loss of American life on account of the accidents which we should like to avoid and for the avoidance of which we gave into the hands of the United States the only possible remedy."

AUSTRIA IS URGED TO SATISFY ITALY

London, February 20.—The Frankfurter Zeitung suggests today that Austria should make territorial concessions to Italy to insure the latter's neutrality, according to Reuter's Amsterdam correspondent. The paper is quoted as saying:

"It is not conceivable that the correction of the frontier should in any way be prejudicial to the position of Austria-Hungary as a great power, seeing that she has recently so brilliantly displayed her strength against mighty Russia."

FOUL PLAY THEORY IN THIGPEN'S CASE PROBED BY POLICE

The finding of a purse that belonged to Fletcher Thigpen, the young man who mysteriously disappeared last Tuesday, has induced the detectives working on the case to suspect foul play. The young man should have had some $15 or $20 on his person. His purse had been rifled.

Detective Jamison states that the purse was picked up on Lillian avenue, between Stewart and Oakhill avenues, which was along the route that Thigpen could have taken to visit his aunt. The last time the young man was seen was at 5:30 o'clock Tuesday evening when he left his father's office in the Third National Bank building, stating that he intended to spend the night with his aunt, Mrs. Mary Stark, on Stewart avenue.

J. E. Thigpen, the father of the missing youth, whose home is at No. 129 Connally street, says that he has no idea where his son could have gone. He had at times spoken of going to California, when he became a boy, but had no funds with which to take such a trip.

BRILLIANT SUCCESSES CLAIMED BY THE FRENCH

Eye-Witness Describes Results of Fighting During the Past Ten Days.

Paris, February 20.—An official eye-witness account of recent fighting in France and Belgium was given out today by the French war department. The writer says:

"During the past ten days detestable weather, continuous rains in some parts and violent snow squalls in others have hindered operations. This period has been favorable for us. Our artillery obtained very brilliant results. The French superiority in ammunition and supplies is being more and more confirmed.

"Our infantry showed an aggressive spirit in the Artois, Champagne, Argonne and Alsace regions, and their operations were crowned with success."

The communication speaks of excellent work by Belgian batteries, and the remarkable energy of the British army working in concert with the French guns.

Destroyed German Trench.

"At the moment when French infantrymen advanced to storm the trenches works on the edge of the village of Carency, the night of February 6-7," the statement continues, "sixty volunteers reservists with a squad of sappers brilliantly accomplished the destruction of a skillfully arranged German trench.

"We lost only three men killed. The German lost more than half a company.

"Operations north of Arras were characterized by splendid bravery by the Zouaves and African infantry."

"We achieved brilliant successes in the Argonne region. West of Bagatelle of February 17 we made a gain of several hundred yards. That night soon the Germans counter attacked furiously, and a violent hand-to-hand engagement ensued. For more than three hours the contending forces used nothing but bayonets. Our infantry delivered several successive magnificent bayonet charges. The decimated enemy was finally repulsed, and the ground gained was definitely organized.

Our infantry delivered several successive magnificent bayonet charges. The decimated enemy was finally repulsed, and the ground gained was definitely organized.

"In the region of Ailly-sur-Meuse, after a violent artillery action, and showered bombs simultaneously with the explosion of mines in front of our trenches by which the German trenches works were upheaved. Then, following an attack with large bombs, three battalions of infantry charged after the excavation, the first ranks being armed with grenades and bombs. The companies of our advanced line were decimated and were obliged to give ground, entailing the withdrawal of the forces holding the trenches in the rear. To the left and right our men held their positions.

Lost Ground Retaken.

"A counter attack was executed immediately, and we succeeded in capturing our second line under fire of machine guns, which the enemy had brought up. The same afternoon and evening, by successive counter attacks, we retook more of the lost ground and the trench and cannon lost in the morning. Our infantry inflicted enormous losses upon the enemy.

"In front of our trenches and on the ground lost and retaken more than four hundred bodies of the enemy were counted. Facing our lines the first line of German trenches was constituted by a ridge made by the dead bodies of their men.

"In the Argonne region we were successful in fighting in the forest of Le Fresne, and made substantial gains in the forest of La Grurie. In this part of the line our ascendency over the enemy appears to have been established definitely."

FRENCH WOMEN NAMED FOR HEROIC SERVICES

Paris, February 20.—Three women have been mentioned in the orders of the day for heroic services as nurses. They are Mme. Baccara and Mme. Demaiste, attached to the hospital at Vauxbuin, near Soissons, and Mademoiselle Mundwiller, of the hospital at St. John Dieu.

TEUTONS COMPLAIN TO UNITED STATES

Allege Submarines Are Built Here for Allies, Shipped in Sections to Canada, and Then Reshipped.

Washington, February 20.—Renewed complaints were made today to the state department in behalf of the German and Austro-Hungarian embassies that submarines were being built in the United States and shipped in sections to Canada for reshipment to England. Secretary Bryan promised an official investigation.

Charles H. Sabin, president of the Bethlehem Steel company and owner of the Union Iron works, is said to have concluded similar contracts with the British government several months ago after a conference with Secretary Bryan, the latter declaring that it constituted a violation of neutrality.

Naval officers detailed at the various private shipbuilding companies for the United States government are being executed recently reported to Secretary Daniels that the Union Iron works of San Francisco and the Fore River Shipbuilding company, of Quincy, Mass., were building ten submarines each in addition to those they have under construction for the United States. It was said these had been contracted for by Great Britain before the outbreak of hostilities and could not be delivered until the war was over.

The inspectors reported that none of these boats could be completed for several months and that none of their component parts had been shipped by the builders.

So far as the officials here know, no breach of neutrality has been seen Mr. Schwab and the government is contemplated, but it was made evident that notwithstanding the legal opinion secured by the steel company affirming its right to ship parts of war vessels to belligerents, the government will not permit this to be done without appealing to the supreme court if the courts are invoked by the shipbuilders.

Silence at Schwab Plant.

South Bethlehem, Pa., February 20. Not a word could be had at the Bethlehem Steel company would say anything today in reply to the statement that was made by the German and Austro-Hungarian governments. The company has large contracts with Russia and gun contracts for European countries. The entire plant is closed down and all silence as to the concern's business is the rule among all its officials. The only person who would speak, they said, is President Charles M. Schwab, who is in New York.

Denial at Seattle.

Seattle, Wash., February 20.—After reading Ambassador Bernstorff's complaint to President W. Paterson, of the Seattle Construction and Dry Dock company, said:

"We are not building any submarines or parts of submarines for any country. We are neutral and the law we have the right to build submarines here, take them to pieces and ship them anywhere, but our plant is now entirely idle so far as submarines are concerned."

Work Stopped at Frisco.

San Francisco, Cal., February 20.—Officers of the Union Iron works here admitted some time ago that work on the hulls of eight submarines was being done under the consent of a subcontract placed by Charles M. Schwab.

When Mr. Schwab announced he had cancelled his contract, in compliance with President Wilson's definition of neutrality, it was understood that work also had been stopped here.

GERMAN SUBMARINE SINKS BRITISH SHIP

It pursued the Ville de Lille some distance and maneuvered in such a way as to prevent her escape. When the submarine came alongside her captain said:

"I will give you ten minutes to leave the ship."

The crew took to the boats and pulled for Barfleur. Two men from the submarine boarded the steamer and placed a bomb in the engine room and another in the forecastle. Ten minutes later there were two explosions and the ship began to sink.

When it was seen what desperate efforts the Ville de Lille's sailors were making to row to the coast, the submarine came up and took them in tow until Barfleur was in sight. The captain of the steamer injured his chin in clambering into the boat and the German commander took him aboard the submarine, gave him first aid treatment. The Germans also supplied the master of the steamer with a fine pair of boots, as he had been compelled to leave his own behind.

ONLY SLIGHT ADVANCE IN MARINE INSURANCE.

New York, February 20.—Marine insurance has been raised but slightly by the British government's new order in council, according to marine underwriters. Rates to English ports, which several days ago, were quoted at 1 per cent, have been advanced only 1-4 per cent, and a similar situation prevails on cargoes to French ports. These are only a shade higher than before the decree was issued, it is stated.

There has been a rather heavy advance in the rates to the River Plate because of the reported sinking of ships by the auxiliary cruiser Kronprinz Wilhelm. Rates have gone up from 1¼ to 2 per cent.

Six liners, with many passengers and large cargoes, are leaving this port today for Europe, and their course will bring them within the zone of German submarines. They are the steamers Nieuw Amsterdam, St. Louis, Tuscania, Minnehaha, Ventura and Rochambeau. Shipping records show that more than fifty large vessels from this port are now on their way to the danger zone.

LUSITANIA CROSSES UNDER BRITISH FLAG.

New York, February 20.—The British liner Lusitania reached New York today from Liverpool, having made the trip, her officers said, without finding it necessary to hoist the United States flag. On the outward voyage the liner sailed under the stars and stripes while in the Irish sea.

Fear of German submarines kept the big vessel at anchor in the Mersey for nearly five hours after she left her dock, until an hour or more after night fall, according to passengers. The ship's officers said they were waiting for favorable tide. The start lasted from 2:58 o'clock in the afternoon, till 7:47 o'clock in the evening. Then the Lusitania proceeded at full speed down the channel in the darkness.

Rough weather prevailed during the entire voyage across, and the vessel averaged only a little over 20 knots.

Once clear of the Mersey, the Lusitania did not stop till she reached New York, when a Liverpool pilot was carried across and landed here. Captain Dow said the rough weather prevented the pilot from leaving the ship.

BREAD TICKET REGIME BEGINS IN BERLIN TODAY

Berlin, February 20.—(Via London, February 21, 2:15 a. m.)—Berlin residents today were preparing to take up their culinary duties under the bread ticket regime, which begins tomorrow. So-called bread commissions were issuing tickets, which must reach householders tomorrow, or they will have to go without bread.

SHOOTS BROTHER TO SAVE FATHER

A. W. Hood Is Now in the Grady Hospital, and His Brother, C. J. Hood, Was Taken to Police Station.

A. W. Hood, 198 Atlanta avenue, passed last night in the Grady hospital, and his brother, C. J. Hood, was placed under arrest on the charge of shooting him in the groin.

The shooting took place at the Hood home and was precipitated, it is said, by an attack made by A. W. Hood on his wife and his father.

Members of the family say that he came home about 12 o'clock in a surly humor, and as soon as he entered the house started to beat his wife.

This finished, it is charged that he broke down the door of his father's room, and was choking him, when his brother reached the scene, pistol in hand. One shot, and Hood was ready for the hospital.

According to Policeman David and officials at the Grady hospital, he was under the influence of drink. His brother's bond was fixed at $200 and was signed by his uncle, D. F. Hood, of Oakdale. The trial will be held Monday. Hood will recover.

MEXICAN PRIESTS HELD FOR RANSOM

Carranza Demands $500,000 From Native Roman Catholic Clergy in Mexico City. Bryan Intervenes.

Washington, February 20.—Further representations against the extortion by Carranza officials of priests in Mexico were made today by Secretary Bryan to Canada, at Vera Cruz, was instructed to appeal directly to General Carranza in behalf of the 180 priests arrested by General Obregon in Mexico City, where they are detained in the national palace. Some of them are reported to be Spaniards, and these, it is said, have been threatened with expulsion from the country.

Carranza officials demanded 500,000 pesos from the priests by a certain time and when it was not forthcoming told the foreigners among them, according to report, that they would be banished while natives would be held in captivity. It is not known here how many of the 180 priests were Spaniards.

Secretary Bryan said he had been informed that 200 Spanish and one British priest in Mexico City had not been molested.

Railway communication between Mexico City and Vera Cruz, cut several days ago, has been restored, the department was informed in a dispatch which said Spillman had prepared today to join Carranza at Vera Cruz.

FURTHER SUCCESSES REPORTED BY VILLA.

El Paso, Texas, February 20.—Further Villa successes in the west coast country were reported tonight in a telegram from General Villa, dated yesterday at Zapotlan, between Guadalajara, Metropolis, of the west coast, and Manzanillo, a Pacific port, which is Villa's objective point.

Villa stated that 15,000 of his troops had defeated in the mountains near Zayula a Carranza force which he estimated at 12,000 men.

Villa declares his losses were 100 killed and 250 wounded, while it was stated by Villa that the Carranza troops lost 1,500 killed and a large number wounded. Villa said that he was following the enemy at the head of his troops.

The Central railway was cut today between Guadalajara and their Chihuahua City. Carranza agents here said that a group of 500 men from Guadalajara had entered the Villa territory below this port with the intention of destroying the railway by cutting railroad communication.

Raul Wenz, President Wilson's personal representative in Mexico, and George C. Carothers, state department agent in Guadalajara, Mexico, were delayed by the cutting of the railway. The latter was arrested at Ameca and the train proceeded to Chihuahua City.

The third of what was said to be ten aeroplanes contracted for passed through this port today destined for Villa's army.

SILLIMAN TO TREAT WITH GEN. CARRANZA.

Vera Cruz, February 20.—John R. Silliman arrived here tonight from Mexico City and will resume his functions as a result of Germany's war zone decree, according to marine underwriters. Rates to English ports, which several days ago, were quoted at 1 per cent, have been advanced only fractionally, and a similar situation prevails on cargoes to French ports. These are only a shade higher than before the decree was issued, it is stated.

There has been a rather heavy advance in the rates to the River Plate because of the reported sinking of ships by the auxiliary cruiser Kronprinz Wilhelm. Rates have gone up from 1¼ to 2 per cent.

News of the War Summarized

Three important announcements furnish the outstanding features in the latest reports concerning the European war. The British and French Mediterranean fleets are carrying on a vigorous bombardment of the Dardanelles forts, the first serious attack made at this port by the allied forces. The German forces have been defeated at the fortress of Ossowetz, northeast of Lomza, Russian-Poland, according to advices from a member of the Russian general staff. A German submarine has made its way into the Irish sea and torpedoed a British coasting steamer near the route taken by trans-Atlantic steamers to and from Liverpool.

The attack on the Dardanelles was begun Friday and continued throughout Saturday. British official reports and official statements declare that the allied fleets have met success in what naval experts say must have been one of the most serious bombardments ever undertaken.

Eight battleships and cruisers are taking part in the attack and the forts on both sides of the straits are reported to have been silenced without damage to the warships.

The Turks, however, say that no damage was done to the forts and that their casualties numbered one killed and one wounded with considerable damage to three warships by the guns of the forts.

At Ossowetz, it is reported, the German invaders suffered heavy losses after a stubborn artillery battle and are retreating to the East Prussian frontier.

The British steamer which met disaster in the Irish sea was the Cambank, which was torpedoed east of Lizna point by a German submarine without warning. Three members of the crew were killed and a fourth was drowned, the remainder being saved.

In the western theater of war there has been cannonading in Belgium and along the whole front as far as and including Rheims. In the Champagne district the allies have repulsed several counter-attacks and made fresh progress north of Perthes. At Les Eparges, southeast of Verdun, the allies on Saturday delivered a fresh attack, after having repulsed the sixth counter-attack by the Germans. This attack, according to the French war office, resulted in enlarging and completing the progress realized Friday.

An Austrian official statement says a severe artillery and rifle fire was carried on in Russian Poland Friday. Vigorous fighting developed around the Russian advanced positions captured by the Austrians to the region of Tarnow and on the Dunajec river. The Austrian counter attacks were repulsed.

Fighting is in progress almost everywhere along the Carpathian front.

The Austrians announce that in southeastern Galicia the Russians have been forced to maintain their positions north of Nadworna and have retired in the direction of Stanislau.

An Austrian aeroplane flew over Cettinje, capital of Montenegro, on February 19, and dropped nine bombs which killed two women and wounded four children, according to a semi-official announcement made in Paris.

The Austrian government has issued a peremptory decree ordering land owners to sow immediately every available plot of their ground with spring wheat. Failure to comply with the edict is punishable by heavy fines or imprisonment.

M. Poklewski-Kozell, Russian minister to Rumania, stated in a report to the Russian foreign minister that according to such information as has been able to secure, Rumania would take side either for or against Austria and her allies, but would continue her present policy of armed and watchful neutrality.

HOW GERMAN INSULTED AMBASSADOR GERARD

New York, February 20.—H. Rivington Pyne, private secretary to Ambassador Gerard, at Berlin, was among the passengers on the Lusitania, which arrived here today. He confirmed in detail Gerard's report of the incident in a Berlin theater when the ambassador and other Americans were criticised because they were conversing in English.

"We were sitting in a box," said Mr. Pyne, who himself was in the party, "talking in a low tone. An occupant of an adjoining box in a loud voice said that inasmuch as Germany was at war with England, the English language was out of place in a German theater. He was expressing his objections loudly when a German sitting near by rose to his feet and stopped him, saying, 'Sit down; don't you see those gentlemen are Americans?'

"Several other occupants of the audience approached, and the disturber was ejected. Immediate apologies were offered by the theater attendants and German residents in the audience; and afterwards an official apology came from Berlin city authorities."

Discussing the shortage of food supplies in Germany, Mr. Pyne said:

"So far as I could see, when I left Berlin there was no serious shortage. Foodstuffs prices had not materially advanced, although there was little white bread to be had. Theaters were running, restaurants were well organized and the Germans were confident their armies would be victorious."

Mr. Pyne expects to return to Berlin in a few weeks.

CONGRESS IS ASKED TO PAY UNION PENALTY

Washington, February 20.—Alt. n B. Parker, Samuel Gompers and Frank Morrison, all representing the American Federation of Labor, asked the house judiciary committee today for an appropriation of $290,000 to pay the Sherman anti-trust law judgment in the Danbury Hatters recently affirmed by the supreme court.

They argued congress never intended the anti-trust laws should apply to labor unions, and that a mistake to do so only by faulty wording.

Southern League Adopts Its Schedule

STATE LEAGUE IS AN ASSURED FACT FOR 1915 SEASON

Visit of President Jemison to Every City Awakened Interest That Had Heretofore Been Dead.

SALARY LIMIT RAISED FROM $700 TO $900

League Will Be Operated on Basis That Will Make Clubs at Least Break Even on the Season.

By Dick Jemison.

The Georgia State league is assured for the coming season. All plans of organization, all rules and regulations, the adoption of a schedule and other matters were completed during the past week.

In the interest of the league, the writer, who is also president of the league, paid a personal visit during the past week to every city in the circuit, to effect, if possible, a local organization in each town.

The trip was concluded with a league meeting at Thomasville on Friday, when the playing dates for the season were ratified, the salary limit readjusted and other matters pertaining to league business straightened out.

The league appears to now understand its affairs thoroughly, and, under the new regime, apparently starts out with the best prospects in the history of the league, and its stability will be perpetuated is now assured.

Reduced Expenditures.

The league will operate on a $900 salary limit this season. Last season it was $1,200, but no one in the league observed this limit and will frankly admit that it was their fault that they ran so far in the hole.

Under the new salary limit the manager can only be paid $150. If the clubs can get him for less, well and good, but he cannot be paid more than that. This is included in the $900 limit.

The maximum that can be paid to any player was fixed at the Thomasville meeting at $90. The clubs can use the players anything less than this but they want to feel that they can have any player over this figure.

It was further decided at the meeting that only one Class C man could be carried, including the manager.

These rules will cause the clubs to release seven out of the players that they carried over from last season, as not being available under the new limit, but they are all willing to start with a clean sheet.

The constitution and by-laws vests in the president of the league authority to enforce the rules and regulations, especially the salary limit, and it was the sense of the Thomasville meeting that he backed to the limit by the directors as an assurance if the salary limit is strictly observed that it will mean the life of the league.

The Playing Dates.

Two schedules, drafted by A. B. Parker, secretary of the Atlanta Baseball association, were presented to the meeting for their consideration. One called for one season of 90 games, the other for a split season of 100 games.

The league passed at its Americus meeting that the season should be 90 games and one season, but after due consideration it was believed advisable that the split season be used in a Class D league.

The 100-game schedule was, therefore, adopted, though it was 10 games more than all the clubs wanted. Should the proviso in adopting same was made that as the first half season end approaches, the clubs can instruct the league president to draft a shorter schedule to be used during the second half, reducing the total games to the 90, as originally prescribed.

According to the schedule, as adopted, the first half season opens on April 30 and closes at dusk on June 27, the second half opening on June 28 and closing on August 29.

At the conclusion of the two halves, the pennant winners in each will then meet to determine the winner of the season, the team winning eight games first being adjudged the winner.

How Teams Play.

Thomasville at Valdosta.
Brunswick at Waycross.
Americus at Cordele.

The three road teams in this schedule then return home for a home series, but with different teams. The second opening on May 3 would be:

Cordele at Thomasville.
Valdosta at Brunswick.
Americus at Waycross.

The closing games of the first half-season are scheduled:

Valdosta at Cordele.
Thomasville at Waycross.
Brunswick at Americus.

The opening games of the second half-season are scheduled as follows:

Thomasville at Americus.
Waycross at Valdosta.
Brunswick at Cordele.

Thomasville at Waycross.
Valdosta at Cordele.
Brunswick at Americus.

The Prospects.

The prospects for the league during the coming season are the best in its history. With the reduced salary limit and a strict observance of same, the towns can have a good baseball team as they did last season at half the cost.

The rules will be enforced. The directors are back of the president as a unit in this feature, of the league at fairs, and tell him to enforce the rules, especially the salary limit, no matter who it hits.

In a few days now each city will effect its permanent organization for the coming season. One was perfected at Thomasville and Brunswick on the present trip. Cordele, Valdosta and Waycross will probably retain the officers that served during the past season.

Within the next two weeks the managers of the various teams will be appointed, and they will begin to sign their men for the coming season.

The training season has always been a big expense to the teams of the league, $800 and $1,000 being usual in this manner before a single game was played.

This season the rules provide for the training season to start April 15, or just two weeks before the season actually opens, reducing the training season expenses considerably this year.

In fact, there has been a general cut of expenditures in every respect. The club owners have learned their lesson last season, and they are going to observe the rules closely this season. It is to their interest, and their's alone.

Good Umpires.

The president has received in the neighborhood of sixty applications from would-be umpires for places in the league.

They have presented recommendations from league clubs and baseball players all over the country as to their ability. From this number the president hopes to be able to get a good reliable staff of arbiters.

S. H. LaRocque, who played in the Southern league a few seasons back and has been umpiring since he quit playing ball, has been given the signal chief of umpires. He will supervise the umpiring during the season.

The work of the umpires will work with Mr. LaRocque have practically accepted terms, and it is believed that the staff will be lined up ere long.

In every way the season of 1915 in the Georgia State league gives every indication of being its best.

THREE GULLS SIGN.

Mobile, Ala., February 20.—(Special.)—Manager Schmidt, of the Mobile club, has received the signature of Pitcher Hogg, Outfielder Miller and Second Baseman Perry, who have been holding out for several weeks. Salary terms were arranged satisfactorily. This leaves Jordan, O'Neil, Calhoun and Townsend, of the old regime to report. Pitcher Keely was sold to Memphis. Cowan, utility man, was signed by Schmidt.

Charley Weinert, of Newark, outfought Porky Flynn, of Boston, in a ten-round bout in Brooklyn. Flynn weighed 191 and Weinert 172 pounds.

Sorting Out the Recruits Is a Most Difficult Task For Big League Scouts

By BILLY EVANS,
American League Umpire.

Some of the most highly touted baseball players in the world have been among the sourest kind of lemons. Selecting star ball players is one of the highest gambles in the world. No one can believe you have landed the one best bet. It often develops that someone has slipped you the booby prize. When it appears that you have picked nothing out of the ordinary, it often turns out that you are the possessor of a very promising youngster.

A lot of clubs were touted on the great Walter Johnson, but the Washington club had a tip on the youngster long before he was exercising a perfectly broken finger, rendering Catcher Blankenship unfit for service, is what caused Manager Carrigan to sell Scott Wilson, one of the greatest peaches ever plucked in the baseball orchard. Scott Wilson has become famous, any number of owners have been frank enough to admit that they had received letters about Johnson's great ability. Former Pitcher Jack Quinn, John Coums came to Comiskey without any fireworks attached. When he joined the club some of the critics feared he wouldn't do, yet John Collins just developed into one of the most valuable players in the game. Quinn, with Johnson, Mogridge and his highly touted recruits Comiskey realized nothing, yet a player who came unheralded, Lefty Williams, proved a mighty little money, has been one of Comiskey's mainstays.

Mack Develops the Youngsters.

You seldom hear of Connie Mack paying a fabulous sum for a ball player. Connie once came through with a pitcher of change with Providence pitcher, and about the only thing that Schreiber ever did for them was manage to pitch one good game. Mack's system is to get the player in his organization and develop him. That he has had remarkable success with such a system is proved by the fact that he has a world beater of, and the wonderful success he has had. Every morning at Shibe park a bunch of amateur players are disporting under the critical eye of the great leader. Mack is quick to see promise in a player, and such a player is certain to get every chance in the world to make good. Because of the reputation Connie has built up for playing the youngsters, a great many of the futures greats express a wish to get a first chance with Mack. The letters or scores of letters every day touting some phenom, and many are the kind of him that he never fails to reply to them. There is no matter how he may regard the information.

Mike Kahoe, whom I regard as one of the greatest baseball men in the game, has views similar to those of Manager Mack. He has scouted the game one day last summer after he had received a letter from a long scouting trip.

"Did you see any stars, Mike, on your trip?" I asked.

"Where?" I asked quickly for my curiosity was aroused.

Every player in the minors with the least promise seems to be "all to the good" with some big league club," said Mike. "There isn't much likely material, and what there is floating around belongs to some major league club. There is one bet every scout is overlooking, —the small town teams that do not belong to any league. I believe there would be money well spent for some major league club to let some scouts look at the minors alone and inspect the fast amateur and semi-professional clubs. I believe we could bring to the front many players who would show more promise than the "busher" now in the minors."

So have Mike has the right idea about the scout game from that angle.

As members of the Boston club, Gowdy, by his great catching, and Rudolph, by his brilliant pitching, helped added in the wonderful showing made by that club. Rudolph, known as "Dutch" Rudolph, hails from New York, as a member of the Boston club he was credited with being one of the brainiest pitchers in the business, ranking second to Mathewson only. McGraw after working hard with him let him loose from the big fellow, only to have him be the first one to sign. Billings, McGraw had gambled with Rudolph and Gowdy figured they wouldn't work and threw them into the discard, only to have Stallings get them on the new waffle, and see the great showing made them win.

Jimmy Bodie came to the Chicago White-Sox with the reputation for being a "six hunter." Larry Chapman, the sensation of the American association, was bought by Comiskey for a fancy price. Advance notices made both these players strong additions to the club, but each one has ever won a regular berth. John Coums came to Comiskey without any fireworks attached. When he joined the club some of the critics feared he wouldn't do, yet John Collins just developed into one of the most valuable players in the game Quinn, with Johnson, Mogridge and his highly touted recruits Comiskey realized nothing, yet a player who came unheralded, Lefty Williams, proved a mighty little money, has been one of Comiskey's mainstays.

LEACH CROSS FIGHTS WOLGAST THIS WEEK

By James J. Corbett.

New York, February 20.—(Special.)—Wolgast is to meet Leach Cross in New York sports again next week. The exchampion has been signed to box ten rounds with the Cross, a hard hitting Eastsider. Cross has long been after a match with the former bear of the Illinois lightweight division. Leach is a business man from start to finish, and he appreciates the fact that New Yorkers like to see a fighter who will mix it with him. Cross always looks good against a fighter who carries the fighting to him, while a match for a clever boy. He will not find Wolgast indulging in fancy sparring, and if Leach can whip that old stager across he may add another knockout to his list.

If as Wolgast wasn't the hard-luck little fellow he is, I would not hesitate to say that he will beat Cross. But Wolgast has had late years a few accident after another. He has probably broken more bones in his hands and arms than any fighter of modern times. He recently recovered from the accident he met with in the match with Welsh, and last week had his first tryout in months.

Wolgast, the tearing-in, slugging boy of two years ago, must make room to jump out of the ring. Wolgast, the boy with the brittle hands, is a different proposition. Anyone who has busted his maullies as often as he has, is bound to be a little cautious and not take too great chances in leading. While Ad's specialty is tearing in, his best work is done at close quarters.

"Well, we can't but admire the game little fellow for trying. He certainly has the courage, and if it was simply a question of gameness, Ad would come down in front.

LOCALS ARE NOW SOUTHERN CHAMPS

Defeat Columbus 66 to 27 in One of the Most Brilliant Games Ever Staged on Local Court.

By Carl Taylor.

The Atlanta Athletic club is today southern basketball champions for the year, in view of the fact that they last night defeated the Columbus Y. M. C. A. on the local floor by the count of 66 to 27. The locals ARE Champs, having a better claim to the title than any other southern five.

The Game.

Imagine five vicious wildcats battling five equally vicious tigers, and also imagine these same five wildcats being bettered by the tigers once before, and you may conceive some idea of the fierceness of the struggle. It was the prettiest fought, and cleanest played game of the season, and one of the best ever staged on the local floor.

After scoring twenty minutes after the scheduled time for festivities to commence, about who should referee, Innis Brown was selected and hostilities commenced.

The club got the jump and before the Columbus ouchmen had even able to negotiate the baskets, they had five times sent the ball through the hoops. Thus it continued with the home team on the offensive at all times. During the first half, everything was in their favor, and when the whistle had blown, were leading by a count of 32 to 17.

The second half started with Columbus coming back strong for the first few minutes. Columbus always, heretofore, played better ball in the second half than in the first, but after they had shot the first two goals of this period, the club once again started their merry clip from then on, it was merely a question of how much the final count would be.

Referee Brown turned into a regular rout, and it was the severest lacing they have ever received on the local court.

Locals' Teamwork Stars.

To try and pick an individual star from the five Atlanti playing on the local club would be absurd. Every man of the Forbes, Fowler, Walter Dubard, Johnny Graves, Pie Weaver and Allen Carter, all played a game of their career, and every man of them played for the team, and not for the individual.

The feature of the entire game was the club's brilliant passing. Time after time they would carry the ball down the field on a succession of short passes for a sure goal.

Peddy Stars.

For Columbus, Peddy, of course, played his star game. He led the attack for Columbus with a total of fifteen points. Kilcrease, at center, and Newman, at guard, also played well.

Columbus was away off in their team work, and very seldom made spectacular short passes for goals.

The playing of Innis Brown was good, and at all times consistent.

The game was cleanly played, and only four fouls were called. Three on the club for holding and one on Columbus for the same offense.

You played a great game, "club," and I predict the Southern Basketball Champs which is hereby bestowed upon you, is rightfully deserved.

All Hail the Champs!

Atlanta (66).	Pos.	Columbus (27).
Forbes (28)	. . . R. F.	Peddy (15)
Graves (14)	. . . L. F.	Struppa (4)
Dubard (18)	. . . C.	Kilcrease
Weaver (2)	. . . R. G.	Dozier, Massey.
Ed Carter (4)	. . . L. G.	Newman (2)

Summary: Foul goals—Peddy 4 out of 4 chances. Forbes 0 out of 1 chance. Field goals—Atlanta 32. Columbus 12. Referee, Innis Brown. Time of halves, 20 minutes.

HE TIES WORLD RECORD FOR FIFTY-YARD DASH

Providence, R. I., February 20.—The world's record in the 50-yard dash of 5 2-5 seconds was equalled by Ellis Loomis, of Massachusetts Institute of Technology, at the armory athletics games tonight.

Dartmouth won. Dartmouth's relay team defeated that of Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Mercer, of Harvard, won the mile run in 4 minutes 25 2-5 seconds.

PIPP AND HIGH WILL JOIN YANKS

Detroit, Mich., February 20.—Walter Pipp, first baseman, and Hugh High, outfielder, will play with the New York American in this season. President Navin, of the Detroit club, announced today that Pipp had come to terms with Manager Donovan, of New York, and that High probably would sign today.

Passing of Walter Camp Epoch In Inter-Collegiate Football

By Parke H. Davis.

At the recent session of the intercollegiate football rules committee Walter Camp, of New Haven, announced that at the close of the present year he would retire from membership upon the committee. The passing of Mr. Camp from this committee marks such an epoch in intercollegiate football that it invites special comment.

The first game of football under the intercollegiate rules was played at New Haven, in 1876, between Harvard and Yale, and the second game was played in the same city two weeks later between Princeton and Yale. Both of these games fell far short of the original champion "fifteen" Walter Camp played at halfback. Two years later he appeared as Yale's delegate in the intercollegiate convention, as body which first formulated the present rules committee. Mr. Camp at the time was Yale's captain. From that day to this, a period of 37 years, Walter Camp has participated in every session of the rules-making body.

Made Many Changes.

It was Mr. Camp who invented the idea of the "eleven," thus breaking away from the Rugby "fifteen." Again it was Mr. Camp who devised the six dimensions of the American field of play and introduced the method of an original possession of the ball by one side, our "scrimmage" thus doing away with the English "scrummage" and making possible the use of preconceived plays, tactics and signals. In this connection it is also genius introduced to the game the safety as a method of play. Prior to that time it had been regarded as a touchback in all cases.

All of these great inventions Walter Camp accomplished while still an undergraduate. It was not very long after it was Walter Camp who solved the difficulties presented by the old game of "block game," which Princeton had perfected, by which one side was enabled to retain continuous possession of the ball throughout an entire half. Mr. Camp's solution was the invention of "fairs and downs," by which one side was permitted to retain the ball only so long as it would advance it at least five yards in four downs. A "fair" was a name applied to putting the ball in play from the sideline when out of bounds. It was this invention which gave the final twist to the intercollegiate game, converting it wholly away from English Rugby and making of it a distinctive American style of play.

It was also the establishment of the five-yard gain in four downs that led to the stripping of the field with lime which has given to it the familiar name of gridiron.

In 1883 it was Camp's suggestion that resulted in the numerical system of scoring by which points were assigned the scoring plays. Previously it frequently occurred that neither team could tell which had won the game on account of the confusion between the relative worth of touchdowns, goals from touchdown and goals from the field.

Originated Rules Committee.

In 1888 Mr. Camp originated the very institution of the rules committee itself, proceeding to call the intercollegiate convention in that year a comprehensive plan for such a body, which he styled a "Graduate Advisory Committee of Rules and Appeals." This plan the intercollegiate convention adopted and for four years both bodies existed together after which the intercollegiate convention having dwindled down to Pennsylvania, Princeton and Yale finally disappeared, leaving Camp leadership in the rebellion of 1895 is still vividly recalled. Harvard and Pennsylvania at that time had highly developed the momentum mass play. Yale and Princeton opposed this style of attack. The controversy became so fierce that the rules committee split in two and the next year the country had two sets of rules. In 1897, however, a union was effected, but Mr. Camp had won for the momentum mass plays were abolished.

His latest innovation along the line of modern developments in the game was his introduction in 1912 of an additional down for the offensive team in order to get the necessary ten yards, thus restoring the balance between the offense and defense which had been disturbed by the abolition of intentional interference.

Such are the more important features in the rules which owe their presence to Walter Camp.

Turkey League Standing

Phil Ammon's team is leading in percentage of the 54 teams that are taking part in the Turkey League. Phil Ammon's team is in the Noon Business Men's class and bowling on Tuesday and Friday at 12:30, and not withstanding the short time that this league has been under way it would appear that association athletes are to be found in the Noon Business Men's line-up. The teams there are 670 men and boys, who are competing twice each week in basketball, volleyball, relays and track events.

In the boys' department Riley Reese and his Bluebirds have the largest total pins for the season, but they are not leading for first place in the Y. M. C. A. Boys' division, while the Blue-birds and the Robins are leading in School B class.

In the men's department the Noon Business claim the honors, with with Ammon's 91.4 per cent have an easy lead in first place. The Y. M. C. A. Young Men's division come second, and the Atlanta Athletic club bowling the speedy U-9 team. The Lions, in the Big Brother class, are fourth, and the Kriegshaber troup are fourth.

MERCER DEFEATED AUBURN QUINTET

Macon, Ga., February 20.—(Special.) The local basketball season was brought to a close tonight when the Mercer quintet defeated Auburn quintet by the score of 26 to 14.

The game was thrilling from start to finish, many spectacular goals being shot by both sides. For Auburn, the star was Carter at guard, his work at all times being sensational.

For Mercer, Cochran at forward and guard, and Grace at center, were the features, both of these men playing a jam-up game all through.

Mercer was badly off in shooting, both of her forwards throwing many easy goals which, if they had been made, would have made the score rather one-sided.

The line-up was as follows:

Mercer (26).	Auburn (14.)
Stubbs (Capt.) L. F.	Clements (Capt.), R. F. (2)
Dewberry, R. F. (4)	Forbes, L. F.
Grace, (15)	Steed, C. (4)
Cochran, R. G., R. F. (4)	Lenhell, L. G.
Forrester, L. G.	Carter, R. G. (6)

Time of halves, 20 and 15. Score at end of first half: Mercer, 15; Auburn 6. Substitutes—Mercer, Baker and Walker. Referee, Sparks.

By Dick Jemison.

The Southern league adopted its list of playing dates for the 1915 season, at a meeting held in Little Rock Saturday, making in a few minor changes in the proposed schedule, as presented to the meeting by the schedule committee.

This committee consisted of Judge W. M. Kavanaugh, president of the league, T. K. Jackson, of Mobile, and O. B. Andrews, of Chattanooga, who were unanimously thanked by the directors for their efforts.

The season starts longer than any season in the history of the league, running from April 12 to September 6, or five months and fourteen days of baseball.

OPENING DATES.

The openings this year will take place in all eight cities in two days. While this will add considerable mileage, the season of the jumps, but, as the mileage will be pooled and all eight cities will compete for the attendance trophy on opening day, the receipts will more than make up for the difference.

Birmingham in New Orleans.

April 14.

New Orleans in Atlanta.

How Atlanta Fares.

Outside of the additional mileage the Crackers have to travel, and the fact that they close away from home, the locals fare better by three games than any they have had yet.

They have twenty games on the home grounds, but three will be those "early games" that were such a bugbear to the fans last season.

The Crackers get 7 games at home in April, 20 in May, 9 in June, 19 in July, 21 in August and 9 in September. They get 13 games on the road in April, 19 in May, 10 in June, 11 in July, 11 in August and 18 in September.

Literature and Library Extension

Today we remind our readers that February 22 is Library day, and send an appeal from our chairman of library extension, Mrs. Clifford Smith, for re-establishing the traveling library which under Mrs. McCabe's direction was for the use of the individual club.

Mrs. Smith is a new chairman and, in addition to the ideas she gives out, asks suggestions for carrying on this work to the best advantage.

Our former chairman, Mrs. Trox Bankston, stressed so strongly the observance of Library day and reported good results.

Many of the clubs adopted her suggestions and observe February 22 by helping the local library, establishing libraries in county schools, contributing to the traveling library or having a library program.

If the appeal comes too late for those who have not made plans for this special date to do so, let each club set apart one afternoon for encouraging and promoting this valuable work.

Mrs. Thomas G. Winter, chairman of library extension of the general federation, invites the chairmen of this committee in the various states to correspond with her touching the library problems of their respective states.

She pleads for the book—calling it one of the chief foods of the inner life. Quoting Mrs. Winter, "Literature has that winged character of inspiration that moves us with deeper sense of reality, the reality of man and man's struggle, of nature and nature's beauty, of effort and effort's worthwhileness."

We are advised to read literature instead of reading about literature.

In our courses, let us give one-fourth of our time to criticism and history and biography, and three-fourths to the writer's own words—his self-revelation.

A good book is a real creative power in the mind and a real maker of our inner life.

So it beooves us to choose wisely the books we read and those we allow our children to read.

The habit of good reading often has to be acquired, but one's taste can be trained.

We can provide our children with the best so that they may have healthy minds and fix gladly on the good.

Books for Children.

Our chairman asks most of all at this time for books for children.

The department of literature of the general federation has prepared a list of about 300 books that are desirable for children which it will send on receipt of 5 cents.

Mrs. Winter says: "Home reading should give the child love of nature."

One who has read Mary Treat's "Chapters on Ants" is going through life to regard an ant as a personal friend.

After making acquaintance with Thompson Seton's "Molly Cottontail," the child will ever love the rabbit. "Give the children friendly relations with the many-sided world in which they live."

Feed your child on fine humor if you wish to cure him of the Sunday supplement habit.

The poems learned and loved in childhood are often an inspiration. Make the children familiar with the beautiful poems we just cannot do without.

Study Courses Recommended.

The literature department of the general federation recommends strongly the study of peace and the immigrant. The president, Mrs. Pennybacker, has made a special plea that the women of the country should study the immigrant and his point of view in order that when, after the war, we have a fresh influx of foreign born, we may prove understanding hosts.

State chairmen are urged to commend to their clubs the sympathetic study of the literature of such peoples as form the mass of our immigrants—Scandinavians, Russians, Italians and the peoples of southeastern Europe.

Outlines and bibliographies will be sent out upon request.

A bulletin on the modern books which deal with the subject "peace" is in preparation by the general department. All state chairmen are asked to urge local clubs to give at least one program during the year to consideration of this subject.

The following lines of thought are suggested:

"Is it not sufficient to desire peace from sentimental considerations; peace, to be lasting, must be based on a full realization of what war means; of the practical plans already devised whereby world-disarmament can be made feasible; of the steps already taken by our government and others in this direction, namely, courts of arbitration, treaties and international arrangements.

A public fully informed on these points would prove a tremendous arm of strength to our president when the time comes for the consideration of world-peace. And club women can create such an intelligent public.

The modern drama is becoming a most popular course of study, and Mrs. Smith asks books contributed or loaned that will help and encourage along this line.

Among the plays pertinent to the present situation and of high merit are Atherton Brownell's "The Unseen Empire," Charles Rann Kennedy's "The Terrible Meek," and Israel Zangwill's "War God."

Re-establishing the Library.

There is no better work than the distribution by the club authorities of wholesome reading matter.

We would urge that the clubs which do not need the traveling library contribute money that this department may be re-established and developed.

Georgia has a library commission law, but has no funds with which to put it into operation. The state federation of women's clubs should secure an increased appropriation for the work of this existing commission.

The state library laws should be studied by the club women to see whether they are adequate to provide the greatest number of books for the greatest number of people.

These laws should be examined with a view to the promotion of library extension from library centers to surrounding districts. Clubwomen should get in touch with their state libraries to see what material can be secured from these institutions.

Th state federation should establish a reference department to which clubwomen may write for reference books, study outlines and other reference material.

The commissioner of education at Washington reports that one-half of the people of the United States are still without library privileges.

Through the co-operation of the clubwomen the library privileges in Georgia can be felt over an increasingly wide area, and it is hoped that on February 22 each club will at least lend its aid and encouragemnt to Mrs. Smith in her efforts to re-establish and reinforce the traveling library. This would be a beautiful tribute of love and appreciation to Mrs. McCabe, who was for such a long time so closely identified with library extension work, and established the circulating department.

Eliminating Adult Illiteracy

A bill to require the commissioner of education to devise methods and promote plans for the elimination of adult illiteracy in the United States was introduced in the house of representatives by Mr. Abercrombie, and was referred to the committee on education. This bill reads as follows:

Be it enacted by the senate and house of representatives of the United States, in congress assembled. That the commissioner of education shall, under the direction of the secretary of the interior, investigate the methods that have been and are now used in any part of the United States and in foreign countries in teaching illiterate men and women to read and write, and in inducing and assisting those of meager education to extend their knowledge of subjects pertaining to their individual welfare and to their duties and responsibilities as citizens and members of society, and that he shall devise efficient and economic methods for teaching adult illiterates and men and women of meager education, both native and foreign born, in the United States, promote plans for the elimination of illiteracy and the extension of education among the adult population, and co-operate with state, county, district and municipal education officers and others in putting these plans into operation.

Section 2. That for the purpose of carrying out the provisions of this act there is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $15,000 for the fiscal year ending June 13, 1915; he sum of $22,500 for each succeeding fiscal year until June 13, 1920, and the sum of $17,500 for each fiscal year from July 1, 1920, to June 30, 1925: Provided, That no part of the money herein appropriated shall be used to pay teachers or school officers in any state or territory or in the District of Columbia for teaching or for conducting or supervising any school or schools: Provided further, That the commissioner of education shall not undertake to promote the teaching of adult illiterates and men and women of meager education in any state or territory of the United States or in the District of Columbia by co-operation or otherwise without the written invitation or consent of the board of education or the chief school officer in such state, territory or District of Columbia.

FEDERATION NOTES

Miss Edith D. Johnston, who has recently accepted the office of local secretary of the Girls' Scouts of Savannah, has taken charge of the office headquarters and is prepared to give new impetus to the girls and their interesting work.

The Woman's club, of Marshallville, met at the home of Mrs. Samuel H. Rumph Tuesday afternoon to discuss the advisability of the study of domestic science in the public schools. This is getting to be a question of such vital importance that the club women feel it is time to take some action. Mrs. F. J. Frederick, president; Miss Susie Martin, secretary.

Word comes from Mrs. Fitzpatrick of the joy and pride she feels over the news that the Huntington club, of Savannah, has united with the City Federation. This is an old, established club of earnest women and the federation will be greatly strengthened by its co-operation.

The Georgia federation and Mrs. Fitzpatrick are to be congratulated upon the selection of the new education chairman, Mrs. John M. Graham, of Marietta. Mrs. Graham is well known and admired throughout the state, and the work she has already accomplished along educational lines makes her success assured in this new field of endavor.

STATE CHAIRMAN TELLS OF LIBRARY EXTENSION

Head of Federation Committee Tells of the Needs of the Department.

Since my appointment as chairman of library extension I have had several appeals for books for the purpose of organizing study circles and assisting small libraries and I have been sorry not to be able to respond to all of these demands.

While Mrs. McCabe had charge of this work we had a splendid collection of books, but a large portion of them and also of those collected by later chairmen have been worn out by use, leaving us only a comparatively small number of really useful ones.

The histories, thirteen volumes of Abbott, ten volumes of "Six Thousand Years of History," by Earl DuMont; Wilson's History of the American People, and the "Sory of the Nations," make a fairly complete collection. Also there are a few religious books, Scott's Waverly novels, several very good helps to the study of Shakespeare and Browning, some on famous women and domestic science and health, and none on music or art.

Must Add to It.

If we are to revive this library and make of it what Mrs. McCabe desired, we must add to it, and also place it where it can be of greatest service.

Mrs. Bankston inaugurated a good plan of asking the clubs throughout the state to observe Liberty day, with an appropriate program, on February 22 or the club meeting falling closest to it.

I trust that this will be continued, and at these meetings an appeal will be made for some of the books asked for by your former chairman. For example, there are needed some good histories of music and art, nature study books, the drama, a practical course in domestic science, and, most of all, books for children.

The Best Way.

I have discovered in my rather limited experience in club work, the best way to get a result is to present it at the district metings, so I shall have printed some lists of the books on hand and also of those most needed and send them to each district president, asking her to speak of it at the district meeting and to try to get a response from each club in her district.

If our library is to be what its name suggests, a traveling library, let us allow it to travel where there is need and not keep it nailed up in boxes. To do this I must have the assistance and advice of the trained club workers.

My own club in LaGrange wishes to take a course in modern drama next year, and while we have very good college libraries, they are not accessible to all the members, and it would be the greatest possible help to have something really pertinent to the subject loaned to us. So it is with other clubs, especially those of the villages and country communities.

I shall appreciate any suggestions as to a method of re-establishing this library and of placing it to the best advantage.

MRS. CLIFFORD SMITH,
Chairman Library Extension Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs, 138 Broad street, LaGrange, Ga.

STUDY OF BIBLE LITERATURE BEING STRONGLY URGED

The chairman of the department of literature of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, Mrs. Frances Squire Potter, brilliantly outlined the study of the Bible as literature and the popular and general introduction of this study wherever possible.

"As the loss of the Bible from popular consciousness is a literary calamity which could be equaled only, if at all, by the loss of Shakespeare, the service to American letters which may be performed by a study of the Bible, as an English classic, as well as a world literature, is incalculable," she said.

To further the study of the Bible as a literary classic is the endeavor of the department of literature of the General Federation, and Georgia's chairman, Mrs. W. C. Spiker, is encouraging this work as much as possible.

Mrs. Spiker presented the importance of this special study to the executive board and received hearty indorsement.

A class in Bible study will be formed in the Atlanta Woman's club with Mrs. Spiker the leader.

Clubs throughout the state wishing to take up this line of study can receive suggestions and outlined programs from Mrs. Spiker.

The purpose of the course, as explained by the general chairman, Mrs. Clifton Whitney, is "to awaken a clearer comprehension of the literary element of the Bible, its epic, lyric and dramatic forms, as well as its sonnets, essays, historical and philosophical works.

This form of study will not only elucidate more fully the real meaning of the Scriptures, but will reveal the beauty and the variety of literary forms contained in this book of books, which will always stand as one of the world's great literatures.

The outline studies of Old and New Testament literature prepared by this department of the General Federation will be furnished for 10 cents a copy on application to Mrs. Clifton E. Whitney, 202 East Eleventh street, Little Rock, Ark.

These outlines are intended as guides for study to inspire original research work. The course may be extended over a period of two or more years.

This work is advised, not as a religious study, but purely as one of great literary value.

In honor of Mrs. Potter, whose greatest desire was that the Bible be restored to its rightful place in literature, this department of work is called the "Frances Squire Potter Memorial."

Club to Sell Candy.

The Woman's club, of Hartwell, held an important meeting Monday, February 15. At the business meeting plans were made to sell candy on opening days this spring.

Preliminary work was done for Clean-Up day. Also a committee was appointed to confer with the mayor and council concerning a domestic science course in our high school. The club promised to give a kitchen shower towards installing the plant.

The literary program was especially interesting—two carefully prepared papers being read by Mrs. J. H. Skelton and Miss Alice King. The subjects treated were "Home Life and Customs" and "The Women of France." A vocal quartet was enjoyed. The hostesses, Mrs. McAlpin Thornton and Mrs. B. C. Alford, served dainty refreshments during the social half hour.

Mrs. Parker Pays Splendid Tribute to Work of D. A. R.

At the state conference of the Georgia Daughters of the American Revolution which convened in Atlanta last week nothing was more noticeable than the harmony of all the gatherings, both business and social, and the spirit of oneness in a great work. The most potent factor in producing this atmosphere was, without doubt, the sweet face of our state regent, Mrs. T. C. Parker, who presided with so much dignity and graciousness.

Many words of love and words of helpfulness fell from Mrs. Parker's lips during these few days that cannot be reproduced, but on Wednesday evening of the conference, out of a desire that the society to which she is now giving her best efforts as state regent should receive fair judgment from all, she read before the large audience the following reply to the oft-repeated charge that the D. A. R. is, or attempts to be, a society of aristocrats, autocrats and plutocrats:

Reply to Charge.

It has been said of the Daughters of the American Revolution that we are a society of aristocrats, autocrats and plutocrats.

Our aristocracy is the aristocracy of patriotism. We became members of this organization through direct descent from ancestors who fought and served to establish the independence of this great American nation. If a legacy of nobility of purpose, fidelity to home and country, courage to stand for the right against all odds, if such a legacy bathed in the blood of heroes makes of us aristocrats, then we are proud to be called aristocrats.

What would happen if we were in reality a society of autocrats? Our "lords of creation" would long ago have searched the records of every town and hamlet in Georgia. These records would now be in new and substantial bindings, proof against the ravages of time. The graves of our revolutionary soldiers and the soldiers of 1812 would glisten in the sunshine, bringing to all a message of heroism from the heart of the past. Every old trail that wound its way through the heart of Georgia would echo with the fall of happy feet, and as in the days of Proserpina, so now would the flowers bloom along the wayside, the fields be clad in verdue, and all the land awaken from its long dream. If we were autocrats, in every city and town and village of our state would be heard the merry chime and many bells—school bells whose melody foretells our growth. There would be no need for child labor laws, for every child would be at school.

The great mother state would pass a bill for compulsory education. Men of the state, you may have looked this question straight in the face, but you have looked straight in the faces of the mothers of children and denied the necessity for the passage of this bill. We will to have this bill passed. We will to build a school in south Georgia where the children of our state, descendants of our immortal ancestors, can at small cost be taught along industrial lines, where hand in hand with a wealth of knowledge will grow a desire to do, to be of use in the world. We will to plant in the heart of our children good seed that in maturity will bring to our America home-loving, industrious, noble citizens, who, when they in turn shall go forth to sow, will not scatter broadcast over the land a harvest of dragons' teeth that leave in their path nothing but ruin and desolation; whose fairy palaces and seeming wealth like withered mummies crumble before the breath of purity. We would bring to you men and women. If the good will to do, to help to bring every good and perfect gift and lay it at the feet of our mother state, if this fervent desire makes of us autocrats, then are we indeed autocrats.

Are We Plutocrats?

My Daughters, are we plutocrats? Your regent, claiming descent from France, England, Scotland and Ireland, has enough of the combined wit of the nations to feel inclined to treat this as a joke, but, as the charge was made in all seriousness, and demands serious consideration, we will so consider it. Every state is a law unto herself in her elections as to choice of officers. Every chapter is a law unto itself as to whom it admits to membership. I will speak only for the state of Georgia. Our past records do not show all of our regents to have been women of wealth, and in no instance were these women chosen because of their wealth. This same truth applies to all of our state officers. As to membership in chapters, your regent has never heard of an applicant being denied admission because of small means.

On the other hand, it is not unusual to deny this privilege to women of wealth who have proven to be disturbing elements in their localities. If we were a wealthy organization and could entertain our chapter members with a rotary dinner once a week, give occasional banquets to create and maintain enthusiasm, do you think we would spend our time pleading for help to carry out our plans? To most of us a dollar is as big as a cart wheel. Not many of our chapters can call on their members for contributions to the many causes for which we work.

It is an almost invariable rule that the chapters that show the largest contributions in proportion to membership are the chapters that work and make the money and undoubtedly they have the greatest amount of enthusiasm. As for your state officers, it does require more money to hold office than it does to be a private in the ranks. Does that mean that necessarily the money for expenses must come out of your income, or your husband's pocketbook? That is as you regard it.

Worth Working For.

To your regent's view, an office that is worth holding is worth working for with the best that there is in you. If you have an office of trust, and everything that you have is swept away, would you be a worthy descendant of your heroic ancestor if you quietly sat down, folded your hands and capitulated in the battle of daily living? No; then is the time to put on all your armor, to lift your good right arm and go to work. Curtail expenses in your home in every possible way, do your own work, sell your old clothes, sell your husband's best hat—do anything but give up. The needs of your state are as great and greater now than they were before the crash came to many of our citizens. We will not hug our troubles closer, make companions of our woes as did Hecate in her dark cave, but with the spirit of Atlanta we will cast in our lot with the strong-hearted, and with good will and determined spirit go forth in quest of the golden fleece.

Daughters of the American Revolution, you are far from being plutocrats, but you are strong-hearted and faithful. I beg you study well the conditions, realize fully the ability of our state to supply all our needs, and let us pull together with hearty good will. On the shores of our Savannah, along the banks of our Chattahoochee, on the sun-kissed hills of Habersham, down through the marshes of Glynn, and over the old red hills of Georgia, we will wend our way with a song of thanksgiving in our hearts for the beauty, the fertility and the wonderful resources of our glorious state.

(MRS. T. C.) SUSIE DERRY PARKER.

Joseph Habersham Chapter Celebrates 15th Birthday

The regular monthly meeting of the Joseph Habersham chapter, D. A. R., of Atlanta, on the 15th of February, at the University club, was one of especial importannce and unusual interest.

Mrs. W. D. White, Mrs. Henry L. Collier and Mrs. J. T. Holleman, our delegates to the seventeenth annual state conference, recently held in Atlanta, and at which the Joseph Habersham chapter was hostess, gave most interesting reports of the business of the conference and of the social entertainments tendered the delegates and distinguished visitors. The coresponding secretary read a number of letters from state officers, from the president of the Uncle Remus Memorial association and from officers of other patriotic organizations congratulating our regent, Mrs. John A. Perdue, our honorary regent, Mrs. William Lawson Peel, and the chapter on the delightful and harmonious manner in which the conference was conducted.

The delegates to the national convention at Washington were elected and are Mrs. William Lawson Peel, Mrs. W. D. White, Mrs. G. L. Pratt. Alternates, Mrs. W. W. Austell, Miss Nina Hornady, Mrs. J. R. Hardin, Miss Alice May Massengale, Mrs. J. W. McArthur, Mrs. W. F. Dykes, Miss Helen Prescott, Mrs. Harvie Jordan, Mrs. Oscar T. Gamble and Mrs. James T. Harwell.

Mrs. J. W. McArthur, chairman of the scholarship committee, by whose untiring efforts the Joseph Habersham chapter has been enabled to obtain so many valuable scholarships, reported three more to be added to the number. One of four years at the Marist college, a course at the Southern Shorthand and Business university and one to Thornwell school at Clinton, S. C., given by Mr. S. W. Carson.

At the conclusion of the business session Mrs. Perdue, our regent, graciously presented the cake, with its fifteen candles and its Georgia flag, which she had prepared in honor of our birthday. Miss Nina Hornady spoke most interestingly of the organization of the Joseph Habersham chapter through the efforts of Mrs. Peel and of the eight chapters in the state which have sprung from this chapter. Also of the important results which the Joseph Habersham has achieved by hard and unremitting work. One of these is the establishing of Georgia day, the idea of which originated with Miss Hornaday and by whose effective work, aided by Mrs. William Lawson Peel, Georgia day was adopted and is now universally celebrated in the state.

At the conclusion of Miss Hornady's talk Mrs. Perdue graciously presided at the cutting of the delicious cake and received the congratulations of the chapter on the success of the recent conference which was so largely due to the splendid ability and charming personality of our regent.

William Marsh Chapter.

One of the most delightful affairs ever given by William Marsh chapter, D. A. R., of Lafayette, was given Friday afternoon at the lovely home of Mrs. J. E. Patten in honor of Mrs. Frank Kirby, a recent bride. The home was beautifully decorated for the occasion. In the interesting games prizes were won by Mrs. W. H. Steele, Jr., and Mrs. John Shaw. Mrs. Kirby received many pretty and useful gifts, each gift accompanied with verses of good wishes. In the dining room very attractive decorations were used, carrying out the Valentine idea and also D. A. R. colors. The flowers in conservatory made a beautiful background for the prettily appointed table. The regent, Miss Hackney, poured coffee and delicious menu was served by Miss Martha and Mrs. Napier.

Marietta Civic League.

Belgian Flag day was January 2, or in Marietta the Civic league committee, with Mrs. John M. Graham as chairman, had charge of the plans and $23.80 was the result of the day's campaign. This sum was expended for condensed milk—the orders being sent through three of the Marietta grocery firms. The Civic league gave $5 worth of the well-known Radium hose, which are made in Marietta, and the company supplemented the order by a generous donation, doubled the order.

From January 26-30 the league had a beautiful and interesting exhibit of specimens of American pottery, sent out by the general federation art committee. A special invitation was extended to the school children and many of them came to see the collection of American work. There was no admission fee and hot chocolate, tea, sandwiches and home-made candy were on sale to defray expenses.

We have sent $10 to Tallulah Falls school, $5 to Student Aid and have had a new fence built for the library.

U. D. C. Chapter Reports

The J. D. Frederick chapter, Marshallville, held the February meeting with Miss Taylor and Mrs. Furlow Taylor Brown.

The program compiled from the state program was arranged by Miss Hargrove. The papers on prominent southerners, were most interesting. Especially Mrs. J. O. Booton's paper on Edgar Allan Poe. Miss Taylor and Mrs. Brown, assisted by Mesdames T. and C. Taylor, served tea with delicious accompaniments.

The J. D. Frederick chapter, under the inspiring leadership of Mrs. G. A. Ware, is in a most flourishing condition and has new members added monthly. The March meeting will be held with Mrs. H. A. Lee and Mrs. Duff B. Goodwin, the latter honorary president of the chapter.

Buena Vista.

On Friday afternoon Mrs. Madge Mershon Clements entertained the U. D. C.'s, who had as their guests on this occasion the D. A. R.'s. The living room and dining room were opened to the guests and were tastefully decorated with Georgia and U. D. C. flags.

The program, which was so well arranged by the committee in charge, was well rendered and made us all feel a keener sense of pride for dear old Georgia, the Empire State of the South. At the close of the program Mrs. Clements served an elaborate salad course which consisted entirely of Georgia products, which received flattering comments from all present.

And last, but not least, Miss Ruth Carr, one of the U. D. C.'s, and a friend, Miss Madge Hicks, from Savannah, sold flags on the streets and a neat little sum was realized. A rising vote of thanks was given Misses Carr and Hicks, and to Mrs. Clements for her hospitality on this occasion.

Decatur.

Friday, February 11, 1915, Mrs. H. W. Cantrell, the president, presided over a very instructive and delightful meeting of the Agnes Lee chapter, U. D. C., at the home of Mrs. A. L. Brooks on College street, Decatur, the joint hostesses being Mrs. P. H. Jeter, Mrs. Charles Bothwell and Mrs. E. A. Stead.

The report of the finance committee of the chapter house fund that they had loaned $500 for six months at 8 per cent interest and had cleared $180 from the sale of the "home" calendars was very enthusiastically received.

The chapter instructed the corresponding secretary to write our representatives and senators to support the bill introduced by Senator Work, of California, for federal relief for state confederate homes, after it had been presented by the president and our state president, Mrs. Walter B. Lamar, who was present, had made a short talk explaining the necessity of this being done at once.

The chapter was very fortunate in having four distinguished guests present, the state president, Mrs. Walter B. Lamar, who was introduced and who made a very charming and interesting address on the different phases of the U. D. C. work both in the state and the general work; Mrs. H. M. Franklin, first vice president; Mrs. Howard McCall, registrar, and Mrs. William McCarthy, president of the Atlanta chapter, were introduced and each responded with a graceful talk.

The chapter was favored by several selections by the Agnes Scott Glee club, "Maryland, My Maryland," by Mrs. Ruth Pattillo, and a reading, "When Honey Was Lost." After adjournment a delicious salad course was served, where the chapter had the pleasure of meeting their distinguished guests.

MRS. W. H. S. HAMILTON.

Tifton.

The Charlotte Carson chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy, met at the home of Mrs. George Julian, Thursday, at the usual hour, Mrs. L. S. Alfriend having arranged the program for the afternoon.

The meeting opened with prayer by Mrs. Mason, after which "Maryland, My Maryland," was sung. A very sweet solo, "Temple Bells," was rendered by Miss Blanche Britt, accompanied on the piano by Miss Leila Julian. A reading, "Kindness," was given by Mrs. Oren Gatchell. The meeting was turned over to Mrs. Briggs Carson, president. Reports of committees were heard.

A committee composed of Mrs. L. S. Alfriend, Mrs. George Baker and Mrs. Joseph Kent was then appointed to appear before the town and country schools and urge the pupils to enter into the essay contest for the U. D. C. medal given by the Helen Plane educational fund. An additional prize of $2.50 will be awarded for the best essay in Tift county by the local chapter.

Plans were discussed for Memorial day exercises, and a committee composed of Mrs. Britt, Mrs. Julian and Mrs. Gatchell was appointed to make arrangements.

There being no further business, the meeting adjourned to meet next month with Mrs. George Baker.

After the meeting the members were invited into the dining room, where delicious refreshments were served.

Albany.

The Albany chapter, U. D. C., met with Mrs. W. E. Rowsey, Thursday afternoon, January 28. This was the second meeting of the new year, the first, which was also held at the home of Mrs. Rowsey, being a celebration of Lee's birthday. On this occasion delightful music was rendered by Mrs. G. W. Spinks and Miss Willie Walters, while splendid papers, entitled "Lee, the Soldier," and "Lee at Arlington," were read by Mesdames W. D. Sandwich and W. F. McClellan. Delicious refreshments were served.

The meeting of January 28 was an important one. Mrs. W. M. Legg, who was the chapter's delegate to the recent state U. D. C. convention, gave an interesting report.

Owing to the resignation of Mrs. W. E. Rowsey, who has served the chapter so long and faithfully as president, a new president was elected, Mrs. W. M. Legg being the unanimous choice of the chapter. Mrs. Legg, though a resident of Albany but a few years, has made many friends, being prominently identified with church, club, philanthropic and patriotic organzations.

Mrs. Rowsey's splendid services in behalf of the chapter and Camp William Slaughter, U. C. V., received recognition at this meeting, when she was given a rising vote of thanks and assurances of the love and esteem of every Daughter.

Committees were appointed to arrange for Memorial day exercises.

Mrs. C. E. Fryer and Miss Georgia Fryer will entertain the next meeting at the home of Mrs. Fryer on Commerce street.

FALSEHOOD ABOUT JEFFERSON DAVIS WARMLY RESENTED

Whereas, a certain Josiah Millard is spoken of recently in a special from Baltimore as "foreman of a jury that convicted Jefferson Davis of treason; and

Whereas, The time fixed for trial of Mr. Davis, in May, 1867, having arrived, and the government not being ready with its case, Mr. Davis was released on bond furnished by Horace Greely, Cornelius Vanderbilt and many others, north and south; and,

Whereas, the government fearing to test the right of secession in the greatest court of the world, the chief justice holding that Mr. Davis was not guilty of treason, and Justice Underwood holding that he was, the case was never called, and Mr. Davis died a prisoner on bail; therefore, be it

Resolved, we the members of the Sidney Lanier chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy, do hereby protest against such violation of truth as the statement concerning Josiah Millard, of Maryland, above referred to.

Second, that the activities of 100,000 Daughters of the Confederacy, with chapters in thirty-four states of the union, be and are hereby invoked to forever throttle this hydra-headed falsehood.

Third, that the press of the country in the interest of fair play and truth, shall be urged to aid in establishing these truths, as well as the fact that Mr. Davis sought repeatedly to secure trial, and the services of distinguished lawyers from every part of the country were proffered him.

That "out of the fire and tempest and the baptism of blood, Mr. Davis came forth with an unblemished reputation."

And that, in the language of Mr. Davis, concerning the questions at issue in the war between the states, "When time shall have softened passion and prejudice . . . then justice holding evenly her scales, much of past praise and censure shall change places."

Respectfully submitted,
DOROTHY BLOUNT LAMAR.

STATE PRESIDENT COMPLIMENTED BY TRIBUNE-HERALD

Mrs. Fitzpatrick visited Rome last week and addressed the executive board of the Woman's club. Of her address The Tribune-Herald says:

No one could have heard Mrs. Fitzpatrick speak of the Georgia Training School for Girls without a high respect for the organization over which she presides.

This state school was created through the work of the Georgia club women in getting a bill through the legislature appropriating $20,000. It was club women who, through kindness and courtesy, named the institution "The Georgia Training School for Girls," but the whole sad story is told when it is stated that the school authorities can accept only those who come to them from the courts.

Mrs. Fitzpatrick is a member of the board of managers, and told, with feeling, many sad incidents connected with the entrance of the forsaken ones. And her voice thrilled with satisfaction when she stated that 50 per cent of the girls became honest, honorable workers, who, without their residence in the school, would have fallen by the wayside, helpless and alone.

Juvenile Courts Indorsed.

The visitor then spoke in glowing terms of the schools of Rome, her pride in the Rome Woman's club and mentioned as one of the pleasures of her visit learning from The Tribune-Herald that the last grand jury had recommended the instituting of a juvenile court and a district health board.

Mrs. Fitzpatrick said good health, through sanitary living and juvenile court were equally as valuable to prevent crime as reformatories and training schools were to cure crime, to restore to true life the victims of poor moral health and unfortunate environments.

State Federation Inaugurates Agricultural Department.

Of the state executive board the speaker related that two new departments had been inaugurated. That the committee of which Mrs. Nellie Peters Black, of Atlanta, is chairman will co-operate with the State College of Agriculture and the State Chamber of Commerce in holding rallies in every district of the state.

Another committee will work to interest teachers in forming humane departments in every school of the state.

Your Fiancee Should Have a Solitaire Diamond Engagement Ring

Diamond engagement rings are also quite popular in twin, triplet and cluster settings, and in combination with other precious stones.

It is always correct to give a diamond as an engagement gift. This custom never changes. Diamonds have been used for this purpose since time immemorial.

A diamond is the supreme symbol of value. They constantly enhance in value.

WARSHIPS RAIN SHELLS ON DARDANELLES FORTS AND DO GREAT DAMAGE

British Admiralty Reports Forts on European Side Silenced—Greek Accounts Report Asiatic Forts Also Silenced.

ALLIES ARE RESOLVED TO FORCE DARDANELLES

This Will Bring Turkey to Knees and Also Release the Great Russian Wheat Crop—Many British and French Warships Took Part in Bombardment.

London, February 20.—The first serious attack by the British and French Mediterranean fleets, assisted by aeroplanes and seaplanes, on the Dardanelles forts, which commenced yesterday and continued today, has met with considerable success, according to the British official accounts and unofficial accounts received at Athens from the Island of Tenedos, at the entrance to the straits.

The Turkish official report, however, stated that no damage had been done to the forts, and that the casualties of the defenders consisted of one killed and one wounded, but that three of the warships were damaged by shots from the forts.

British reports said that the forts on the European side of the straits were silenced yesterday and that only one of the forts on the Asiatic side was still firing yesterday morning, while none of the warships had been damaged. The Greek accounts said that the Asiatic forts were silenced today, but no official report of this bombardment has been issued by the admiralty as yet.

Many Ships Engaged Forts.

The bombardment must have been one of the most serious ever undertaken, in the opinion of naval experts, for no less than eight battleships and armored cruisers took part, these warships having a total of thirty 12-inch and six 10-inch guns which outranged the guns of the forts.

Early Friday morning this fleet, including the British battle cruiser Inflexible, which had just returned from the Falkland islands where, with other ships, she took part in the battle in which Admiral Count von Spee's German squadron was destroyed, opened a long-range bombardment on the forts at Cape Helles and at Kum Kalesi, at the entrance to the straits. When these forts had been damaged the battle ship force closed in and engaged the forts with their 6, 7 and 9-inch guns which, it is believed, must have poured an enormous rain of shells on the Turkish positions.

Besides desiring to bring Turkey to her knees, the allies, in their attempt to force the Dardanelles, aim at an early release of the large stock of wheat which is locked up in Russian warehouses, and which the allies wish to get out, both to relieve the markets and to provide Russia with necessary credit to pay for war material bought abroad.

Official Story of Bombardment.

The text of the admiralty's announcement follows:

"Yesterday morning at 8 o'clock a British fleet of battleships and battle cruisers, accompanied by flotillas and aided by a strong French squadron, the whole under the command of Vice Admiral Carden, began an attack upon the forts at the entrance of the Dardanelles.

"The forts at Cape Helles and Kum Kalesi were bombarded with a deliberate, long-range fire. Considerable effect was produced on two of the forts. The others were frequently hit, but being open earthworks, it was difficult to estimate the damage. The forts, being outranged, were unable to reply to our fire.

"At 2:45 o'clock in the afternoon a portion of the battleship force was ordered to close in and engage the forts at closer range with their secondary armament.

"The forts on both sides of the entrance then opened fire and were engaged at moderate ranges by the Vengeance, Cornwallis, Triumph, Suffron and Bouvet, supported by the Inflexible and the Agamemnon at long range.

"The forts on the European side were apparently silenced. One fort on the Asiatic side was still firing when the operations were suspended owing to the failing light. No ships of the allied fleet were hit.

"The action was renewed this morning after an aerial reconnaissance by British aeroplanes. The ship Ark Royal is in attendance with a number of sea planes and aeroplanes of the naval wing."

The Turkish Version.

Amsterdam, February 21.—(Via London.)—A dispatch from Constantinople gives this official Turkish statement:

"Early Saturday morning British and French ships renewed their bombardment of the outer forts of the Dardanelles, firing 400 shots without much success. One soldier was slightly wounded by a fragment of stone."

"Eight armored Anglo-French ships bombarded the outer forts of the Dardanelles for seven hours without silencing them. The enemy fired shots from guns of great caliber.

Another version of the Turkish report, received here from Constantinople, says that on the Turkish side one man was killed and another slightly injured.

Forts Reported Destroyed.

Athens, February 20.—(Via London.) It is reported here the Anglo-French fleet destroyed Turkish forts on the Asiatic side of the Dardanelles during the bombardment this morning. The forts on the European side subsequently were attacked.

A powder magazine on the Asiatic side of the Dardanelles exploded during the bombardment by the allied fleet. The forts replied in a lively manner to the fire of the warships, but without success.

HOWELL WANTED BY ATLANTA FIRMS

Man Said to Have Been Oliver's Partner Accused of Passing Bad Checks.

A. M. Howell, of Leesburg, who is said to have been connected with A. D. Oliver, the bank president recently killed at Leesburg, Ga., was arrested Friday near his home and will be brought to Atlanta, according to a telegram from Deputy Sheriff Richardson, to face the charge of passing bad checks on several local firms amounting to $800.

According to Chief Lanford, who was instrumental in bringing about the discovery of Howell in his retreat near Leesburg, he came to Atlanta early in February. On that occasion he is said to have passed valueless checks on the Kimball house, the Winecoff hotel, the Aragon, the M. & M. club and other firms. Since that time the detectives have been searching for his whereabouts.

Howell is said to have been a man of prominence in his community and was school commissioner for a number of years.

According to the statement of police, investigation shows that Howell was associated with Oliver, who was recently killed while stepping from his bank door at Leesburg. They are also claims that the two men burned a large amount of bank stock in their control, while guests of the Brown house at Macon, February 17.

PLOT TO GET $500,000 FOILED BY DETECTIVES

New York, February 20.—A daring attempt late today at robbery of a Broadway jewelry store show window containing diamonds and other gems estimated to be worth $500,000 was foiled by detectives who had been trailing four men whose actions they considered suspicious. The plate window on a corner in the theatrical district, which crowds were passing at the time, had been smashed with a heavy stone and one man was reaching through the shattered pane for a tray of diamonds when he was seized by the detectives. Another of the alleged participants was arrested half a block down Broadway, but the other two escaped.

Bernhardt Is Willing to Lose Leg So That She May Return to Work

MME. SARAH BERNHARDT.

Paris, February 20.—Maurice Barres, who is conducting a campaign to aid war cripples, has received this telegram from Sarah Bernhardt:

"Your last article, an appeal for the invalids of the war, touched me deeply, perhaps because I am going to have my leg cut off Sunday and thus join the great army of the mutilated. I could have kept my leg if I had been willing to live stretched on a sofa. The surgeons asked me to give them five months, but I refused. Why? Because longing for the theater filled me. I would rather be mutilated than powerless.

"Work is my life. I want to get to work again, thus recovering my gayety, and I hope to use again all that force of art which keeps me up and will keep me up until I pass into the world beyond the grave. Therefore, I wish to tell you, my son, that I have four positions for your invalids in our theater. Forgive me for speaking so much about myself, but you will understand why I have done so. Think of me on Sunday morning."

To Lose Leg Monday.

Bordeaux, France, February 20.—(Via Paris.)—The surgeons at the hospital of St. Augustin of Arcachon probably will amputate the right leg of Sarah Bernhardt Monday. She is described as cheerful in the belief that the operation will free her of the sufferings caused by the affection of her knee.

Mme. Bernhardt is in her 70th year. She was born in Paris October 23, 1845.

TUGS SENT TO HELP DISABLED STEAMER

Norfolk, Va., February 20.—Tugs started out from Norfolk and New York almost simultaneously tonight to assist the steamer Santa Marta, of the Tropical Fruit company, which is anchored off Cape Hatteras minus her rudder. The coast guard cutter Onondaga has also gone to the assistance of the steamer, and is believed to be standing by the vessel.

The tug Rescue sailed from this port tonight to render assistance to the Santa Marta, and the I. J. Merritt sailed from New York on the same mission.

A wireless message from the Onondaga this afternoon stated that there was a northeast gale and high seas off Hatteras, and that she was within 10 miles of the disabled ship. The Onondaga, which was reported to have reached the steamer last night, apparently was forced to hove to on account of the storm. It was said at the navy yard tonight that nothing further had been heard from the Onondaga, but that she is believed to be standing by the Santa Marta.

The wrecking tugs now en route to assist the steamer will tow her to Newport News or New York.

THIEVES SECURE $115, LEAVING VICTIM $80

In a fight with two negro thugs at the entrance of an alley on Luckie street late Saturday night, J. D. Watson, of Kennasaw, Ga., an engineer on the N. C. & St. L., was robbed of $115 and badly beaten and bruised.

When calling at police headquarters to complain of his treatment Watson stated that he had in his possession the sum of $195. While passing the alley he was engaged in a short conversation by two negroes who came out upon him. Without warning they attacked him. One negro snatched a roll of bills from his pocket in the fracas and disappeared. Watson tried to find some consolation in the exhibition of an eighty dollar roll which had escaped the greed of the thugs.

MAID FINDS LOVE WHERE SHE SOUGHT FAME AS ACTRESS

"I shall leave Atlanta town Sunday morning, you bet, for Pensacola," said pretty Bobbie Williams, as she shook her Castle cut yellow hair and smiled with contentment in the private room of Matron Bohnefeld, at the police station.

Miss Bobbie is but 15 years old and a prepossessing blond. As she hesitatingly unfolded the facts, it developed that there was a parent-in-law at her home, 96 Polling street, Pensacola, who cast a shadow across the sunshine of her days. Miss Bobbie wished to become an actress.

But the brief career as an actress does not find her greatest enthusiasm today. There is a certain young man in Atlanta, who has arranged many things for the future of this girl. His name? Miss Williams will not tell this, however.

In the meantime the matron has taken an interest in the little girl. Through her influence a ticket has been procured for Bobbie. She expects to return to her home in Florida and wait until June. When she returns at that time she promises to be more willing to tell her present secret.

Victory Thursday Will Mean Much to Whitney or Abel

The ladder of fame and fortune in southern pugilism is a pretty steep little affair, and when a couple of lads like Frank Whitney and Jake Abel arrive at the same round at the same time and begin trying to step over each other, somebody is due to take a tumble.

That is what the Atlanta fight fans are looking for next Thursday night at the Bijou theater, when Whitney and the Chattanooga boxer mix it in the main event to see which shall continue on the climb to meet Beecher, Mandot, Dundee and the rest of the top-notchers, and which shall have to start over again in the campaign for the big money.

The bout, aside from being a "grudge" affair personally, is tremendously important to both the boys.

They met here about two years ago and their encounter resulted in a fine little draw—the kind that didn't suit either of them.

Since then, both Whitney and Abel, have been after Sam Saul to be matched against one of the three or four top-class men in the game for an Atlanta fight.

Now, Mike has fixed up the present bout as a sort of elimination contest. The winner will get a whack at one of the Beecher, Mandot, Dundee combination; and the loser will have to stage a mighty nifty come-back stunt to continue at such speed on his way to fame and fortune.

Neither boy is taking any chances. Up in Chattanooga Jack White and Terry Nelson, who have fought Whitney, are working with Abel and coaching him in Frank's tactics, and at the Metropolitan club here Whitney is conditioning himself with the utmost care and pains.

There can be no fuss about the weight this time, as the bout is at catch weights. As to the verdict, that will be handed down by the three Atlanta sporting editors, with Mike Saul simply acting as the fourth man in the ring to keep things moving in a free and slashing style—which things are certain to do, anyway.

Tickets are on sale at the Rex Chess' place, and the Elkin drug store at Five Points, and the advance demand indicates a fine house for Thursday night.

HARLEY-DAVIDSON MOTORS SOLD TO CITY OF ATLANTA

The city of Atlanta has purchased from the Harley-Davidson Motor company's southern branch, Atlanta, Ga., three 1915 Harley-Davidson twin 11-horse power machines to be used in the water department under the supervision of their general manager, Zode Smith. These machines will be put into service at once. This is the first lot of a number of machines that the city intends to buy.

This is quite a compliment to the Harley-Davidson motorcycles, but it is a fact that they are being used by quite a number of city departments throughout the country, and in Atlanta the commercial value of the Harley-Davidson is recognized the efficiency maker.

BALENTI SOLD.

Indian Shortstop Goes to San Antonio Club.

Chattanooga, Tenn., February 20.—(Special.)—Manager McCormick tonight announced the sale of Infielder Mike Balenti to the San Antonio club of the Texas league. Balenti refused to accept a cut in salary. All clubs in the league waived on him and the deal was arranged.

Navy Wrestlers Win.

Annapolis, Md., February 20.—Navy's wrestlers made a clean sweep against the University of Pennsylvania here tonight. The Middies won every bout, and on a basis of five points for a fall and four for a decision on aggressiveness, captured the meet by the score of 32 to nothing.

FIRST BASEBALL DEATH OF YEAR ON SATURDAY

St. Louis, February 20.—Henry Gosz was struck in the side by a pitched ball during an amateur baseball game here today and died a minute later. It was said to be the first fatal baseball accident of the year.

Jersey City Club May Be Moved to National Capital This Season

New York, February 20.—Opposition on the part of the New York Nationals to his placing an international league team in the Bronx has caused President Barrow to turn toward Washington as a possible location for his Jersey City franchise.

The old grounds of the Senators are available, and it is said that no objection would be made to a transfer of the Jersey City team there, as the move would block any possible design the Federals might have upon the capital.

The Washington idea, however, has not replaced Barrow's first plan of locating in the Bronx and he still expresses the hope that the National league will make way for minor league baseball in New York city.

Princeton Defeats Michigan.

Ann Arbor, Mich., February 20.—Princeton won over Michigan in a two-mile relay race here tonight with time of eight minutes 8 2-5 seconds. The Princeton runners were Moore, Abha, McKenzie, captain, and Hayes and the Michigan contestants were Carroll, Fox, Donnelly and Ufer.

Ed Miller, of Browns, Whom Nashville Bought, Signs With Colonels

Louisville, Ky., February 20.—Edwin Miller, of the St. Louis Americans, has signed to play second base for the Louisville American association team. Manager Hayden will arrive in Louisville Monday preparatory to taking the team to the training camp at Lakeland, Fla., March 2.

This is the same Miller that was reported to have been signed by the Nashville Vols, as well as the Crackers being after him.

LOCAL PREP LEAGUE TO END THE SEASON

Championship Will Be Decided by the Outcome of Games Tuesday.

Club Standing.

TEAM—	Won.	Lost.	P. C.
Marist	9	0	1.000
Boys' High	8	1	.889
Tech High	4	6	.400
G. M. A.	3	6	.333
Donald Fraser	3	6	.333
Peacock	1	8	.111

With the Boys' High-Marist game next Tuesday afternoon on the Wesley court, which will decide the championship of the league, the 1915 season of the local prep league will come to a very successful close.

The game Tuesday afternoon will be one of the most strenuous struggles two prep teams have ever staged, and as they are about as evenly matched as it is possible for two prep teams to be, there is no possible foretelling the winner.

The league has known a very successful season this year, and some of the hardest fought games ever staged between two rival prep teams have been staged.

Tuesday afternoon Peacock and G. M. A. also tie up in their final game. Peacock is hopelessly last, but G. M. A. has a chance to tie with Tech High for third place, and this game also promises to be a hummer from the start.

Donald Fraser and Marist have a postponed game to play after the season ends. Provided Marist wins Tuesday's struggle, this game will not be necessary, as they would still lead the league in the event of losing to D. F. S., but if they should lose, and defeat Donald Fraser, they will then be tied with Boys' High for the lead, necessitating a post-season game to decide the championship.

By Louise Dooly

A NOTEWORTHY feature of the coming engagement of the Metropolitan Grand Opera company will be the appearance in Atlanta of several of the leading singers of the company who have never before been heard here. Distinguished among these are Melanie Kurt, Giovanni Martinelli and Luca Botta, while Mabel Garrison, Elizabeth Schumann and Paul Althouse, in roles of less importance, have also been singled out for emphatic praise in New York.

*****

MELANIE KURT.

Mme. Melanie Kurt was imported from Germany to sing roles which were formerly assigned to the celebrated Olive Fremstadt, and she made her debut in New York three weeks ago as "Isolde."

Her work in this great part was received with acclaim, and the roles she has since presented have increased her vogue with metropolitan audiences.

She is a Viennese, and, strange to say, was educated to be a pianist, taking the Liszt prize when she graduated from the Vienna conservatory, and afterwards continuing her study with Leschetizky.

It was on such a foundation of musical knowledge that she has built her art as a singer, and her success has been sensational in the greatest of opera roles.

A TYPICAL TRIBUTE.

"Before the first act was finished Mme. Kurt had disclosed qualifications sufficient to establish herself in the admiration of the audience as an artist of high and in some respects the highest rank.

"In looking for first New York appearance in a part so arduous as that of Isolde, and one in which she has had so many illustrious predecessors here, Mme. Kurt courted some exacting comparisons, in which she held her own as not many today could do. Her voice is her greatest possession as an interpreter of the lyric drama. It is a veritable soprano of a truly beautiful quality of great power, ranging upward to a point where she took the highest notes of the part with certainty, without effort, without trepidation. Her intonation is of unusual accuracy. One of the delightful features of her art as she disclosed it in the first evening was the clearness of her diction and the excellence of her declamation. Here she has the subtle skill to use with a true cantabile style of singing and with a fine feeling for the molding of the phrase and a command of dramatic accent and poignant expression. Her singing, in short, is that of a true artist, endowed not only with rare qualities of voice, but with some of the finer fruits of study, and especially with intelligence.

"Mme. Kurt presented a regal and imposing figure as the Irish princess; a force of pathetic traits; her movements and gestures had distinction and impressiveness.

"It was not strange that Mme. Kurt made an immediate success and that she was recognized, evidently, as an important acquisition to the forces of the Metropolitan opera house. After the first act she was recalled with much enthusiasm and persistence, and again after the second act. She was left, in fact, in no doubt as to the admiration evidently aroused by her performance in all portions of the audience."

She will be heard in "Huguenots" and "Magic Flute."

*****

A NEW TENOR.

Giovanni Martinelli is in his second season now with the Metropolitan, and it is generally conceded that no greater tenor has been "discovered" since the debut of Caruso in New York.

He does equally brilliant work in the florid operas, which call upon all the pyrotechnical resources of which he is a master and in the romantic roles. He will be heard in "Huguenots" and "Sans-Gene."

LEICA BOTTA.

The standing of Signor Luca Botta with the Metropolitan Opera company may be assumed from the fact that he will sing the role of "Avito" in "The Love of Three Kings," a part which is so important, vocally and artistically, that the company last year, with all its superb force, yet deemed it expedient to borrow from the Boston Opera company the service of Ferrari-Fontana for that role, the latter being the creator of the part of "Avito" in this country.

Since that time the Metropolitan company has added Signor Botta to its list of stars, and his work may be anticipated as a feature of the week. He will sing also in "Rigoletto."

*****

(In German.)

"Die Zauberflote" (Magic Flute), by Mozart, is the opera the Metropolitan Grand Opera company will present in Atlanta for Saturday matinee, May 1, and to a large element of opera-goers this event will be the most important of the engagement.

The music is so beautiful and so consistent that it nullifies the absurdity of the libretto, which requires a key to give it any excuse for being, this key explaining, also, how Mozart could combine, with the very impossible libretto, music as rich in content as The Magic Flute, the high-water mark of his genius.

*****

KEY TO THE STORY.

The story, which is appended, is a strange medley, allegorical in character, and intended, most likely, to typify the struggle which engaged the Catholic chuch and Free Masonry at the time the libretto was written. "Hashed" and "rehashed" on account of circumstances unavoidable at the time, it would never, of itself, convey a suggestion so intelligent, but the explanation is that of the historians.

Confused and full of inexplicable situations as is the libretto, however, opera-goers can afford to forgive and forget it, since Mozart made it the basis for his most glorious music.

The artistic history of Mozart is one of constant broadening and progress. His "Magic Flute" was the last thing he did, except his great "Requiem Mass," which he was working on at the same time and finished last, and although he was in failing health, these final works mark the height of his achievement.

He is the "musician for musicians," and they must all, whatever their methods or tendencies, go back to him for certain ideals, notably for obtaining the best and most powerful results in music by the simplest means and with the greatest apparent ease.

MUSICIAN FOR MUSICIANS.

Musicians worship at his shrine, because he had at his command, as no one else has had, the relations of tone-material, form, emotion, and character and their ideal expression through one another.

"Who, like Mozart, has traversed the immense scale of human passions?" said Gounod, whose own work is characterized by the same melodic inspiration which is one of the triumphs of the art of Mozart.

"Who has touched their far-distant limits with such unswerving accuracy, equally proof against the ineptitudes of false grace and the brutalities of lying violence? O, divine Mozart—bounteous nature has given thee every gift: grace and strength, fullness and sobriety, bright spontaneity and burning tenderness, all in that perfect balance which makes up the irresistible power of thy charm, and which makes of thee the musician of musicians, greater than the greatest, the only one of all—Mozart."

Another appreciation says of the "Magic Flute:" "Musically considered, the entire first act is remarkable for its novelty of aesthetic impressions; the elevation of spiritual mood induced by this music is something wholly original in art. The listener seems to be lifted into some mysterious, lofty plane of existence: an exquisite sense is left upon one of having breathed, for a time, the atmosphere of some rare and precious unknown state, infinitely remote, and of ultra-mundane beauty and spirituality."

The overture, the choruses, the arias, from beginning to end are so beautiful as to form a wealth of concert material, orchestras and singers going to "Magic Flute" for some of their best concert selections.

REGALETTO VERDI IN ITALIAN.

The career of Verdi, like that of Mozart, records no sudden flare of achievement to die down as suddenly, but artistic progression is his story.

"Rigoletto" belongs to what is called his "second period," and while later works manifest a broader musical scheme, more highly evolved method, none exceed this in popularity. There are many Verdi enthusiasts, indeed, who prefer these earlier operas, which are more distinctly Italian, and evince little of the "music-drama" influence.

THE THEATRICAL INSTINCT.

Verdi had the theatrical sense as keenly developed as a good reporter has the sense of news value. He knew how to grasp the real point of any situation, and then it was a mere consequence of his genius to clothe it in the music which would best convey its strength.

His sense of dramatic values and what has been called his "passionate-human" melody and harmony hold him always in popular acclaim and make his operas the selection "par excellence" for festival occasions.

Rigoletto, therefore, has been selected for an appropriately brilliant close to opera week, Saturday night, May 1.

A noteworthy cast will contribute to its effectiveness, and Toscanni will conduct.

It has had memorable productions during former seasons in Atlanta, notably the occasion two years ago when precedent was overturned and the famous quartet in the last act had to be repeated. Alma Gluck established herself in the favor of Atlanta people in the role of Gilda, and Caruso never did more wonderful work.

Story of Rigoletto.

Rigoletto, a hunchback, or jester to the libertine Duke of Mantua, and willing pander to his licentious habits, has by his ribald and unfeeling jests, together with his villainous connivance at the duke's open disdain for all considerations of honor, rendered himself highly objectionable to the courtiers, particularly the Counts of Ceprano and Monterone, whose wife and daughter respectively have become victims to the unbridled passions of the duke. Monterone, in indignation at the dishonor to which he is subjected, seeks the duke's presence and boldly denounces his conduct and that of his vile abettor, Rigoletto, who is inwardly terror-stricken by his vehement maledictions.

Rigoletto has a young and beautiful daughter, whom he conceals from public observations with the most jealous care; so strictly has she been guarded that she has not been allowed to leave her home, except to attend her religious observances at church. She, however, has not escaped the notice of the duke, who has repeatedly observed her at her devotions, and contrived to track her at her humble habitation, where, by bribing her servant, he gains access to her. Representing himself to be a poor student deeply impressed with her attractions, he succeeds in supplanting her with reciprocal sentiments, never dreaming that it is the daughter of his buffoon he is thus beguiling.

The fact of the existence of a young and lovely woman in the dwelling of Rigoletto becoming known to the courtiers, they form a plot to abduct her therefrom by force and deliver her to the duke. At a late hour in the evening they assemble (masked) in the neighborhood of Rigoletto's dwelling, and, under pretense that they are going to carry off the wife of Ceprano, whose house adjoins Rigoletto's, they induce him to assist. He is accordingly masked and bandaged, and is made to hold the ladder by which some of the party ascend to the window of his house, which they enter and tear away the bewildered Gilda, whose mouth they cover, to prevent her giving any alarm, and carry her off triumphantly to the ducal palace.

The outwitted jester, finding himself deserted, immediately suspects that all is not right, and tearing off the bandage, perceives the scarf of his daughter, which has been dropped in the flight; he is instantly struck with the conviction that he has been robbed of his beloved Gilda, his only treasure, and that the curse of Count Monterone has already begun to work.

The courtiers relate to the duke as a good joke how they have carried off the jester's mistress, but he knows full well from their description that it is Gilda they have abducted, and the unfortunate girl soon becomes a prey to his insatiate passions.

Hastens to Palace.

Rigolette hastens to the palace, and demands his daughter from the courtiers, who treat him with contempt and derision, baffling all his endeavors to obtain access to the duke. He is presently joined by his daughter, who has at length freed herself from the vicious attentions of the duke, and after mutual condolence they quit the place, cursing the scene of their disgrace. Resolving to be revenged on the author of his daughter's and his own misery, Rigoletto hires a bravo named Sparafucile, for a stipulated sum, to assassinate the duke, who is enticed by the blandishments of Maddelene, the sister of Sparafucile, to the bravo's house, a ruinous and lone y inn.

Gilda has been desired by her father to put on male attire and fly to Verona, but previous to starting, in order to extinguish the lingering affection which she still entertains for her unprincipled seducer, she is made an eye-witness, through crevices in the wall of the inn, of his inconstancy and perfidy. She overhears the sister of the bravo earnestly endeavoring to dissuade him from murdering the handsome guest; but he resolutely persists in his determination to fulfill his contract, unless some person should chance to come to the inn before midnight whom he might kill instead, and pass the body in a sack to Rigoletto as that of the murdered duke. Upon learning this Gilda at once resolves to save the life of the undeserving object of her affections by sacrificing her own. She knocks at the door of the inn, is admitted, and instantly stabbed by the cold-blooded assassin. Shortly after, Rigoletto appears, pays the bravo, and receives from him the sack containing (as he supposes) the body of the duke; he proceeds to throw it into the river which runs at the back of the inn, but before he has time to accomplish it, he is astounded by the voice of the living duke, which he hears at a short distance; he instantly suspects foul play, tears open the sack, and is horrified to find, instead of the dead body of the hated duke, the dying form of his beloved daughter, who almost immediately expires. Overwhelmed with terror and anguish at the fulfillment of the dreaded malediction, he falls senseless on the body of his unfortunate daughter.

Story of the Magic Flute.

In former times when the worship of Isis and Osiris prevailed in Egypt, there dwelt upon the banks of the Nile a man of grand and lofty nature, who united in himself the characters of an earthly prince and high priest of the gods. His name was Sarasto. The dwelling was a huge edifice, half palace, half temple.

Sarasto was the grand master of the Mysteries of Isis, and the great duty of his life was to encourage virtue, to aid all who sought true wisdom, to watch over and guard them during their periods of probation, and finally to consecrate them as members of the holy fraternity of which he was the head.

In the same region of the world, in a castle built in the darkest and most gloomy style of Egyptian architecture, dwelt a mysterious being—the Queen of Night. She was of a haughty, proud and revengeful nature, loving darkness rather than light. Her dress was black as the thick darkness, but sparkling with bright stars. Three women also dressed and veiled in black were her familiar spirits, and executed her commands. The widowed queen had a single daughter, Pamina, a lovely and gentle being, whose spiritual tendencies were as virtuous as her person was charming. To give her virtues the opportunity of development, and so save her from temptation and sin, Sarastro had caused her to be taken from her mother and brought to his abode of wisdom and peace.

In the queen's mind grief and revenge struggled for the mastery—but against the power of the great ruler and priest she was helpless. She sought in vain to regain her daughter, equally in vain to punish Sarastro.

It happened that, while the queen was in this state of mind, a young prince, named Tamino, travels, Tamino by name, became separated from his followers, and, while charmed and senseless, was attacked by a huge serpent near her castle; he could only fly and call for help, and at length, overcome by fatigue and terror, he swooned and fell. At this instant the three women attendants of the queen flew from the cave and transfixed the monster with their silver javelins. After gazing with admiration on the sleeping youth they left him still in his swoon, from which he was awakened by a jolly, rollicking, prating, cowardly knave, by name Papageno, by occupation a bird-catcher, a huge eater and drinker, and withal a dreamer of pretty damsels, and now come, with cage on back, to entrap birds, dreaming, with the queen's ladies. Placing his cage upon the ground in front of the palace, he announced his presence by repeated blasts of his Pan's pipes and a lively song; the prince awoke, and seeing the monster killed, addressed himself to Papageno with the inquiry whether it was to him he was indebted for his life. The bird-catcher trembled at the sight, until convinced that it was dead, when he at once claimed the credit for having slain it. The three women had drawn near unperceived, and overheard this falsehood, as well as others which he added to it. One of them suddenly stepped up to him, applied a padlock to his lips, reducing his entire vocabulary to "hm, hm, hm," and sent him about his business.

They then addressed themselves to the prince, told him of the queen, their mistress, and of the loss she had sustained. The queen had determined to make Tamino the instrument by which she should regain her child, and had ventured upon Sarastro in none of his dominions, in search for her daughter, she sent him by the women Pamina's miniature, it had the desired effect. His breast was agitated, as he looked at it, with feelings until then unknown—it kindled a passion as deep and strong as it was sudden.

Queen Takes Appearance.

The queen suddenly made her appearance, addressed herself at once to Tamino, made him a vow of fear, and promised him, should he succeed in rescuing Pamina, to give her to him in marriage. The prince gladly undertook the adventure, and the queen then vanished. Poor Papageno, now came with piteous gestures and sorrowful "hm, hm, hm," and besought Tamino to remove the padlock. But this was beyond

Attractive Mother and Son

MRS. HUGH MILLER BAGLEY,
Of Oglethorpe, and little son, Hugh Miller, Jr. Mrs. Bagley was Miss Minnie Evins, of Atlanta. Mr. Bagley is a son of Mr. H. C. Bagley.

Mrs. Frances Johnson Hayden Weds Mr. O'Connor of New York City

The marriage of Mrs. Frances Johnson Hayden to Mr. Gerard Harding O'Connor is announced by the bride's brother, Mr. Joseph Johnson, of New York city, at whose country place, near Round Brook, N. J., the ceremony was performed at noon Saturday, February 20. There were present only the relatives of the bride and groom.

Mr. and Mrs. O'Connor left Bound Brook during the afternoon for Washington, Atlanta and New Orleans.

Mrs. O'Connor is the daughter of the late Joseph H. Johnson, of Atlanta. Mr. O'Connor is of the well-known New Orleans family of that name, and is in business in New York city. Mr. and Mrs. O'Connor will live at Garden City, Long Island.

Art Association to Show Pictures by Americans

A splendid exhibition of paintings is to be given in Atlanta the first two weeks of March under the auspices of the Atlanta Art association.

It will be held at the Ponce de Leon apartment and promises to be one of the most interesting events of the Lenten season, as each of the artists represented is among the foremost in the United States and is sending one or more of his best works to Atlanta.

The names alone to lovers of the arts of painting and etching will suggest endless delight. That each of these artists has been invited to exhibit and has work now on exhibition at the Panama exposition will prove to those who do not know them by name what their standing is in America.

L. H. Meakin will show six canvasses of the hills and valleys about the picturesque Maine woods. His rain effects are described as vividly giving the impression of "wet, soggy, somber days across the distant hills and yet the sky has a luminous quality."

Frank Duvenick, who is a Kentuckian, is "one of the most remarkable figures in American art." It was he who struck the first note of this great modern American awakening in an exhibit he held in Boston in 1875.

H. M. Wessel will show a number of paintings among them his "Oriental Study," which caused such favorable comment at the recent exhibit in Cincinnati.

Other artists who will be represented will be J. H. Sharp, Edward Volkert, Charles J. Kaelin, Paul Eschenbach, James R. Hopkins, J. E. Kunz, and a charming group of etchings and dry points by Dwight C. Sturges.

Mrs. Southwick's Reading For Martha Berry School

Mrs. Southwick, of the Emersonian school of Oratory, Boston, will read from Browning in the ballroom of Mr. and Mrs. John W. Grant, the afternoon of Saturday, February 28, for the benefit of the Martha Berry school.

The reading will be under the auspices of Atlanta Martha Berry circle, of which Mrs. Frank Inman is president. The tickets of admission are $1, and may be obtained from Mrs. Hugh Richardson, or at the home of Mrs. Grant, Saturday afternoon.

It is the earnest desire of the circle to secure sufficient funds through the lecture to insure their aid to the school this year, going through scholarships for young Georgia girls who, at the Martha Berry school, acquire most practical training under expert direction. The scholarships are $60, and each year, through the Atlanta circle, Atlanta has been able to show her appreciation of a worthy institution of national fame, and founded and continually promoted in its success by the love and life's work of a Georgia woman—Miss Martha Berry.

Mrs. Southwick, as a reader, is widely known and sought for, and Atlanta is lucky in having secured her for the reading. She is at present giving a course of readings under the auspices of the Browning classes of Nashville.

Rook Party.

Miss Clara Short was the charming hostess at a rook party, given at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Short, on Cherry street, in East Point, Tuesday evening.

In the decorations and score cards the Valentine idea was carried out in detail.

The prizes were won by Mr. M. F. Ramsey and Miss Clark.

Miss Short received her guests wearing a handsome gown of rose-colored crepe de chine. She was assisted in receiving by her niece, Miss Rebecca Kohler, who wore a dainty frock of blue chiffon.

A salad course was served to twenty guests after the game was finished.

Showing the Crucial Points of the Spring Costume--- Tailored and Otherwise

It is at the turn of the season that the smart Ready-to-Wear Shop makes new friends. At the first peep of the brave little crocus every woman pricks up her ears for the spring note—and the newness thereof being its charm, she reaches out eagerly for it. Now this is true of all women, high, low, rich and poor, and there's no denying it. The strong desire is to put her "best foot forward" and keep apace with the season.

The smart Ready-to-Wear Shop is abloom with the new, and prognosticates the best of everything that is to be. Ready, without worry, and without doubt as to its good style and as to how the thing is going to look—such is the great service of the Ready-to-Wear garment.

The Fit and the Fullness of the New Suit

To begin with materials, everything with a fine rib in it—grosgrain cloth, covert, whipcord and some gabardine weaves have the lead; colors are somber in the main, with a touch that tells of bright blue, green, dahlia or black and white, or sand shades to contrast with dark blue.

Spring shades run the gamut of sand and putty, biege, grays and blues, and black is always good.

Coats are close fitting, that is, about the shoulders and sleeves; otherwise they are loosely belted or swing from yoke in box or side pleats reaching barely the hip line, many are short, clinging Etons, or even stingy cutaway bolero jackets of Turkish intent are seen.

Whatever they are, the best is shown at Allen's—the result of the work of the best fashion makers, who say what we shall wear—$19.75, $25.00, $29.75, $35.00, $40.00 and up to $125.00.

New Silk Poplin Suits $35 and $38.50

The Silk Frock, "Fancy Free"

Unlimited, it would seem, in its variety of fascinations, is the spring frock of silk. Pussy Willow Taffeta has revived its popularity because of its beautiful soft finish, as is shown in lovely plain shades—dahlia red, soft tan, wistaria, greens and blue. Made with circular skirt and bodice elaborate with lace and georgette crepe, gold thread embroidery and gold net frills—well, one may depend on the new spring silk frock for many things—$15.00, $19.75, $23.75, $25.00, $29.75, $35.00.

THREE SECTIONS WANT HIGHWAY

From Georgia's point of view, one of the most interesting questions to be settled at the Hoosierland-to-Dixie highway meeting of governors, which will be held in Chattanooga, April 2, will be the decision upon the route which the highway will take through south Georgia to Jacksonville.

There are three contesting sections of south Georgia fighting to get the route. Each has written to W. G. Gilbreath, secretary of the Hoosier Motor club, of Indianapolis, who is one of the prime movers in the highway plan, and who has charge of such matters until the president and board of directors shall be chosen for the highway association. Leading citizens have submitted maps and outlines of what each section has to offer and will do for the highway.

Outline of Routes.

The three competing routes through south Georgia are:

First—From Macon via Fitzgerald and Waycross to Jacksonville.

Third—From Macon via Americus, Albany and Thomasville to Jacksonville.

All three of the routes are good, and it will depend largely upon what each section has to offer. Realizing this, there is the warmest sort of competition between them.

Mr. Gilbreath, however, cannot settle the question, but it must wait for the consideration of the president and the board of directors.

An Unusual Meeting.

The Chattanooga meeting will be one of the most remarkable of its sort ever held. The governors of the states through which the Hoosierland-to-Dixie highway will pass, all the way from Chicago to Miami, will gather to consider a general plan of the route and means of establishing the highway.

There will be present the governors of Indiana, Kentucky, Tennessee, Georgia and Florida, and possibly the governor of Illinois. Chattanooga is making great preparation for their entertainment.

DR. BOYNTON HEADS PRINCETON ALUMNI

The annual meeting and smoker of the Princeton alumni of Georgia was held at the University club Saturday night, the election of officers for the ensuing year resulting as follows:

President, Dr. Charles T. Boynton, class 1893; vice president, William T. Healey, class of 1877; secretary and treasurer, Robert H. Jones, Jr., re-elected.

Burton Smith, representing the University of Georgia, and Thomas W. Connally, representing Yale, were present as special guests of the evening. Mr. Connally proposed a joint dinner of Yale and Princeton alumni to be held in Atlanta in the spring, and a committee was named to take up the matter of arranging for this meeting.

MILLIONAIRE MULLINS DIES IN SAVANNAH

Hyannisport, Mass., February 20.—Edward S. Mullins, a millionaire and former Harvard athlete who made his home here, died at Savannah, Ga., today, according to word received tonight.

Mr. Mullins, 45 years old, was found dead in bed in his room at the hotel, the message said. His body will be taken to Pittsburg.

Washing Won't Rid Head Of Dandruff

The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

Do this tonight, and by morning most if not all of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy, every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop at once, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and never fails to do the work.—(adv.)

Atlanta Theaters Offer Enjoyable Entertainment This Week

"Old Plantation Days."

Waller S. Baldwin has planned a great surprise for Atlanta this week in "Old Plantation Days," which the Baldwin-Melville players will present, beginning with a Washington's birthday matinee Monday afternoon and continuing all the week with regular matinees Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday. This will be the first time this play has ever been presented in Atlanta and Mr. Baldwin has given his assurance, as a southern gentleman, that there will be nothing about the performance to which anyone could take the slightest objection.

The biggest features of the production will be a regular old-time negro jubilee of singing and dancing by any number of local and Georgia dancers and singers, with plantation scenes of before the war. Mr. Baldwin has been working on this feature for two weeks and will make it so realistic and so entertaining that the Atlanta will doubtless be packed to the utmost at each performance. These features were so excellent that Mr. Baldwin gave the play for six weeks in New Orleans and in Jacksonville, and it was one of the strongest drawing cards of the Jacksonville.

"Old Plantation Days" is a play which becomes one of the sweetest and purest ever put on the stage. It is attractive in every location, and is worth while. The company has been cast for the play in a manner which will bring about the best results.

The matinees Tuesday and Thursday will be played at 3 o'clock, on account of the school children.

Keith Vaudeville.

(At the Forsyth.)

A great bill of vaudeville will come to the Forsyth for this week. That is a regular declaration, and a fact that is lived up to each week. But as a matter of unusual fact the acts that have been selected to make up the program are a bit stronger in class and reputations than some of the features that have come and scored successes. The bill is well balanced. There is no confliction. There is nothing that has proven to be vaueless in Atlanta. There is a fine blending of novelty, art, music, comedy and all that goes to make the sort of vaudeville that has made the Forsyth Atlanta's busy theater.

The headline feature comes from Paris, the special feature comes from Virginia, and there are other stars from Europe and America and even South America. There will be an act that will interest the box-seat holder and please the gallery patron; there will be other features that will cause the sort of talk that keeps the men in the box office busy selling seats in advance. Madam Henrietta De Serria, the famous model of the Academy of Sculpture, Paris, selected fifteen professional models and started to America with the most wonderful stage setting that could be made in Europe. The idea of reproducing the famous works of art with living models pleased the vaudeville managers and when the act was first exhibited there was a rush to secure it. For many months Madam De Serria and her company confined to New York, appearing in first one and then another of the leading theaters and finally was secured for vaudeville. It is a wonderful act. An act that will help to keep the Forsyth filled all the week. Reproductions of some of the famous works of art in Belgium recently destroyed by the horrors of war will be of interest and there are going to be other poses of interest.

Alexander and Scott, the minstrel stars, who were so successful with the Honey Boy show and who have been headlining in vaudeville since their first success, will be special features. The boys are the best dressed people in vaudeville. They are good singers and they always score a success. Bertha Creighton following the lead of other legitimate stars has entered vaudeville and with a special company will produce the one-act comedy "Our Husbands." This is declared to be one of the best bits in vaudeville and a popular offering in any theater. Junie McCree wrote for Billie Burke, the vaudeville producer, a sketch called "At Woodside Inn," and Burke secured Lane, Udell and Ingersoll to play the parts. A new feature act in vaudeville was the result and Atlanta vaudeville fans are going to have a surprise treat. Cornell and Gillette left an act at the Forsyth three years ago that has not been forgotten. "The Odd Pair" will be recognized as soon as they appear and the audience will settle back for a quarter of an hour of real, clean, refreshing fun. The Arnaut Brothers, in a novelty offering that will be one of the delightful parts of the show, will be among the features and the Bijou skaters will offer something entirely new and original in roller skating.

The Pathe comedy pictures start the performance and it will conclude with the Pathe news pictures, always interesting.

HEAD STUFFED FROM CATARRH OR A COLD

Instant relief—no waiting. Your clogged nostrils open right up; the air passages of your head clear and you can breathe freely. No more hawking, snuffling, blowing, headache, dryness. No struggling for breath at night; your cold or catarrh disappears.

Get a small bottle of Ely's Cream Balm from your druggist now. Apply a little of this fragrant, antiseptic, healing cream in your nostrils. It penetrates through every air passage of the head, soothes the inflamed or swollen mucous membrane and relief comes instantly.

(In Alkahest Course.)

Under the auspices of the Alkahest lyceum course, Leland T. Powers will give a recital from "David Copperfield," next Thursday evening at 8:30 o'clock at the Auditorium.

William DeWitt Hyde, president of Bowdoin college, said, after hearing this recital:

"Mr. Powers' impersonation of character is the quintessence of art. Incidentally, through careful selection of, sentiments and situations to be represented, he leaves behind valuable moral impressions which can never be obliterated."

Paul Pearson, the critic, said recently of Leland Powers:

"His art is that of a master. He has many imitators, but I have never heard his equal. The splendid vigor of his work betokens the man of clean mind, sincerity of purpose, and the keenest insight into character. These quantities make his art enduring."

Of his own work, which consists in an interpretation of the drama, Leland Powers himself has said:

"Of all the arts, the most joy-giving, I think, is my own. A great drama is a masterpiece of art made up of mastermoments of life so chosen, grasped, and wielded by a master's hand that they reveal the importance of love and good will and the importance of hate. It is the glory of my art to translate, through living voice and movement, such masterpieces from the printed page back to breathing life."

George Arliss in "Disraeli."

(At the Atlanta.)

George Arliss will show us his famous characterization of "Disraeli," the renowned premier of Great Britain in Louis N. Parker's famous comedy of this title at the Atlanta theater on March 3, 4, 5 and 6.

Mr. Parker might never have written what has been considered one of his greatest plays had not the only actor been available whose art, technique and appearance fitted its titular role. It was the personality of Mr. Arliss, too, that determined the period of "Disraeli's" life to be dealt with in the play. It is the bland, quizzical Machiavelli of the conservative party that Mr. Arliss represents. He has made a long and careful study of both the mental and physical characteristics of this remarkable man. In writing the play "Disraeli," Mr. Parker was not blind to the romantic possibilities of the subject, and displays "Disraeli" as a statesman not only of brilliant achievements, but also as a sort of good fairy to a pair of young lovers who are very near to estrangement over temperamental difficulties. The motive of the story is "Disraeli's" purchase of the Suez canal for Great Britain and the manner in which he outwitted the crafty plans of the Russian premier. In this, as in a number of the acts of his diplomatic life, his marvelous prescience in foreign affairs was vindicated. The production is elaborate scenically and the costumes of the period—the early seventies—afford a delightful picture of English life in the Victorian period.

Mr. Arliss is supported by a company which includes such well-known players as Ernita Lascelles, Florence Arliss, Margaret Dale, Leila Repton, Vincent Sternroyd, Charles Harbury, Henry Carvill, Arthur Eldred and others.

FRANK AND STATE COMPLETE BRIEFS

for the murder of Mary Phagan, the Atlanta factory girl, filed in the supreme court today briefs in Frank's appeal from the Georgia federal court's refusal to release him in a habeas corpus proceedings. The appeal will be argued next week.

They contend the trial court lost jurisdiction of the case in its functions from fear of mob violence, and by reason of ing for Frank to remain out of court when the verdict was announced.

For the first time, the attorneys declare Frank does not contend he cannot be held for a new trial if the present death sentence is set aside.

The brief declares Frank's counsel at the trial could not waive his right to be present when the verdict was rendered. It is argued if he could be absent then he could be absent during the entire trial.

"When the jurors returned into the courtroom," the brief continues, "and found the prisoner absent, with none to look into their faces but the excited multitude, and when, after the first juror had been polled, the tumult of applause and the cheers that were bellowed were so resounding as to prevent the responsee of the jurors as they were polled that the defendant was far away, is it possible to believe that those jurors acted as free moral agents, or that they were not subjected to a species of duress that swept from their minds every thought save that of personal jeopardy?

Being out of court, Frank was unable to raise the question as to the denial of his rights under the federal constitution, the brief contends. Once he had been denied a right, unavailing efforts to obtain a new trial could not act to make the judgment legal, it added.

The brief concludes:

"In the present case, the superior court of Georgia has jurisdiction over the appellant after his indictment, and down to the later stages of his trial. The verdict and all subsequent proceedings being nullities, he is entitled to his discharge from the void judgment and to be relieved from the void sentence of death. He does not, however, contend that he cannot be held for further trial under the indictment."

TWO CONVICTS ESCAPE FROM GWINNETT GANG

Lawrenceville, Ga., February 20.—(Special.)—It seems that Gwinnett's prisoners are beginning to take advantage of the hard times and leave for places unknown. Several days ago, while at work near Collins Hill, Frank Scruggs and Omer Pepper were completing a little job for the county commissioners after their convict force had moved in further on and a little knoll shutting them from view of the guards, they took French leave and have not been seen since. Dogs trailed them to Duluth, but lost the tracks.

Scruggs was sent up about two years ago for assault with attempt to murder and was to serve six years. Peppers was sent up for twelve months at the December term of court for a misdemeanor.

A negro named Jones took advantage of the absence of Sheriff Bose early Saturday morning and worked himself out a hole in the top of the jail. This is not the first escape from the jail.

To Quickly Remove Ugly Hairs From Face

(Beauty Notes)

Beauty-destroying hairs are soon banished from the skin with the aid of a delatone paste, made by mixing some water with a little plain powdered delatone. This is spread upon the hairy surface for 2 or 3 minutes, then rubbed off and the skin washed to remove the remaining delatone. This simple treatment banishes every trace of hair and leaves the skin without a blemish. Caution should be used to be certain that it is delatone you buy.—(adv.)

SPECIAL SERVICES FOR LENTEN PERIOD

Business Men and Women Are Invited by the Episcopal Church Committee.

The special committee of the Episcopal church of Atlanta has issued invitations to the business men and women of the city to spend a few minutes in prayer on the third floor of the Steiner-Emery building each day at 12:10 o'clock. These are the noonday Lenten services which have been conducted so interestingly for several years.

The services will last twenty minutes only. On Monday and Tuesday Dean J. R. Atkinson will make the addresses. He will be followed on successive days by various members of the Atlanta clergy, according to later announcements.

LOCAL GREETERS TO HEAR ADDRESS BY NATIONAL HEAD

Atlanta's real "boosters"—the men who put up the skyscrapers and operate its big buildings—will get together at a big banquet next Tuesday night in the Winecoff hotel. The occasion will be the annual dinner of the Atlanta Association of Building Owners and Managers, which will follow the annual meeting of the organization to be held Tuesday afternoon in the Candler building.

Tuesday's gathering promises to be the most important in the history of the association, in view of the fact that the National Association of Building Owners and Managers will be held in Atlanta next September. Charles A. Patterson, president of the national organization, has been invited to the banquet, and he is expected to outline the plans under way for the big meeting next fall.

There will be addresses by St. Elmo Massengale, president of the Atlanta Ad Men's club, on "Atlanta, Its Growth and Progress;" by Charles D. McKinney, on "The Benefits of Co-Operation," and by A. M. Schoen, an insurance expert, on "How Building Construction Affects Insurance."

Among the association's guests will be a number of the most prominent business and professional men in Atlanta.

U. S. MARITIME FIELD HELD BY FOREIGNERS

Washington, February 20.—Charges that representatives of foreign shipping interests controlling principal committees of many trade and maritime organizations have "honey-combed" the American maritime field were made today by Wallace Downey, New York ship broker, before the senate committee investigating the alleged lobby against the ship bill.

Downey said he was the organizer of the United States Merchant Marine association, which restricted membership to Americans having neither direct nor indirect connections with foreign shipping interests. Senator Walsh asked why that discrimination was made.

"The maritime field of this nation," replied Downey, "has been honey-combed with representatives of the foreign shipping interests. Innumerable organizations such as chambers of commerce, boards of trade and maritime exchanges have been formed in this country. Representatives of foreign shipping interests have joined these organizations and secured control of the principal committees. Thus legislative bodies do not get the real American viewpoint in such matters."

Downey testified that his association, none the less, opposed the ship bill and circulated letters against it. The committee adjourned until next Thursday.

SLAYER OF FATHER WORRIES TO DEATH AS TRIAL NEARS

Savannah, Ga., February 20.—(Special.)—Worry over his approaching trial for the murder of his father during the holidays was responsible for the death in the county jail this morning of Daniel Mackey.

Mackey admitted killing his father and claimed he was justified as they had quarreled over the division of a part of their estate, but he never ceased to worry over the tragedy. From a big, healthy man he gradually wasted away in jail until he was little more than a skeleton when he died.

There is another case in jail similar to Mackey's, that of Aaron Brown, colored, under death sentence for the murder of an aged white watchman, Peter Dewberry. When he was tried a few weeks ago Brown was a black giant, weighing slightly more than three hundred pounds and being well over six feet tall. Since his conviction he has been unable to eat and now is nothing but skin and bones and is so weak he cannot turn over.

Late in the day an operation was performed on a ruptured kidney. His physicians stated late tonight he was resting better, though his condition is considered very grave. The surgeons used the "twilight sleep" in the operation.

Popular Price and Quality Discussed by Wylie West

"Popular prices on tires are as desirable as on everything else the public buys," said Wylie West, and it is a striking illustration of what scientific manufacturing methods on a stupendous scale and economical distribution can do, that such a tire as the Firestone can be sold at the price of the ordinary.

"But popular price alone will never satisfy the experienced buyer of tires. When you think of it you will realize that in no other line of goods is the value of what you paid for so quickly put to the test as in tires. They go right from the hands of the dealer to all the grueling tests of the road.

"It is poor consolation to the motorist laboring under all the conceivable afflictions of tire trouble to reflect that he bought tires cheaper than any of his friends.

"There is an old saying by a famous maker of quality goods, copyrighted, I believe, that 'the recollection of quality remains long after the price is forgotten.' Truer words were never spoken—especially of tires.

"The car owner has a keen recollection both of good and bad tires. That is why dealers who are in the tire business to stay insist on quality with price. Popular price alone does not hold tire customers. The 'Kickback' of one sale of a poor tire may destroy the profits of many sales.

"Firestone prices are reduced as scientific efficiency in our factory and economy of distribution are developed. The only fixed factor is quality. That we keep at the maximum and no price movements in the tire world ever made or ever will induce us to change it. The volume of Firestone business is sufficient evidence that tire buyers approve the policy.

WOMAN IN SAXON CAR MAKES A LONG TRIP

Mrs. Emma E. Walsh Drives From Lauderdale, Fla., to Moline, Ill.

A continuous trip in a Saxon car from Fort Lauderdale, Fla., to Moline, Ill., is the record established by Mrs. Emma E. Walsh, of the Illinois city. This is the longest trip ever made in a Saxon car by a woman. Much of the route was through sand and mud.

"Between New Smyrna and St. Augustine," relates Mrs. Walsh, in telling of her trip, "we drove through some 18 miles of sand, which reached up to the hubs of the wheel. It was necessary to drive this on low gear.

"Between Jacksonville and Lake City, up in the northern part of Florida, we were obliged to drive 63 miles through the worst sand I ever saw.

"I'm sure the best roads we found were in the state of Georgia. While the roads in the state were very good in most cases, we encountered some very big hills and quite a little mud. In going through Tennessee we crossed the Cumberland mountains, and it surely was some climbing. On top of one of the mountains we found a large car stuck in a mud hole and had the pleasure of helping it out.

"We came the whole distance from Fort Lauderdale on three of the four original tires we started out with.

"During the entire trip we used $9.80 worth of gasoline, and, while we did not keep track of the figures on oil consumption, we are sure that it was small. Of course, one must take into consideration the roads we drove over—the deep sand, mud, hills, mountains and cobblestone roads in Kentucky, and fresh broken stone roads through Tennessee and Indiana."

The route was through Macon, Ga.; Atlanta, Ga.; Chattanooga, Tenn.; Nashville, Tenn.; Louisville, Ky.; Indianapolis, Ind.; Champaign, Ill.; Bloomington, Ill.; Peoria, Ill.; Galesburg, Ill.; then on to Rock Island and into Moline.

OWNERS ARE ADVISED TO WATCH SOLID TIRE

Most Important Precaution Is to See Tires Are Not Overloaded.

"Much is said about the care necessary to obtain good service from pneumatic tires. But there isn't much said about the care of solid tires," declares the head of the service department of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber company, "and as the truck industry develops this becomes a more and more important subject.

"In fact, one hears rather how truck tires don't need any watching. That probably accounts for a good deal of the tire trouble truck owners experience. It is true that compared to pneumatic tires, solids need little care, but what care they do need is absolutely essential to full mileage.

"By far the most important precaution is to see that your tires are not overloaded. And here is the reason. Everybody realizes that rubber, if stretched too far, will break. Very few people realize that rubber if compressed too tightly will break also. That is just what happens when too great a load is imposed on a truck tire. The tire is crushed between two unyielding surfaces, the road and the steel base of the tire. If the load is too great, the compression becomes too much and the molecular structure of the rubber is broken down.

"Another point in connection with this matter of overloading that isn't generally understood is that one overloading will ruin a tire for good. Take a toy rubber balloon, blow it up. It stretches and stretches, but at a certain point it breaks. And after that the balloon is no good. It can't be blown up again. The same is true with a truck tire, only in a different way. Put a solid tire on a truck and load the truck. The tire compresses and compresses up to a certain point and then breaks. Once it is broken it can't be used again with satisfactory results.

"The best tire advice that we can give a truck owner, then, is—'Equip your truck with tires adequate to carry the load you want to put on them—then give your driver hard and fast instructions that to that point he shall load the truck and no farther."

JOHNSON MUST TRAIN HARD TO BEAT WILLARD

New York, February 20.—Jack Johnson must do some strenuous training if he wishes to retain his championship title at Juarez next month, in the opinion of officers of the freight steamship Highland Harris, on which the champion was a passenger from Montvideo, Uruguay, to Barbadoes, where he left the vessel on February 7 and chartered a 200-ton schooner to take him and his party to Mexico. The Highland Harris reached her dock here yesterday.

Aboard the Highland Harris Johnson was accompanied by Frank Hagsey, of Sydney, boxer and swimmer, who is acting as his trainer for the contest with Willard.

Johnson did no real training while on shipboard but was careful of his diet. He expected to begin real work for the fight as soon as he landed in Mexico. Johnson explained that he had injured his arm boxing on shipboard while en route from Southampton to Buenos Aires and did not wish to take another risk.

Officers of the Highland Harris said that as Johnson had not trained between the time he left Montevideo on January 20 and his arrival at Tampico, Mexico, on Thursday, unusual measures would have to be adopted by the champion if he hoped to get in good condition to meet Jesse Willard on March 5, the date set for the fight at Juarez.

The Fortified Tire

Spans the Way from Trouble. Trust It Once

Let It Tell Its Story

Let the Goodyear tire tell you what it means to travel on Fortified Tires.

Fortified is more than a name. It means a tire with five protections offered by no one else. They have cost us years of effort and millions of dollars.

They have won for this tire the top place in Tiredom—the highest prestige and the largest sales.

In the best way known they combat

Rim-Cuts	Loose Treads	Punctures
Blowouts	Insecurity	Skidding

Let them prove this to you.

Not Trouble-Proof

We don't claim the impossible—a trouble-proof tire. But Goodyears average best. They could never hold the lead—and hold it for years—unless that were true, as you know.

These are super-quality tires. Not in materials alone, but in features. We protect you in five exclusive ways. And one of them alone adds to our cost $450,000 per year.

Yet Prices Come Down

Despite these improvements Goodyear prices have constantly come down. We have made three big reductions in two years. Our last—made February 1st—makes the two-year total 45 per cent.

Our mammoth production—the largest in the world—lets us give you in Goodyears the most for your money. And we always shall.

One for Every Car

Last year we sold 1,479,883—about one for every car in use. Think what a tire this must be to dominate like that.

Fortified Tires mean less tax and less trouble. They mean more safety, more enjoyment. Those things are waiting you at any Goodyear Service Station.

Any dealer can supply you Goodyear tires. If the wanted size is not in stock, he will telephone our local branch.

THE COMING TEXTILE ERA.

The nightmare horror of Europe's war will bequeath to the south an unprecedented and world-wide era of supremacy in the cotton textile industry.

That is the clear and verified deduction made in a remarkable article published today, and written by Charles H. Platt, of New York, a regular contributor to The Constitution and an expert on the economics of cotton and allied industries of national reputation.

Mr. Platt's article challenges the study and optimism of every farmer, every manufacturer, every capitalist, every business man in the south.

Mr. Platt does not paint an iridescent promise, redeemable tomorrow and without any effort on our part.

He simply carries us up onto a high mountain and shows us, almost literally, the kingdoms of the earth in a death grapple and the enormous and quick waste their armies are making of all the fundamental materials of which cotton is a part or for which it is a substitute.

He shows us the shrinking wool supply, the dwindling linen supply, the dwindling supply of every other substance, saying that, with due vigilance on our part, cotton will step in ultimately and take its place.

What does this mean? Just this:

That the legitimate territory to supply this great world demand will be the southern states, where the fiber is grown and where power to transmute it into fabric is in abundance.

We cannot, however, reap the harvest without preparation. Our mills must be ready and our busines men must have the organization and the selling forces to carry the south's products to the four ends of the earth.

The chief thing is that the door of opportunity is open, and such an opportunity as never before faced a people.

What that signifies in wealth, evenly distributed, need not be elaborated.

We should warn ourselves that the golden flood is not coming today nor tomorrow, and it is not coming our way at all unless we prepare for it.

But the picture is one that commands optimism and inspires the imagination. We may grieve, from the humanitarian standpoint, over the charnel house that now is Europe. But inasmuch as the great world war opens up a vista of possibilities for our own people that stagger prophecy, we have cause for gratification and, what is more important, for preparation.

THE BLOODHOUND MYTH.

The Georgia court of appeals has dealt the bloodhound a resounding blow both as a "competent witness," and as to the general detective accuracy of these melancholy-looking animals. In a case that hinged upon trailing by bloodhounds the court held that unless it is established that bloodhounds have "acuteness of scent and discrimination, and that they have been trained and exercised in these qualities in the tracking of human beings and in charge of persons accustomed to handling them," the hound is not a competent witness.

The latter-day and expert criminologist has made the discovery that a lot of romancing has been done about the detective qualities of the bloodhound. The mystery surrounding the animal, its endowment with almost supernatural qualities, and the manner in which it has figured in fiction, all have conspired to inspire more or less terror. As a matter of fact, the bloodhound is seldom hailed as infallible except by the ignorant. When the trail is "cold" or tortuous, he is as likely to "tree" the wrong as the right person. His general performances, stripped of embellishment, seem to endow him with more nose than intelligence.

Another trait of the bloodhound somewhat disquieting to his extreme partisans is his tendency to "take up with" the particular "brother in black" he may be pursuing. Authenticated tales are not lacking of fugitive negroes subduing bloodhounds and actually selling them to sheriffs of other counties. This is not to say, of course, that under such circumstances as the court of appeals outlines, the bloodhound may not be a helpful accessory to the law. But indisputable evidence is beginning to rob him of the fearsome character built up in fiction and by legend.

THE "NILE" AT OUR DOORS.

Returning to New York from a visit to Atlanta and an inspection of the negroes of Peters and Decatur streets, Eugene Brieux, the French dramatist, is reported as having said that "the negroes on the headwaters of the Nile and in Nubia appear to be much more civilized than those on the Great Black Way, of Atlanta, Ga."

This candid criticism, from a man given to observation and with no cause for bias, furnishes food for thought to every southern white man frank enough to face facts. The negroes Brieux saw in his night visit to Peters and Decatur streets undoubtedly are not typical of the whole race. Had he visited other sections and streets, he could have found negroes who are better citizens —more industrious, self-respecting and better behaved.

But we owe it to ourselves to question: Are not the Decatur and Peters street types too prevalent, not only for the good of the negro himself, but for the good of the white man?

Surveys made by impartial experts from outside of Atlanta, and Atlanta is a typical southern town, have revealed alarming conditions.

The negro woman who comes into your house and cooks your meals or nurses your child may, and often does, come from a hovel infected with tuberculosis, diphtheria, typhoid or other communicable diseases.

The negro who works in your place of business, or in the intimacy of your home, may belong to the same classification.

This is all speaking from the point of view of sordid self-preservation, not to mention the Christian and humanitarian aspects.

Then there is the still selfish viewpoint of efficiency.

Who pays for the courts, so largely occupied with negro criminals? The white race.

Who pays for the penitentiaries, the chaingangs, the other means of detention necessitated by the rising crime rate among the negroes? The white race.

Still speaking from the sordid point of view, it is the white man that pays the bills for all the accumulated frailties of the negro race, whether in the crime rate, the disease rate, inefficiency or what not, including the top-heavy educational system which in the past has prepared the exceptional one negro and ignored the average ninety and nine.

Isn't it time that the southern white man, the southern white church, paid more attention to the negroes of the Decatur and Peters street types, in town and country?

The Constitution does not disparage foreign missions. They have their function. But they are contributing to the civilizing and Christianizing of the negro "on the Nile and in Nubia" and elsewhere, and virtually neglecting the negro who touches elbows with our own civilization at a dozen points and menaces it. A tithe of the money spent across the seas, kept at home and judiciously invested, would go far toward solving a problem the presence of which we all recognize.

Brieux has given the white man of the south and the white church of the south food for serious thought.

SAFETY FOR CHILDREN.

Lives and limbs of children in Atlanta will be safer if a crusade shortly to be launched by the committee on public safety of the Chamber of Commerce and a committee of club women is pushed with sufficient perseverance. At a joint meeting of these committees last week it was cited that during the past year ten children had been killed and twenty-five injured by automobiles or other vehicles. Proper precautions would have cut down these losses to inconsiderable proportions.

One plan of prevention looks to erecting signs 25 to 50 feet away from schools, warning autoists of the presence of such an institution and the necessity for slowing down. Another is to inaugurate a "safety first" day in the schools, upon which talks will be made to the children upon the observance of precautions.

Last year The Constitution suggested that it would not be amiss if each week there were a short talk in each grade upon the simple rules needed to avoid accidents. If the child is warned to use only crossings, and not to cross at the middle of blocks, and the warning firmly impressed, much will have been accomplished. It should also be made an instinctive habit of the child to look carefully up and down a street before leaving the curb, bearing in mind that the sidewalk is for pedestrians and the street for vehicular traffic.

The schools of the eastern cities, particularly Brooklyn and New York, have done much educational work in this respect, with the result that there is a perceptible lowering of the rate of deaths and accidents. The schools can accomplish much, but they cannot do all. Some co-operation must be demanded from the parent. A word of warning spoken before the child leaves the house in the morning has saved many a life, just as a word of warning spoken at school has safeguarded the child on the way home.

Working together, the parent and the teacher can lower the toll of infant life, now needlessly large. And the precautions impressed upon the plastic mind of youth will remain to guard that child up to and through maturity, which is another factor distinctly worth working for.

"BACK TO RAILROADING."

"Back to railroading" is the slogan the penitent directors of the New Haven railroad have discovered, and it is significant as being the keynote of practically all the great railroad heads in America today. Commenting upon the change of heart on part of the directors, The Springfield (Mass.) Republican says:

> The directors of the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad company today announce their platform. Briefly, it is "back to railroading," and that means unloading as soon as is possible without needless loss to the properties that are not perfectly connected with the business of railroading. And when the report says that the policy of the company will be "not to acquire any interest in properties for business unconnected with transportation, the "not" is put into italics. Now comes the Massachusetts public service commission with a recommendation of legislation to validate such stock of the New Haven as is held to have been illegally issued, except treasury stock.

If the New Haven, the Frisco and other great American railroad systems, including three or four in the south, had always stuck to railroading as against high financiering, the state of the railroads and of business in this country would never have been such as to tempt the demagogue, the muckraker and the despoiler.

An encouraging symptom is that all the railroads appear to have learned their lesson. Hereafter they are going to confine themselves to the business of transportation, and not permit their systems to be used merely as pawns in the game of Wall street. The people also appear to be regaining confidence in the railroads, and to be paying less attention to the efforts of the demagogue to inflame public sentiment.

The signs are all healthy and are a part of the revival of business independent of the European war and upon a firm basis of mutual confidence and a mutual square deal as between railroads and people.

"Back to railroading" is, in a way, synonymous with "back to prosperity" for all concerned.

FEWER SEX NOVELS.

The Indianapolis News, which has been watching the spring announcements of the publishers, "points with pride" to the fact that we are about to leave the problem novel in the rear and substitute for it old-fashioned romance. The rejoicing of The News will be very generally echoed.

The problem novel has, of course, meant the sex novel, and that in turn has meant about as much prurience as a sated public well could stand. The problem novelists, joining hands with the realists, invited us to discover sex for the first time in the world's history, to observe it not in its holier aspects, but from those depraved angles that have been thrust forth by our complicated civilization.

How much devilment has been done by this literary commercializing of sex it would be hard to determine. Sometimes, viewing novels written solely with the purpose of selling and reckless of their effect, we have sighed for a Mann white slave act applicable to fiction instead of to persons.

The theater, of course, shared in the general orgy, and the stage has for the past ten years been crowded with themes one does not ordinarily discuss in one's drawing room. The "movies" caught the contagion to a certain extent, though a wise censorship saved them from being conspicuously debauched.

And now it seems we are to return to romance, good, clean, wholesome and harmless love stories, with plenty of thrills, but none at the expense of decency. That is just as well. Perhaps they will lack the subtlety of the other brand of stories. But at least they will not set prematurely wise children to guessing wrongly or evilly, and they can feed none of the darker passions.

It is logical, however, to predict that the romance will not hold the field all to itself for any length of time. It will, and justly, be elbowed by the novel of fact describing the mighty events moving forward in the world of our day. Surely, the novelist needs no especial gift of imagination to write a graphic tale of the history in the making. With all Europe in the melting pot and America looking on with anxious gaze, themes fairly press for consideration.

Might be hope of a day's peace in Mexico if they could fire generals as easily as ministers.

After fighting all day Mexico has to count her presidents at night, to see if they are all there.

Kipling says more music is needed in the army, but it seems that the war-poets are not in line for promotion to drum-majors.

The King of Honey Land.

I.

SWEET to tell the story of the King of Honey Land,
Angels come at nightfall and take his little hand;
They march him round his kingdom where the fairies form the band
And tell him what the little stars are dreaming.

II.

On dream-clouds with the angels he wanders far and far.
But they know they cannot lose him where the stars and angels are;
They call him Prince of Sunbeams and Brother to a Star,
And tell him all the dreams that heaven is dreaming.

III.

The King of Honey Land is he, and ere the dawn of day
Within a twinkling train of stars he speeds and speeds away,
For they will not let them keep him where the stars and angels stay
And Mother knows the dreams the stars have told him.

And Johnnie's heard of Washin'ton, and so he wouldn't say

HYPROCISY

By Rev. J. Wilbur Chapman, D. D.

"Ye hypocrites."—Matt. 15:7.

REV. J. WILBUR CHAPMAN, D.D.

What if there are hypocrites in the church? What has that to do with you? Are you one?

The truth has always been counterfeited; the genuine always imitated. No one has ever yet attempted to counterfeit a bad thing, if he knew what he was doing.

Jesus had a Judas among His followers, but He had eleven men true and faithful. To which company do you belong?

Hypocrisy is always sure of detection. Men may think they are deceiving those about them, but they are sadly mistaken.

Hypocrisy always courts defeat. Slowly, and yet surely, the man who strikes a false note and leads a questionable life will reap his harvest.

You say you are stumbling over hypocrites. Then you pay a tribute to your lack of good common sense, for what sort of a man is he who stumbles over hindrances in the way that he can easily see?

"Who are thou that judgest another." Remember two or three things:

1. You cannot see a man's heart nor always detect his true spirit, nor see the tears that roll down his cheeks when he is conscious of failure.

2. Better throw the mantle of charity over men whom we know to be untrue. Leave them with God. He is more just than we.

3. Try to help them. There could be no greater victory than to turn some man who is untrue into the way that leads to life eternal.

With the Exchanges

(From The New York World.)

Louis Goldstein, 13 years old, a sergeant of the East Side juvenile police, which is a sort of unofficial adjunct to the Fifth street police station, appeared in special sessions court to prosecute Morris Hoffman, from whom he bought a chance in a candy lottery on January 14.

As soon as he had the evidence, Goldstein got a regular policeman, and had the man from whom he had bought the chance arrested. Hoffman was fined $25 for violating the lottery law.

The box of candy, which was the prize, had been duly confiscated, and was carried proudly by Louis to the office of District Attorney Perkins. In accordance with the provision of the statute that the district attorney must sell or destroy all property confiscated in lottery cases, Mr. Perkins at once held an auction. Turning to Louis, he said:

"Now, you want to bid on this box, you can; and I will let you have the money to pay the bill, in case it is knocked down to you."

"No, sir," said Louis, "an officer shouldn't take money in a case like this."

The candy was bid in by Oscar Zinn, a process server, for 51 cents. The money was duly forwarded by Mr. Perkins to the city chamberlain.

In the general distribution of the candy which followed, Louis was persuaded to take a single piece of chocolate, which, he said, he would take home to his sister.

DOG OR OX!

(From The Christian Herald.)

W. B. Wright says: "A dog drinking is the emblem of alertness. Watch him! If a leaf rustles he sees it and starts. Sights and sounds which elude your powers of observation arrest his. The most conspicuous distinction between the dog and the ox at water is this: The ox never heeds his master until his thirst is quenched; the dog never heeds his thrist till his master is obeyed. I have seen a hound panting with heat, his black lips baked, his tongue cracked, dart toward the cool spring. But his master's whistle arrests him at the brink and he darts back without a drop. I have watched dovers call, pound, goad oxen at the ford, but the beasts would not budge until their thirst was slaked. Both types you may have seen among the recruits enlisted in the army of the Lord."

GIRLS BALK AT ROPE SLIDING.

(Boston dispatch to The New York Press.)

Radcliffe college girls, ordered by Miss Marjorie Bridgman, the "fire chief," to practice sliding down the rope fire escape in the gymnasium, have rebelled.

The law requires that a rope escape shall be placed in every room above the first floor in the dormitories, and the college authorities some time ago issued a rule that each girl should learn how to use it.

The girls contend that gymnasium practice will do no good, anyhow, as the rope in the gym has been limbered up through use, while those in the dormitories are so hard they won't work. However, Miss Bridgman says she will see that the rule is enforced.

READS HANDWRITING ON THE WALL.

(From The Kansas City Journal.)

The more Mr. Bryan studies the political situation the more impressed he is that Mr. Wilson should be renominated.

The Holland Letter

Approximately $4,000,000 was paid for the collection of porcelains which was made by the late J. P. Morgan. The various articles comprised in the collection represented Mr. Morgan's judgment and also to some extent his indifference to cost. Nominally the collection was sold to a firm of dealers, but, of course, the inference was strong that no one firm of dealers could command as great an amount of money as $4,000,000 so as to secure absolute title in a collection of this kind. The dealers were presumed to have bought the collection for men of wealth who were as indifferent to cost as Mr. Morgan himself was.

Gradually, the real purchasers of the collection—two at least—have become known to collectors and dealers, although this knowledge may be entirely inferential. At all events, collectors and dealers are convinced that one of the purchasers is John D. Rockefeller, Jr. Of course, everyone knew that Mr. Rockefeller had an abundance of capital so that he could make lavish expenditure for works of art. But only the collectors and some of the dealers have known that Mr. Rockefeller possesses an unusual gift for appreciation of all that is best in art, especially ceramics, porcelains, old tapestries and those exquisite designs and tints in rugs which reflect the capacity of the eyes of the rugmakers of the Far East to discern delicate and remote kinds of shades which are not apparent to the unaccustomed eye.

Mr. Rockefeller differs from others of his family with respect to his artistic taste. His father is very fond of landscape, but he prefers the real landscape to the imitations of it upon canvas. His uncle, William Rockefeller, was, at the time when his health was excellent, fond of horses, and was an excellent judge of them. His private trotting park at Greenwich, Conn., which he built some thirty years ago, is no longer used for that purpose, although it is in a high state of repair, but is the country home of his two sons, John D. Rockefeller, Jr., began some years ago to reveal that he was keenly appreciative of art.

What proportion of the Morgan collection of porcelains Mr. Rockefeller has bought is at present only a matter of surmise, but among dealers and collectors the belief is commonly held that he purchased through the dealers the larger part of the collection. Collectors are also persuaded that Henry C. Frick purchased a considerable portion of the collection and will place it in the new home which he has recently occupied upon upper Fifth avenue.

Not a Question of Dollars.

Collectors now are venturing the opinion that, while Mr. Morgan's collection of porcelains was marketed for a sum which will return a fair profit on the original investment, nevertheless the entire collection made by Mr. Morgan, including paintings, works of art of all kinds, would if sold at this time bring a sum much less than that which represents the elder Morgan's entire investment. This situation is known by Mr. Morgan's collection, including everything, has been that it was not far from $50,000,000. Personally, he did not give much thought to the cost or value of the collection. He is presumed to have felt regarding his collection precisely as he felt regarding his yacht. When someone asked him what the cost of maintaining his yacht was, he replied that he never considered that. And at the time came when he did give it consideration then he should sell the yacht.

Although the common estimate of the total investment by Mr. Morgan in works of art fixes the amount at about $50,000,000, yet there is excellent authority—not the authority of dealers, but of those who have had long experience as collectors—for the belief that were Mr. Morgan's collection offered for immediate sale it would probably bring not more than $20,000,000, perhaps not as much as that. If, however, it were sold gradually, different collectors being willing to offer high prices for one or more of the works, then it might ultimately fetch approximately what Mr. Morgan in the aggregate paid for the entire collection.

The Morgan collection is probably without parallel, either here or in Europe, in the magnitude of the money invested, certainly in the magnitude of investments of this kind made by one man. But there are other large collections, representing investments of millions, some of which are known to the public and some only to collectors or to those who have enthusiastic appreciation of art. The collection which is known by the name of the late Benjamin Altman is much richer in paintings than is the Morgan collection. Various estimates of its immediate money value have been made. All reach well up in the millions. Probably the pictures could be more readily sold than could porcelains or other forms of ceramic art, for there seems to be a wider appreciation of paintings than of other works of art.

Altman Collection.

The Altman collection, which has been for some time on exhibition, would have been more satisfactorily displayed had the pictures been open to view in the gallery which Mr. Altman built for them. The light is better there and the accessories are more in keeping with the collection.

One of the finest collections in the United States is known only to a few collectors and perhaps to the leading dealers. It has been perhaps to the leading dealers. It has been in the Jewish family or firm, and the paintings have never been placed upon public exhibition. Very likely at some date in the future there may be announcement that one of the finest of American collections of paintings, one representing a large investment, is to be placed on exhibition or offered for sale. Then it will be learned for the first time that this wealthy family has been paying millions for pictures.

The unusually fine collection of John G. Johnson, of Philadelphia, numbering about 1,000 in all, represents his own judgment and appreciation. Mr. Johnson is understood to have found reasonable mental excitement in his search for pictures, and if he were to make public the anecdotal associations with some of his pictures it would prove an interesting a volume as Allan Cunningham's biographical sketches of the great English painters.

Some of the dealers in this city assert that Mr. Johnson has weeded out four or five hundred paintings from his collection, and has sometimes met with an amusing experience on that account. His attention has been called occasionally to a painting which he has been assured is the work of one of the masters. The instant he looked at this painting he recognized it as one of those which he had weeded from his collection, not because it was a poor piece of artistic workmanship, but because he wanted room for other pictures.

Hungary

By GEORGE FITCH,
Author of "At Good Old Siwash."

Hungary is a small patch of ground in the dorsal region of Europe which has been messing up history with great success for a thousand years. It is the home of the celebrated Magyars, who bursted into Europe with great fury in the ninth century, and have held together closer than an Odd Fellow lodge ever since.

There are only about 9,000,000 of these Magyars, but in their fighting days it usually took about five enemies to hold each one of them. They defeated Germany, ruined Austria, defied Russia, invaded Italy and threw rocks at the Turk over the walls of Constantinople. Every one breathed a sigh of relief when the Magyars quit fighting and took up the tasks of self-government and the conquest of the Magyar language, two things which have kept them very busy for the last fifty years.

Hungary is bounded on the north by siege guns, on the west by hostility, on the east by danger, and on the south by Serbia and other forms of dynamite. Politically, it is only about as quiet and placid as a miners' strike in Colorado. There are eight prominent nationalities in Hungary, each of which would give a lot to be able to boot the other seven out. In consequence of this, the Hungarian parliament resembles an old-fashioned New York caucus just before the riot call goes in, and Hungarian citizens in search of peace have been emigrating to the United States at the rate of 150,000 a year. To offset this, a million Russians have recently emigrated to Hungary, through the Carpathians, but not for the pursuit of agriculture and the arts.

Hungary is as large as Kansas and Iowa combined. It has 20,000,000 people, or five times as many as these two states. The Hungarians are simple, quiet folk at home, who dress in passionate colors on feast days, and till the soil in a sketchy and lackadaisical manner the rest of the time. Hungary's twenty million people do not produce as much in the crop line as the 1,700,000 people of Kansas. This shows what the humble, but efficient corn planter and gang plow will do, if allowed to have full sway.

Hungary's cities are Budapest, a beautiful pair of twins with 750,000 population, and the celebrated Danube river, which flows through the country, furnishing transportation, romance, scenery and malaria in great profusion. Hungary's hope lies in the 25,000 Hungarians who come home from America each year with plenty of money and newfangled ideas about agriculture, politics and the infant death rate.

SUSPENSE.

The saddest job on earth is waiting, for good or ill—it's just the same; at other times the hours go scurrying; but when we wait they're halt and lame. Some dire misfortune we are dreading; the waiting's worse than is the blow; we say, "We'd think it better sledding, if grief would do its worst and go." The man who's waiting for the sheriff to lead him to the gallows floor, and there reduce his neck to jelly, is glad when all the waiting's o'er. We wait for some expected blessing, with hopes that buoy, and fears that rack; and waiting for it's so distressing that when it comes we send it back. We wait and wait for dinner, and when it's dished, some two hours late, our appetite, that was a winner, has jumped its job and pulled its freight. When we are kids we're sadly waiting for limping years to make us men; when manhood comes the years we're hating, and wish that we were kids again. We're waiting always, waiting ever, for something foul, or something fair, the end will come to waiting never, until we wait for harps up there.

Blue Ostrich Ties to Die.

(From The New York Press.)

Mike, a fighting ostrich from the wilds of Africa, that found his way by hook or crook to Coney Island, decided to do something like that yesterday by shooting himself in the right eye while despondent, after he was landed from the steamship Oceanic.

As Mike doesn't speak our language well, no one knows what gave him the "blues," but he knew immediately he was lowered over the Oceana's side that he was in a foreign clime that wouldn't in the least appeal to his health.

So Mike, 8 feet tall and as full of fight as a Kilkenny cat, spied a length of hose on the pier as he felt out of his crate. He pressed a claw on one end of the piece of hose and gripped the other end in his beak. Then, keeping the hose taut, he released his claw grip and the hose flew back and whacked him on the right optic. Mike saw his first attempt was futile, but before he could make a second attempt a gang of longshoremen pounced upon him.

Mike, even though he had as black an eye as an ostrich could have, went after the longshoremen in such fashion that most of them took to the rafters. Those who were not swift enough he clawed and pecked. Finally they got a gunny sack over Mike's head and subdued him.

A charge of attempted suicide was preferred against Mike and he was put back in the ship's hold to think anew on the sweetness of life.

Mr. Sheldon's Recital.

Mr. Charles A. Sheldon, Jr., was the presiding artist at the third organ recital given under the auspices of the Georgia chapter of the American Guild of Organists, held at the Trinity Methodist church last Tuesday evening.

It is to be regretted that the Atlanta musical public does not evince a greater and more active interest in these guild recitals. Their purpose has been touched upon before, and they are doing much toward elevating the standard of organ work among our local organists and inspiring them to greater efforts. Most excellent programs, from a historical and instructive as well as entertaining point of view, have been offered, and they have been well worthy of a better and wider patronage than they have received.

Mr. Sheldon's program of Tuesday evening was unanimously pronounced the finest, both as regards selection and rendition, which he has ever presented here. It opened fittingly with the Toccato and Fugue in D minor by Bach, which was followed by selections from celebrated composers of the modern German, English and American schools.

Mr. Sheldon's organ is a fine instrument of almost unlimited possibilities, and he brought out very beautiful effects, especially in his use of the strings and the echo-organ.

Most interesting was the "Harmonies du Soir" by Sigfrid Karg-Elert, a prominent German composer of the present day and an extremist among harmonists, as the above composition clearly exemplifies.

The famous "Largo" from Dvorak's New World Symphony was exquisite in coloring and set forth vividly that plaintive, home-sick note which forms its underlying theme.

The "Minuet in D" in the Mozart-Frysinger arrangement was dainty and graceful and made humorously effective by Mr. Sheldon's original treatment of the bass.

"Dawn," by Charles A. Sheldon, Jr., showed Mr. Sheldon from the creative side. In style and treatment of melody it follows closely the Nevin cult without being imitative, and stamps Mr. Sheldon distinctively as a disciple of the American school.

"Rhapsody" by Silver, "Liebstod" from Tristan u Isolde and the "Third Sonata in E" by Rene S. Becker, a modern German composer, now a resident of Illinois, were interesting and effective numbers.

The members of the chapter were treated to a dainty and most delectable supper by the ladies of Trinity church, which preceded the recital.

The chapter announces the subsequent recitals of the series as follows: Miss Marguerite Bartholomew on March 23 at the Harris Street Presbyterian church, Miss Clementine McGregor on April 20 at the Harris Street Presbyterian church, and Dr. Edwin Arthur Kraft will close the series on May 18 at the Auditorium.

Birthday Party.

One of the bright affairs of Shrove Tuesday evening, "Pancake Night," known to many, was the surprise birthday party given to Miss Minnie Clower by her relatives, at the home of her aunt, Mrs. J. E. Miss Clower was the recipient of many remembrances.

Those present were:

Miss Fort's Bridge Party.

Miss Estelle Fort entertained at a pretty bridge party yesterday morning at her home in honor of Miss Frances Davies, of Indianapolis, who is visiting Mrs. T. B. French. Ferns and bowls of narcissi attaractively decorated the rooms where the game was played.

Miss Fort wore a gown of black messaline and net. Miss Davies wore a black and white checked suit with black hat, and Mrs. French wore blue taffeta.

The Unexpected Guest.

It may be "dear old Jack" whom hubby brings home without warning—just in time for dinner, or perhaps some other good friend, relative or neighbor, who "happens" in at the most unexpected moment. That is a familiar situation for almost every housewife. But nowadays this should not cause undue embarrassment. Make it a point to keep your larder supplied with about a dozen cans of condensed soup from the grocery. And when "Mr. or Mrs. Unexpected" arrives, just add an extra can of tomato soup to the meal. Prepare it as a cream-of-tomato for a first course, and you'll find that this wholesome, satisfying dish is a long step out of your difficulties.

Valentine Party.

Class No. 22, Search Lights, of the First Christian Sunday school, was entertained by Mrs. Horace Hinton last Monday at her home in Inman Park in a delightful manner. The decorations were elaborate, quantities of palms and cut flowers were used, and the red hearts in all sizes were to be seen in every part of the house.

The guests were received by Mrs. Hinton and her mother, Mrs. Frederick, assisted by Mrs. Avant in the drawing room. In the dining room the punch bowl was imbedded in a mound of red carnations, ferns and hearts, and Misses Marion and Tommie Perdue served the punch. Miss Ruth Morgan, of Danville, Ill., distributed valentines.

Much interest in this old science, which until recently had almost lapsed into oblivion except among its ever faithful votaries in the east, is now being manifested by some of the leading business men and society women of America, and is being studied by them as assiduously as though it were the latest thing in commercialism or wide skirts. They are even casting their own horoscopes, and learning much about their capabilities and possible development. In some instances, this art (or fad, as some of their skeptical friends are pleased to term it) has proven very surprising to acquaintances, especially when they are told of certain dates, prolific of events—describing these accurately "even to chapter and verse."

THE SOUTHERN ASTROLOGICAL SCHOOL (first of its kind in this country) has been established at the picturesque little village of Fruithurst (nestling among the vineyards in east Alabama), for the purpose of maintaining this interest by giving lessons in Astrology and distributing all occult literature. A competent teacher (former pupil of a well-known London Astrologer) is in charge of the Horoscope Department and anyone wishing their fortune told in a really scientific manner, with full character delineation and definite information as to the best periods for Health, Money-making, Social Popularity and when Love Affairs are sure to be prominent, will now have opportunity to verify for themselves this science of the Ancients.—(adv.)

GREAT EXPOSITION OPENS ITS GATES

First Day Attendance Records Broken at San Francisco—Wilson Pressed Button That Put Show in Operation.

San Francisco, Cal., February 20.—All records for exposition first-day attendance were broken today at the opening of the Panama-Pacific International exposition. By 4 o'clock this afternoon the turnstiles had clicked off 225,000 admissions, and it was expected that by midnight the total would have reached more than 300,000. The previous record was at the opening day of the St. Louis world's fair, 176,453, in 1914.

The crowd was a spectacle in itself. It filled the grandstands, it packed the great courts and concourses, it poured through the aisles, it overflowed from the sidewalks into the avenues, from the hills to the bay, as far as the eye could reach in unending rivers of bobbing heads.

As the president's personal envoy, Secretary Lane was heard with the closest attention. In the more solemn passages of his oration the vibrations of his voice stirred the audience in sympathy, and there were tears in many eyes as he pointed to the "slender, dauntless, plodding figure standing beside the oxen which looked down upon the court of the nations, where east and west come face to face."

That figure was the American pioneer. His sufferings and triumphs were the orator's theme. This exposition was the house in which should be taught the gospel of an advancing democracy, strong, valiant, confident, conquering. Without him there had been no exposition, no San Francisco.

Miniature Rainbow.

As President Wilson opened the exposition with the touch of a button in the white house, the sun's long slanting rays glinted in a miniature rainbow through the spurting streams of the Fountain of Energy that was at that moment unleashed.

Flags of all the nations rose on manifold poles and pinnacles. Signal bombs were detonated from towers. And an airplane circled about the Tower of Jewels, scattering doves of peace. The doors of the Palace of Machinery swung open and the exhibits within were seen in motion.

The dedicatory ceremonies were made as simple and short as possible. The citizens, headed by Governor Hiram W. Johnson and Mayor Rolph, representing the state and the city, were welcomed to the grounds by the officers and directors of the exposition and federal officers. Addresses were delivered by President C. C. Moore, of the exposition; Dr. Frederick J. V. Skiff, director in chief; Governor Johnson and Secretary Lane.

Shortly after noon the grounds were given over unreservedly to the people.

The exposition will be open tomorrow, and on succeeding Sundays. On Monday the Vanderbilt automobile cup race will take place, to be followed five days later by the Grand Prix race.

The formal aspect of the dedication was made as short and simple as possible.

United States soldiers and marines escorted Secretary Lane, Governor Johnson and the other officials to a stand facing the main entrance to the exposition where they were welcomed by President Charles C. Moore and the other executive officers.

Message From President.

Secretary Lane, President Wilson's personal representative, delivered a brief address, during which he read the telegram from the president:

"Please convey my heartiest congratulations to the authorities of the exposition and express my hope that their highest expectations for its distinguished success will be more than realized."

Continuing, Secretary Lane said:

"Within a month I expect the president himself will be with you to greet the representatives of the nations who have joined in the creation of this new city by the Golden Gate. I come as a token-bearer to speak a feeble foreword to the rich volume of his admiration for your courage, your enterprise and your genius.

"The sculpture who have ennobled these buildings with their work have surely given full swing to their fancy in seeking to symbolize the tale which this exposition tells. And among these figures I have sought for one which would represent to me the significance of this great enterprise.

The Man With the Oxen.

"Prophets, priests and kings are here, conquerors and mystical figures of ancient legend, but these do not speak the word I hear. My eye is drawn to the least conspicuous figure of all—the modest figure of a man standing beside two oxen who look down upon the court of the nations, when east and west come face to face.

"Without him we would not be here. Without him banners would not fly nor bands play. Without him San Francisco would not be today the gayest city of the globe. Shall I tell you who he is, this key figure in the arch of our enterprise? That slender, dauntless, plodding, modest figure is the American pioneer. To me he is far more. He is the adventuresome spirit of our restless race.

"The long journey of this slight, modest figure that stands beside the oxen is at an end. The waste places of the earth have been found. But adventure is not to end. Here will be taught the gospel of an advancing democracy—strong, valiant, confident, conquering—supreme and typified by the independent spirit of the American pioneer."

"Today is the triumph," said Governor Johnson, speaking for California, "of a San Francisco that nine years ago lay in ruins."

Wilson Presses Button.

Washington, February 20.—President Wilson pushed a telegraph key at 3 o'clock this afternoon, giving an electric signal which formally opened the Panama-Pacific exposition at San Francisco.

The flash was conveyed from the white house to San Francisco both over telegraph lines and by wireless.

The president used a telegraph key studded with gold nuggets which was used by President Taft in opening the Alaska-Yukon exposition. Present at the ceremony were Secretaries Bryan, McAdoo, Houston, Wilson, Daniels and Redfield, General Gregory, assistant Secretary Roosevelt, of the navy department; Senators Works and Perkins, and all of the representatives from California, Governor Hamlin, of the federal reserve board, and Commissioner General of Immigration Camilletti.

Promptly at 3 o'clock the president pushed the telegraph key down for several seconds amid a burst of hand clapping.

"This appeals to the imagination rather than to the eye," said the president.

Members of the California congressional delegation thanked him for opening the exposition. He expects to visit it personally later.

RELIEVED OF DRUG USING AND ASTHMA

J. M. Gordon Recommends the James Treatment to Those Addicted to the Use of Opium, Whisky, Tobacco—New Sanitorium 935 S. Bellevue.

I had run my daily dose up to 10 grains. This was the amount I was taking when I went to you for treatment. Now, thanks to God and his remedies, the James treatment, I am thoroughly cured of both the drug habit and the asthma. I enjoy a fine appetite, have gained 20 pounds, sleep like a child, no bad dreams, my bowels are regular, I have no aches or pains, and, although I am now 59 years old, I do not really feel that I am over 40. I work on my farm every day and I feel as strong as I ever did in my life. To the unfortunates of this class will say that everybody connected with the sanatorium is kind and considerate and give the patients every care and attention. J. M. GORDON.

OLIVER IS BLAZER, ASSERTS BROTHER

tomobile and deposited it in the bank. Of course, to the people of a little country village this seemed a wonderful amount of money, and all doubt of him was effaced, and they at once began depositing their money in his bank. When they had put in about $25,000 Oliver, it is said, took it and the $125,000 and carried it back in his automobile to Climax.

Confederates in New York.

One of his operations which was rather hard to explain happened at Havana, Fla. Oliver saw an enterprise there that he wanted to go into, but the company demanded some collateral. He put up about $10,000 collateral and gave the address of a large banking firm in New York, to which he said they could telegraph and find his standing. The telegram was sent, and the reply came that Oliver was O. K. The explanation of the matter was that he had confederates, and the address that he gave must have been wrong in some way, and they received and replied to it. An interview told of how he often worked those who were hard to get at was in regard to a well-known business man who was noted for his extreme carefulness in money matters. Oliver went to his man, and telling him that he was comparatively a stranger to this part of the country, he came to him for advice in investing his money, etc. He pulled out several letters and papers to show him, and apparently without seeing it dropped one which was picked up by the other man when he left, and upon opening it he saw a note showing that Oliver had on deposit to his credit $85,000 in one of the largest banks in New York. The man, of course, bit, and Oliver was, of course, surprised to find he had dropped the letter.

So wonderful were many of his operations and the various things that he did that some of the people had an almost superstitious feeling in regard to him, and when he was placed in jail in Bainbridge before his trial it was generally expected that he would get out of jail in some way, the negroes even believing that no jail could hold him.

His trial before Judge Lane was attended by as many as could possibly get in the room, a number going from Thomasville to hear it. Many stories were told of Oliver's quickness and wit in replying to the lawyers against him, and the greatest proof of the man's power and sharpness was shown in the fact, that despite all these charges against him, he failed to be convicted upon anything but that of bigamy, and that even was doubted.

HALL AND JOYNER MAY BE SELECTED

will not be disturbed, but that the chief, under the new order of things, will be subordinate to the inspector. Many members of council favor giving the inspector unlimited powers in the matter of governing the men of the department, and it is understood that a part of the scheme will be to authorize the inspector to suspend men under charges, and to sit as a military officer at trials of offending officers and men.

It is planned also to change the entire police manual. This will be along lines suggested for increasing the efficiency of the men of both the police and detective departments.

For several weeks prior to the Shrine convention in Atlanta, there was talk of a movement to induce Atlanta's council to appoint Colonel Hall as a sort of provisional police officer to organize a force to see to the safety of the crowds. No effort was ever made to push the matter further.

COLONEL HALL MENTIONED.

But since that time Colonel Hall has been mentioned at various times as a possible head of the department, but it was soon realized that to induce him to give up his business council would first have to raise the dignity of the office, also to make it more attractive by adding to the compensation.

Colonel Hall has been connected with the Fifth regiment for years. Recently he was given the highest commission in the guard, and is now colonel. Since taking command he has made the Fifth the strongest regiment in the south, both in point of numbers and efficiency. At the Augusta encampment he won laurels by mustering more men than any other regiment. Recently, the United States government issued a report showing that the Fifth leads the state in marksmanship.

Colonel Hall is serving his third term in council. He was elected last time with a large majority. Several times he has been urged to make the race for mayor.

He is a member of Yaarab Temple and a number of fraternal orders.

ELECT JOYNER.

If the plan that is said to now be under way is carried out, the city office of fire commissioner will be created and W. R. Joyner, former chief of the fire department and ex-mayor, offered the job.

The report goes so far as to have it that Mr. Joyner has been waited upon by a committee composed of members of council.

Mr. Joyner, when seen by a Constitution reporter, declined to make any statement for publication, but when pressed for an answer he admitted that the matter had been brought to his attention.

"I am not in a position to make any statement," he said. "I have a very excellent position as state fire inspector and I do not know that I would accept the office of fire commissioner if it were tendered me."

City officials and politicians who speak of the report about the creation of the new office, say that such a change would not affect the present organization of the fire department, but would merely create a new head who would be free from the influence of any political wrangles.

When asked about the report, Mayor Woodward said he had not heard of it, but there would be no new office of any kind created for Atlanta if he could step it.

"We have too many offices now," said the mayor, "and it is taking about all of the tax money to pay salaries. I guess if the effort to get a new office on the city hall list gets to be real serious I will hear more about it."

Baby's Happiness Depends On Health

Cross, fretful babies usually need a laxative to make them comfortable, and comfort begets happiness. Constipation is the cause of much discomfort. Mothers should watch closely the condition of their children's bowels and see that they are regular.

A mild, pleasant tasting laxative such as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, is ideal for children because of its natural composition and gentle action, and because it contains no opiate, narcotic or other harmful habit-forming drug. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is sold by druggists everywhere. A teaspoonful at bedtime will bring easy, certain relief.

A free trial bottle can be obtained by writing to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 452 Washington St., Monticello, Ills.

Wanton Waste of the War in Europe, Involving Wool, Cotton, Flax, Linen And Other Materials, Should Transform South Into One Vast Lowell

What the prodigious waste of the war now going on in Europe may mean to the cotton textile industries of the south, is here foreshadowed by Charles H. Platt, of New York, for years a regular contributor to The Constitution, as the author of its weekly New York financial review, and a student of economics of national reputation.

Mr. Platt does not deal in generalities. He piles up verified statistics and cold facts and he speaks with the voice of authority.

He shows that the vast armies, either actually or potentially in the field in Europe, are literally "gobbling up" the world's visible supply of all kinds of textiles, woolen, cotton, linen, flax, etc.

He shows a shrinking wool supply.

He shows by inexorable logic, that ultimately this great loss must be supplied.

Cotton is the fiber he looks to furnish the textiles wiped out of existence. Cotton, which the partnership of the chemist and weaver can today supply in weaves hardly distinguishable from wool or silk and for the same practical purposes.

By direct inference, he points to the south, as the seat of the cotton industry, as the section destined, with the war's readjustment, to become virtually the Lowell for the old world.

The article is fascinating as romance, but riveted by demonstrable figures and facts.

It should be of interest to every farmer, capitalist, manufacturer and business man in the southern states.

—BY CHARLES H. PLATT.
(Specially Written for The Constitution.)

The bullet of a Serbian rifle apparently started world developments which meant years of depression for cotton, and 6 months ago, before it was known that the 1914-15 crop of cotton in the United States was to be larger than any previous one, sales of the great American staple at under 5 cents a pound were talked of as impossible. As judged by the events of wars in the past, the world's needs for cotton would be on a very small scale as long as the war lasted. It was the opinion at that time that with a crop of under 15,000,000 bales, there might be as much as one-third of it left in the cotton country at the end of the crop year.

Leading authorities on economic conditions could see little ahead for landowners in the south but wholesale raising of grain for several years, especially as it was realized quite soon after the start of the European conflagration that it was not going to be a brief war, and that it might last many years. As into-sight and ginning statistics began to appear in the early months of 1915 it became evident that this crop was to be a very large one, gloomy prophecies began to increase, and there were many well informed people who saw in the "buy-a-bale" movement and the plans for government loans to cotton country banks mere temporary aids against an inevitable collapse of cotton prices to the lowest figures of generations.

Then it suddenly became evident that for some reason or other, buying of cotton for home industrial needs was on a heavy scale, and while the export movement in the fall months was light, there were early evidences that a very considerable amount of cotton would soon be needed for Europe. Unexpected support was accorded from the time the cotton exchanges reopened, and even the heaviest selling movement of many years did not bring prices in the exchanges to near the low levels which had prevailed for the staple in the fields during the first few months after the start of the war. Unseen and unknown forces of trade and finance were at work on the cotton market, and even the tide of selling was held back as if by an invisible dam.

Of all the forces working in aid of cotton goods, the war itself is the greatest. Because of its waste, there is already an appalling shortage of raw wool, and with every day that it lasts there is that much nearer approach to an actual famine in wool. Millions of yards of cotton goods are going to destruction at the same time, also huge amounts of linens. Add to these factors which will be set forth in greater detail below, the greater one that the whole world is impoverished or economizing, and it is evident that gradually it will come about that there will be a great increase in the use of cotton goods as the cheapest material for clothing obtainable. Silk is too expensive for most people under present conditions. It may even work out that if the war lasts long enough cotton goods will be the only material for the apparel of the whole world.

The First Consideration.

The first consideration of the forces working for cotton is that of the wool situation. There are probably 10,000,000 men actually engaged in fighting in Europe, with at least as many more under arms and in reserve, while there are several million men ready for service in neutral countries, such as Russia, Italy, Holland, Greece, Bulgaria and the Scandinavian countries. In fact, military recruiting in the entire world has been active for months, and is increasing.

Possibly there are as many as 25,000,000 men under arms and in readiness for any possible event in all parts of the world who were in the civil ranks at this time last year. Most of them belong to the countries, where some woolen equipment is needed. Allowing for 25,000,000 men under arms in the world, in addition to normal numbers in peace times, there are several million more who were in army service in peace times. But even the latter were not in active work day after day as they are in the war, and they were not wearing out their clothes as rapidly as they are now.

The Host Under Arms.

To equip these 25,000,000 men without considering the wear and tear on their clothes, would mean one uniform, one overcoat, one set of underwear, one pair of socks, one sweater, one blanket, and possibly other items such as caps, gloves, muffliers, etc., which wool is used. The average weight of these, according to specifications accompanying orders for army supplies which have been placed in this country, are: Overcoat, about 4 pounds of wool; another and 2 pounds of cotton yarns; and for all minor garments about 6 to 7 pounds of wool and 2 to 3 pounds of cotton. There have been large amounts of cloth furnished the armies in which only wool or woolen-cotton mixtures were used. On the basis, however, taking the lowest figure for wool used, there would be about 17 pounds of clean wool needed for the equipment of each soldier. That would mean 425,000,000 pounds of clean wool for one outfit for each man, for all of the new recruits in the world up to date. Then there would be needed the product of at least a quarter of a year of the sheep of the world to supply these men and the others under arms with one outfit. For each pound of clean wool there are over two pounds of unscoured, or grease wool shorn from the sheep. In cleaning wool, large amounts of short hairs, dirt and other valueless matter are lost. Therefore, there would be close to 1,000,000,000 pounds of grease wool needed for all of the fighting army of Europe to equip all of the men who have been equipped for just one outfit. The average production of grease wool in this country is about 7½ pounds per year, so that it would take 133,333,333 sheep to produce 1,000,000,000 pounds of wool in this grease if the world's production per sheep is as high as that of this country, which is to be doubted. There are about 400,000,000 sheep in the whole world, according to the latest figures obtainable, but plenty of them do not produce wool serviceable for spinning.

The World Demand For Wool.

This statistical statement, however, there is not any allowance made for other items used by the armies in which the wearers. There are blankets, coverings for sleeping mats, and even tents in the cold weather have been made of woolen cloth, according to report. Horses' coverings are another source of demand on the wool supply.

It is impossible to be accurate in estimating the amount of wool needed, but members of firms supplying the armies with materials who have seen the above figures state that they are undoubtedly most conservative, and on the basis of reckoning taken by some textile experts, the product of all of the sheep in the world will be taken in a year just for armies. Undoubtedly such a calculation is too liberal.

In any event, turning now to the question of renewal of equipment, the life of a uniform, overcoat, sweater, socks, etc., under conditions such as exist in warfare cannot come anywhere near equaling that of garments in use for peaceful pursuits. Estimates of the average life of an overcoat and uniform in this war, where there is the most severe campaigning, is that there are unusual conditions of men by the million in trenches all of the time instead of vast numbers in small detachments in towns and cities, where all efforts are being made to keep the men clean, healthy and happy through giving them the best possible equipment, make allowance for the wearing apparel for outer use less than five weeks and inner garments less than three weeks. There are also considerations, such as that of the gathering of vermin and filth in clothing, stains from wounds and powder explosions, destruction by shell fire, etc., making it to prevent materials falling into enemies' hands, and other items to cut down the average life of equipment materially. Another cause of loss is destruction to prevent disease. It is reported that the English army surgeons have ordered all wearing equipment of the men in the field destroyed after four weeks, and all old clothing burned with chemicals. According to this information, this has been done in such a way that disease has been kept at the smallest ratio of any war on record, but it has meant huge obliteration of clothing.

Longer the War, Worse the Effect.

It has been estimated, by the processes above, that with an average life of five weeks for outer and three weeks for inner wear, the clothing of the world is now wearing out in active fighting, about 1,000,000,000 pounds of clean wool would be used up in a year. Deducting from this every possible thing which would offset the waste of war, and taking away everything else possible, and it is still very apparent that the armies of Europe, not counting those not in the war, are now taking a very large part of the available supply of wool. Huge exports of wool and cloth from this country, and the amounts in which wool is used, are good evidence of the enormous proportions of the army demand. One factor which has not been considered is that large proportions of the men who are engaged in the war are of the peasant classes, people who ordinarily make clothes last a very long time, sometimes passing articles of clothing from generation to generation, and remaking clothes again and again. They are wasteful of raw materials most profligately.

All this is more or less realized by wool men. They have seen some of the commoner grades of wool advance in price over 100 per cent, while the smallest advance in wool for clothing purposes has been 25 per cent, and in the last six months. Supplies on hand are very limited, and there has been a tremendous demand for addings. Manufacturers are naming the highest prices on record for their supplies, and yet even these substitutes now are hard to obtain in sufficient volume all of the time. Wools formerly considered only fit for use in carpets and rugs, wools in which the fiber is very bristly, are going into clothing. Thousands of bales of carpet grade wools have been used for material for army overcoats. Carpet manufacturers are unable to get supplies for normal needs, and prices for some carpet wools are prohibitive for their means. Advances have been made in cloth, but so far the average individual has not felt the effects of the waste of wool. For the time, with buying demand all over the country at a low point, the shortage of wool and the shortage of cloth has not been felt. There are still large stocks of clothing left over from two poor seasons during the past year, and prices on them are low.

Wool Going Like Magic.

Wools and woolen goods men are emphatic in predicting that even if the war should stop now, that this country, and, in fact, the whole world, will feel most sharply the advance in prices and the shortage of supplies. This may not be generally felt, however, for another six months to a year, before the war lasts, however, the worse conditions will be.

Carpet manufacturers have been the first to feel what is happening. They cannot get supplies of wool, but they have large stocks of carpets on their hands now. However, before long, sooner or later there will be a renewal of demand for their products, they are now turning their machinery to "rag carpets," in which cotton rags are used. One manufacturer at Amsterdam has turned a large part of the machinery over to these cotton-rag carpets. In cloth for clothing purposes there has been an increased amount of cotton yarns used in recent months, to offset the advance in prices for wool which have not been made up in higher cloth prices in full.

Irish Linen Hit Hard.

Another thing which will soon make the shortage in wool known to every one is that normally this country imports a large amount of woolen goods, while practically none are arriving, and there have been unusual exports for army purposes. Furthermore, thousands if not millions of people in this country have gone on unusually long period with small purchases of clothing. What they have is wearing out, while better industrial and financial conditions make it probable that before long there will be a heavy buying movement. In Europe and other countries a renewal of wearing apparel is inevitable, sooner or later, although there has been little since the war started.

Turning from the consideration of wool to that of flax, equally serious conditions exist. In Europe there are large amounts of linens used much as heavy cotton duck and sheeting are used in this country for all kinds of general service. In the war many coverings, tents and other articles are in linens. This means a huge wastage of cloth for the same reasons as for woolen goods. Furthermore, Russia, where at least three-quarters of the world's supply of flax for linen thread comes from, has placed an embargo on all flax exports. Even Great Britain, her ally, cannot get any, as Russia is now using all of its supplies for herself, largely for making linen for army purposes.

When the Tide Turned.

The Irish linen industry is only able to get enough linen thread to keep pace with its army needs, and further exports of this textile to the United States are out of the question, owing to the prohibitive prices being asked for the small amount of linen now available on the other side. There is a little linen produced in this country, and linen importers are preparing to go into other lines because of their goods stocks are depleted. One of the largest firms, one which has been selling linen for sixty years, a few days ago took up the agency for cotton coverings for automobile cotton goods manufacturers, and this house will later go into cotton goods exclusively rather than linens. Linen prices are now far beyond the pocketbooks of many women who formerly used them for dress purposes, while prices are continually hardening. Besides the loss of linen manufacturing in the countries mentioned, consideration should be given to the fact that the machinery of Belgium and northern France, where the German invasion has reached, is probably destroyed, or at least will not be of importance for years to come.

Cotton Clothes During Summer.

In connection with silks, there was a time a few weeks ago when it was possible that silk would displace cotton goods through the depression in the raw silk market. Prices for raw materials and finished goods were on the downward trail when there came a recovery which has already brought about an advance of about 20 per cent in piece goods prices since January 15, with the market still advancing. There will be plenty of silk, apparently, for all needs, but in times of depression and economizing such as the whole world has felt since the war started, it is evident that an increase in the consumption of silk is not likely, while a decrease is more probable. Furthermore, for women's dresses, high grade cotton goods have been more in favor in recent years than they used to be. Finishing effects, greater care in turning out good appearing materials, and great care in dyeing so as to assure fabrics which have aided cotton dress materials in gains in recent years for wear of women of means.

Auto Tires Ruined Rapidly.

Another war effect on cotton has been that of wastage of cotton goods. This takes place in thousands of ways. In the first place, to branch off apparently, there are possibly 200,000 automobiles in use in the war, and they are being given the roughest usage that they have ever known in the short history of the automobile industry. It is estimated that tires are cut to pieces on the roads, through enemies' bullets and in other ways at the fastest pace ever known. The life of a tire has been set at from two to four days. Overcrowding of automobiles is a frequent occurrence each day on the battle fronts, where they are used for transporting men, also overloading with supplies is known to be of frequent occurrence. All this operates to put a tremendous strain on the tires, and cut down their average life from thirty days to a few days, possibly 40,000,000 to 50,000,000 tires are being destroyed a year in the war. Each tire contains a large amount of cotton, usually a specially heavy cotton duck. This cannot be used again in any way, and the tire is no longer serviceable for auto-mobiles, because the rubber only is of value, and in order to get it out of the tire, if there is any effort at reclamation, the tire is soaked in acids, which eat out the cotton duck will be destroyed in warfare this way it is impossible to estimate, but there can be no doubt but that the size of the total will sooner or later have some effect on the cotton and cotton goods market.

Pending Demand For Cotton Goods.

Another indirect waste of cotton goods is in rubber raincoats, boots and other rubber covered materials. Large amounts of these are being used at a rapid rate, and there is also a large item of waste of cotton goods in them. In direct use are many cotton garments, automobile hoods, tents, cases for guns and cannon coverings, etc. Unlike the case of wool, it is impossible to get even approximate estimates as to the amount of goods and of cotton used, but it is not difficult to see that there must be a drain on cotton goods supplies which will be an important factor sooner or later, and which will be more and more important as to the cotton goods and cotton market the longer the war lasts.

There are many other factors which may result from the effects of the war or from the effects of high prices in other textiles which will have more or less influence on the cotton goods market. One of these is that if prices for men's wear woolen goods get low enough they will be made in future summers in the north to get men to wear cotton goods clothing during the warm weather. Efforts have been made in the past to introduce white wear in New York, Boston and other cities for business and general use among men. It is not hard for the advocates of such styles to get men to wear white at beaches and summer resorts nearby, but it is rare to see outer clothing in cotton goods in use in the business sections of northern cities even on days when temperatures make woolens insanitary and foolish. It is the opinion of style experts that some ground may be gained this summer, and that possibly with present tendencies in wool and woolen prices, that great inroads can be made on prejudices among men in the northern cities by the summer of 1916. It is believed that if the demand for cotton goods for men's wear once gets firmly rooted in northern cities during the summer, it is probable that it will remain.

South America To Contribute.

Still another consideration which may have some effect on goods made from cotton is that of the shortage of dye materials. A very large proportion of the dyes used in this country in all kinds of textiles came from Germany. It is hard to get supplies from there and while stocks of dyes on hand are sufficient for needs for the next few months, before long an actual dye famine is expected if the war goes on. It is a strong probability that within another year there will not be enough dye materials for one-quarter of the various textiles manufactured in this country if the war lasts. That would mean a great increase in white goods, or goods in which only a small amount of dye is needed. There are no textiles which are as satisfactory in plain whites as cotton goods. Furthermore, because of the smaller amount of bleaching and finishing needed in cotton goods, it will be much cheaper to make cotton up in plain white than it would cost for such preparation of any other material. Many lines of cotton dress goods in which a small flower-ed or other design is printed on the goods, or woven in, where the main surface is in plain white are already in great demand and will be more attractive effects. Only a small amount of dye is needed for them.

Cotton goods men have some small inkling of what is going on in Europe to help them out. If not now, in future seasons.

Cotton Goods Consumption.

For the time, demand for cotton goods in this country has been below normal for a variety of economic reasons, but with export orders counted in, mill takings of cotton have been equal to the average of peace times, and in some months above the average of recent years even since the war started. It is not thought to be not far distant when a huge increase in demand for cotton cloth for the world's civil population will have to be met, even though this might be only for the supply normally needed and not to displace any smaller buying of woolens, linens and silks. It is doubtful if the manufacturers of Europe will be able to get enough skilled labor to take care of manufacturing goods for civil use. The greatest use of the more than 4,300,000 bales of cotton exported from the United States from August 1 to mid-February in Europe has been in making up goods for army needs, and even then large purchases of cotton goods for direct army use have been made in this country. At the present rate of increase of exports over last year, it is believed that the present shrinkage of over 2,000,000 bales in the movement as compared with exports for the same time last year will be made up for before August 1 without considering the needs of more and more goods from this country.

South American trade in cotton goods has been of small moment for either Europe or the United States, while the Asiatic trade has been negligible, even in remote Chili and China must have clothing sooner or later. It is the opinion of the world can go along for another year without much addition to its supply of cotton cloth, and for that reason even those who take the greatest optimism regarding the future of cotton are loth to advocate the production of another large crop for next year. It is improbable that the world's consumption which is being reported all of the time will work off more than 15,000,000 bales of the present crop, and there might even be as much as 4,000,000 bales of it on hand at the end of the crop year. For that reason, another large crop might drive down cotton prices for the best part of another year. The most competent textile authorities believe, however, that all of the facts mentioned in this article will operate for the greatest demand for cotton in the course of the next few years that the country has ever seen.

NEW GRAND OPERA STARS TO BE HEARD THIS YEAR

his power. The women, however, thinking him sufficiently punished, relieved him, with an earnest caution to beware in future of lying.

To Pamina, now engaged in her service, they brought from their mistress an enchanted flute, in whose tones was hidden so magical a power as to protect its bearer in all dangers, to change the passions of men from the sad joyous, and fill the envious and violent with friendship and love.

To Papageno, who was forced into the service of Tamino by command of the queen, they gave a casket, containing a set of musical bells, similar in power to the magic flute.

Pamina, meantime, might have been happy in the peaceful halls of the priest of Isis, but for the feelings natural to a daughter, and for the audacious design of an ugly negro, Monostatos, the head of Sarastro's troop of black slaves, who took advantage of his position to treat her as a prisoner, and to force his disgusting attentions upon her. In the afternoon of that day upon which the Queen of Night had gained an ally in Prince Tamino, the negro succeeded in forcing Pamina into a lonely apartment in the castle, and threatened her with death unless she would consent to become his bride. The poor girl fainted, and fell back upon the divan. At this moment Papageno, who had been sent to seek Pamina, came stealthily into the apartment. The figure and face of the beautiful Pamina instantly caught his eye and filled him with admiration, to which his thoughts, as usual, gave utterance. The negro started up affrighted. Papageno was no less frightened by the black face of Monostatos. Each took the other for the devil, and fled in different directions. Papageno, however, soon conquered his fears, and returned to Pamina. He related to her that she was set and deserted, not to trust him and escape. After some hesitation, Pamina acceded, and they left the castle together.

Tamino advanced directly toward the great gates of Sarastro's castle. Having reached the open space before them, he gazed upon the vastness and grandeur of the edifice with astonishment and wonder—nevertheless was strongly was he prejudiced by the words of Sarastro, that he saw nothing in all this magnificence but the emblems of a tyrannical ruler. He advanced to the temple, tortured and mittance at two of the gates, he turned to the third, from which a priest came forth and enlightened him as to the real character and intentions of Sarastro, and an indescribable longing for something, he knew not what, had seized him.

To this cry of the prince, a choir of invisible voices replied in mysterious tones: "Ere long, or never."

Surprised, but rejoiced that his words, involuntarily spoken, had been heard and answered, he resolved to ask if Pamina still lived, and the same chorus replied, "Pamina still liveth."

In a transport of joy he applied the flute to his lips, and was delighted by its magical effect. In a few moments his tones were answered by the Pan's pipe of Papageno, who in distance. Tamino instantly knew the sound, and hurried away to find his servant. Deceived by the echoes he took the wrong direction, and was hardly out of sight when Papageno and Pamina, who had succeeded in eluding their pursuers, appeared in front of the castle. Pamina in her anxiety and terror hastily recalled aloud for Tamino. Papageno hushed her at once, and applied himself to his Pan's pipe. The lute at once answered the tone, and in the next moment they could all have embraced each other and might easily have escaped, but for the unfortunate call of Pamina, which had betrayed them and brought at this instant the negro and his whole train of slaves upon them. Pamina at once lost all hope, and so for the moment did her companion; but it suddenly occurred to him that the three women had given him the casket of bells as a protection. He immediately opened it and began to play. The slaves were instantly enchanted, and could move their limbs only in accordance with the music, after which they departed. The way was now clear, and the fugitives again set out upon the search for Tamino. It was too late.

From the opposite sides of the open space where they were, now entered Sarastro with a host of followers, in splendor and majesty. Pamina threw herself at his feet, but he gently lifted her up. At this moment they were interrupted by the entrance of Monostatos and his slaves, bringing Tamino as a captive.

Their First Embrace.

But now came one of those moments, when a sudden feeling overpowers all considerations of time and place. They lived but for the other—and in the very presence of Sarastro—within reach of his hand, they rushed into each other's arms—their first, perhaps their final, embrace.

Sarastro turned to two of the chief priests and commanded them to conduct Tamino and Papageno to the temple of probation and purification, then giving his hand to Pamina led her in through the grand portal, once more to the palace.

We now proceed to the court of Sarastro.

It was the custom at these solemn meetings, in the discussion of important questions, for the priests to make known their concurrence with the views of their chief by joining with him in a long blast upon the trumpets. So now, in reply to the question whether Tamino had thus far proved himself worthy to be admitted to the final trials of his courage, steadfastness, self-control, truth, and faith, it raised the trumpets to their lips and gave their assent in long and solemn tones. Sarastro then raised his hands to the gods, while the choir of priests bowed reverently, occasionally joining in his invocation, and solemnly prayed for his success in the trials of wisdom and virtue and wisdom to the candidates.

The high priests, obeying the orders of their master, came immediately to the gardens, where they left them to themselves. As the prince had borne his confinement with courage, he was now to be subjected to a new trial of his faith in Sarastro's wisdom and good will. The priests warned him and his servant to beware of the arts of women, and let what may happen, not answer them not; and with these warnings led them away to one of the beautiful gardens, where they left them. They were not long alone, for suddenly Tamino, looking up from the book upon which he had been poring himself, saw the three women of the Queen of Night before him. They began to tempt him by all the arts of which the deep, passionless nature of women was already determined upon, and reminded him of his promises to their mistress, who, they informed him, had made her way into the castle in search of Pamina. Tamino listened in silence. He answered them not, trusted them not.

Meantime, in another garden, which extended down to the bank of the river, Pamina, weary and exhausted, had thrown herself upon a seat and fallen asleep. Monostatos, with all evil passions raging in his bosom, entered, determined to steal a kiss from the sleeping girl. His design was frustrated by a peal of thunder—the Queen of Night was there. Here was the fatal trial for Pamina. Her mother, unable to take her away from Sarastro, now only desired revenge upon him, she inveighed with hatred and rage, she gave Pamina a dagger, and in an awful oath swore by the gods that unless she plunged it into the heart of Sarastro she should forever be cast out of the mother's heart. With this threat she vanished. Sarastro now approached, and taking Pamina again gently by the hand, confronted her with the assurance that the probation was over, and that the next day, did Tamino conquer, she should be united to him forever.

Another great test of Tamino's steadfastness and faith now came. Papageno appeared, seeking her lover. Obedient to his vow he turned from her, and to all her expressions of love, to all her appeals made no reply, though he wavel her off with feelings of agony no less heart-breaking than her own. Still he preserved his faith in Sarastro, and broke not his vow. As Pamina retired, the two high priests returned to lead the prince and his servant away. Tamino obeyed at once. The trials of fire, water, etc., assembled in the dark temple. The chief ordered the prince and princess to be brought in. Pamina, full of faith in Sarastro's promise. He bade the lovers take leave of each other, but comforted them with the assurance that Tamino would endure to the end, and that they would meet in joy. The cause of Tamino's apparent coldness and harshness to the fair maiden was explained to Pamina; but her faith was shaken, and when her lover was again led from the assembly, her reason gave way.

But the crisis had passed. The sound of the flute in the distance, and the assurance that Tamino was safe, and was not real, that her love was returned in fullest measure, restored her to herself, and she besought to be brought at once to him to share his fate, whatever it might be. This was granted.

Tamino was now brought to the last test—that of purification by the elements. It was led to the gates of the burning lake, and boldly gave the command, "Open the terrible portals!" At this moment Pamina, who had unhesitatingly besought permission to join him, it was granted. So, leaning on his arm, they passed through the fiery billows, ascended the broad stairs into the temple, and knelt before the altar, and Sarastro, amid acclamations of triumph.

The eventful night was now nearly at an end. The Queen of Night still hoped to have her revenge. Her three women, accompanied by Monostatos, whom she had inflamed against Sarastro, sought stealthily to destroy him. But at this moment, at a sign from him, the wall, which alone divided him from his enemies, disappeared, and the bright rays of the glorious morning sun darted full upon them. Like obscene birds of night, they fled ravs forever, while Tamino and Pamina joined hands and received the blessing of the priest-ruler, amid the joyous and triumphant chorus of priests and the grand assembly.

PRICE OF OIL WILL GO UP SOON, THINKS VISITING MAGNATE

Although Colonel J. B. Duffey, a wide oil magnate of Pittsburg, with holdings in all the great oil producing sections of the country, is in Atlanta taking a week's recreation from the labors of a professional oil expert, while visiting his son, Mr. H. E. Duffey, of 67 Arlington avenue, he cannot free his mind and conversation of the interesting data incident to the obtaining and the marketing of this product. Colonel Duffey does not look upon the present state of the oil market with great concern. Although large quantities can no longer be sold to Germany, he believes that an adjustment will be soon arranged through which such products will be admitted. Furthermore, the present market, which is glutted by the constant large flow from the gushing fields in Oklahoma, is soon to be relieved as the latter fields are showing signs of exhaustion.

MANY WOULD ENTER TECH NIGHT SCHOOL

Many students are now applying for admission in the night school of the Georgia School of Technology, which willbegin its spring term March 8. The registration lists for the spring term classes will be open from March 1 to March 8, but in view of the fact that the classes are held at night and not at the regular school hours, it is the purpose of the school to give instructions to those who are unable to attend schools in the day. Professor J. N. G. Nesbit, dean of the school, has announced that new students may apply now for the spring term and that they will be classified as rapidly as possible.

"There's a Reason" for Grape-Nuts

In the Social Whirl

By Isma Dooly

NO MATTER how frivolously and cheerfully inclined we may be these days, the mind and heart will turn instinctively to the war zone. The war has been on seven months now and we naturally begin to anticipate its effect, not merely upon those, the direct sufferers in their human losses, and in the more material losses of fortune, but upon the mental attitude of the people, upon their conditions.

I had wondered among other things what the influence of the disaster had so far been upon the militants. I have neither condemned nor condoned them, for I have never had time to study the question with its both sides.

I asked Corra Harris, during a recent visit I made her, after her studious visit to the war zone: "Are the militants any less militant? What did you see or hear of them?"

"The women have declared a truce," replied Mrs. Harris, "but the men haven't."

"Women have been forbidden the galleries of parliament while I was in London. The story was authoritatively published, that a sergeant-at-arms, looking in the gallery, and believing he saw a militant offender, rushed to the scene and was about to drag from his seat in the gallery none other than a Cornish gentleman, one of the editors of The New Statesman. He was of aesthetic appearance, with his long hair and fleffy tie, his long, graceful coat, while over his long, slender white hand fell the bangle of a gold chain bracelet he wore.

THE INFLUENCE ON FASHION.

The influence of the war on world fashion is a semi-frivolous theme, that the press has already taken up with that alacrity the press always does anything easy of discussion.

Atlanta has already seen the little Scotch caps with the streamers hanging off the back, like those the Highland soldier wears. No matter what the millinery name of these is, in Atlanta they will always be called the "little hoot mon" hats. An Atlanta woman who had been ill for a long time went out for the first time to a teadance at one of the clubs. Scarcely had she been seated, than a lady appeared wearing the Highland headgear.

"Who is the 'hoot mon' lady?" asked Madame "L'Invalide" of her husband. At that moment, she caught another glance of the fair dancer, and to her horror, saw an inch or so above the mark of the shoe top.

"My dear," exclaimed Madame "L'Invalide," "tell me before I look again, has she or has she not got on the kilts?"

OUR "EASINESS."

The truth is, the American woman, with her big mind and her big heart and her full pocketbook, is an easy mark, and she has been imposed upon. She has too readily taken any fashion put upon her by the foreign market and too readily paid a double price for it—and the dub on it. She has chosen to imitate rather than create by the matter of her raiment—and it is upon this and spends more money than for anything else, and more than any other woman in the world.

American women rank in science, in art, in music, in literature. They boast their independence of spirit, their courage, their force and let they sell out their individuality of appearance and are universally known as the "easy mark" by the foreign fashion market.

Atlanta women are generally recognized to be beyond the average in beauty and style. It is the first comment by the traveled foreigner arriving here. They are not necessarily more extravagant than other women, but their living, their tastes and their accomplishment require their expenditures for entertaining and for clothes. Now this is a crucial moment in national and southern commerce, and it would be interesting to see just what the effect in this community would be if all the women in Atlanta this year who have been buying expensive models in Paris and New York would buy them here. The Atlanta Woman's club is pushing such a movement, encouraging the purchase especially of the opera trousseau here.

This movement would in no way cripple our relations with the northern markets with which our merchants do business. Atlanta modistes of rank go to the northern markets regularly, and they have their correspondence with the Parisian market—so that Atlanta women, I predict, will look just as charming this year at opera wearing Atlanta gowns.

ABOUT LENT.

Nobody ever knows exactly how Lent is going to be observed in Atlanta. There never is as much in the society column during Lent because many people do not like their social activities chronicled at that time.

It is interesting to note that many women are planning study and reading the opera recitals at the Atlanta Woman's club on Thursday mornings at 11 o'clock, attracting many, not only of the club members but outsiders. Mrs. John Marshall Slaton is chairman of the musical committee and Mrs. McGovern, the president of the club, initiated the recitals to which the best musical talent will contribute.

The postponed meeting of the Alliance Francaise will take place next Friday afternoon at the University club, Madame Slifer to preside.

Since the visit of M. Brieux and his inspiring lecture, and the daily growth of sympathy and admiration for France in her present heroic struggle, a greater interest, if that were possible, is being manifested among the members of the Atlanta Alliance Francaise.

An Atlanta man, hearing of the large audience who greeted M. Brieux, who followed appreciatively every word he uttered in his address made in French, remarked that he was surprised that there were so many people in Atlanta who understood and spoke French.

He rather suggested that perhaps the fact of M. Brieux being a celebrity attracted some. Whatever Atlanta people may be accused of, I replied to him, they cannot be called intellectual poseurs. They are not going to any lecture or any entertainment they do not like, for they do not have to. The social and acting clubs are always open here; there are theaters and moving pictures; noted cafes to patronize; there is the automobile. The students of French who went to hear M. Brieux had anticipated him for many months with real joy. While he was still here they subscribed to a lecture from Edmond Rostand, who will speak here in November.

WHERE DO THEY LEARN?

"But where have these people learned French?" asked the gentleman, still incredulous about Atlanta's French scholarship.

Then did I pay tribute to Atlanta's high school, which has for years maintained French instructors of the highest rank, and year after year graduates leaving that institution have had the basic training of French, which has enabled them to pursue the knowledge. That was one of the ways of M. Brieux's large audience.

The story is oft told among Atlanta's older elements of society of the French circle organized here thirty years ago, when a dinner party was given and the guests informed that only French was to be spoken. The hostess had a beautiful daughter, and among her suitors was one who did not speak French and when he accepted, any way, the invitation to the French dinner. That day he went to a friend, likewise to be of the party, and confessed how little he knew.

"That's all right," said the more talented friend. "I will tell a good joke, and when I get through you look much amused, and respond, 'Oui monsieur, non.' The crowd won't know you are not wise." That night the party assembled, and the "conversation" began in excellent form. "Monsieur" appealed to "Madame," and there was much "ouiet non" and "merci beaucoup," when suddenly the friend, Frank, we will call him, began, and miserable wretch that he was, told the story in French of how his friend had come to him: what he had told him to do. The guests laughed immoderately. Z waited for the story from his friend to do his little part. It came. A mischievous wink, and poor Z in the excitement of the moment, blurted out, "Boo, Lon Bank; boo."

MR. WARDE ASSISTED.

Mr. Frederick Warde assisted Mr. Harrison A. Johnson auction the luncheon at the benefit entertainment at Mrs. William Lawson Peel's Tuesday night. Though a benefit entertainment, it was first and foremost a society function. Everybody wore their best; there was the best of music, and the luncheons auctioned emphatically proclaimed that despite the fact we hear good cooks are on the wane in Atlanta, there are many left. Mrs. Wimer Moore had charge of the feature dancing, assuring the success of that part of the program.

The proceeds of the entertainment will go toward the building fund for the home of the Joseph Habersham chapter, D. A. R. Just how long it will take to raise the fund depends upon the response of the public to a patriotic and notable cause, states Mrs. Peel, who is faithfully and energetically promoting the movement.

PLANTATION DAYS.

The Drama league did not have time between its protest against the presentation of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" as a drama that once threatened to be a national drama, and the occasion of another war. Every organization of patriotic, philanthropic or social purpose entered its protest, and that simultaneously—to Manager Homer George and Manager Walter S. Baldwin and to the mayor of the city and his secretary and dramatic critic, Jeffney Ormond. The mayor has realized the immense import of the drama in its relation to Atlanta's progress, therefore, Mr. Ormond, Manager George, in his expert knowledge of the American audience, and believing with Doctor William Norman Guthrie, who recently commented here upon the fact that American audiences loved to experience awful and harrowing scenes, and to have their emotions tested to the utmost, saw the time was ripe here for the revival of the once famous school of the drama. "East Lynne" had been wept over in the movies, large audiences sobbed convulsively very recently over "Camille," and the climax of the emotional renaissance was planned for by Manager George in "Uncle Tom's Cabin." As special souvenirs of the occasion he had arranged to present the lady patrons with dainty handkerchiefs in the corners of some printed "Little Eva," on others "Uncle Tom." In order to encourage emotional expression on the part of children, each little one entering the theater was to be presented with a pair of raincloth rompers, so that they might cry unrelaxedly in the last act when little Eva is borne right up by the ends of her blue sash, through the stage roof, up to the golden gates hung over by angels, all of whom are little boys.

Now, the mayor has ordered a censorship of the play by Mr. Ormond. Certain parts are to be expurgated. That would seem to satisfy, but a nice point has arisen and that justly.

Will Mr. Ormond, who stands pat always for the art of the drama, be qualified to direct the change of the play, clinging tenaciously, as he certainly will, to the art of it? Will he know where art ought to step out and let patriotism in? Ought there not to be some one representing pure patriotism in the censoring of the play?

Again, who will see to it that the first and principal purpose of this drama—to arouse to flood-gate pitch—the emotions, will not be sacrificed?

GEORGIA GIRL WHO IS MAKING A NAME IN MUSICAL WORLD

Miss Louise MacHenry is a Georgia girl, spending this winter in Atlanta, who has already earned a broad southern reputation by her interpretative readings on the lyceum stage.

She is from Madison, Ga., but is making Atlanta her headquarters, and has done some delightful recital work in it, notably before the Sunday night club at the Georgian Terrace and at other drawing room entertainments.

A well modulated voice is a feature of her training and equipment, which is broad enough to permit considerable latitude and variety in the selection of her programs. A piquant beauty also prejudices her audiences at once in her favor.

Steals Electric Button And Then Sells It Back To Bakery That Owned It

According to his own admission, he swiped an electric button from the George Mau bakery, 223 Peachtree street, one night and went back to the bakery the next day and sold it to a young lady clerk for 35 cents.

USE COCOANUT OIL FOR WASHING HAIR

If you want to keep your hair in good condition, the less soap you use the better.

Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and is very harmful. Just plain mulsified cocoanut oil (which is pure and entirely greaseless), is much better than soap or anything else you can use for shampooing, as this can't possibly injure the hair.

Simply moisten your hair with water and rub it in. One or two teaspoonfuls will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather, and cleanses the hair and scalp thoroughly. The lather rinses out easily, and removes every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves it fine and silky, bright, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified cocoanut oil at most any drug store. It is very cheap, and a few ounces is enough to last everyone in the family for months.

IF YOU TAKE TOO MUCH CALOMEL YOU WILL BRING ON RHEUMATISM

Because the Mercury in the Calomel Attacks the Bones and Develops a Painful Mercurial Rheumatism.

Calomel is a powerful mercurial drug. That is why it is used as a strong purgative to obstinate biliousness. But mercury will crash into the sour bile, break it up and throw it off forcibly, and it is the shock of the mercury and the bile coming together that causes the awful nausea, vomiting and sometimes even salivation. A shock such as this always weakens the system and in a few weeks there is another bilious attack and another dose of calomel is necessary. It does not require much reasoning to prove that each bilious attack roots into the system a little deeper and a greater shock is necessary to dislodge it. And every dose of calomel that you take is putting mercury into your system, and mercury is a powerful chemical which attacks the bones and causes a gradual wasting away. This is necrosis of the bone, or mercurial rheumatism, the most painful and the most dangerous form of rheumatism.

JACOBS' LIVER SALT is better than calomel every way. It contains no mercury; it flushes stomach and bowels and cleanses of all sourness and clogging waste; and it dissolves the uric acid which the fermenting waste has generated, and passes it off in the urine. When the blood is freed from this thickening, poisonous acid, and the pressure of clogging waste removed, liver and bowels will resume their normal activity without forcing.

The action of JACOBS' LIVER SALT is quick but mild. It contains the same sulphates that are in the system to digest food, and consequently combines most easily with the fulces of the stomach and acts naturally, without griping, nausea or vomiting.

JACOBS' LIVER SALT is the best liver stimulant made. If you are bilious it will cure you. If you are well take it and keep well, for every one's liver is apt to get sluggish occasionally, and prevention is always better than cure. A glass of Jacobs' Liver Salt is bubbling and pleasant—a fine beforebreakfast habit. No substitute can have the same uric acid solvent action ½ pound jar, 25 cents at druggists. Jacobs' Pharmacy, Atlanta.—(adv.)

POLICE MATINEE PEN SHOTS

By Gordon Nahl Hutchison

They Caught Joe Napping.

Squally Times for Liza.

They found Joe sleeping by a stack.
With only hay for wrapping,
Which caused Judge Johnsing to remark:

"Say, Joe, they caught you napping."

"If your honor, please," said the officer, "we have here the notorious Joe Webster with a string of aliases as long as a blacksmith's ladder."

"And that's no dream," interrupted Recorder Johnson.

"He's been stealing every night and sleeping every day," continued the officer, "for quite a while, and we caught him this morning under a hay-stack fast asleep."

"Our 'Little Boy Blue,'" remarked the recorder, "so come blow your own horn, Joe. Your records going to do it for you just at this particular juncture."

"I was cotched an' dat's all dere is ter hit," muttered Joe as he rolled the white of his eyes at the policeman.

"Caught you under a hay-stack," mused the recorder. "The cops must have had the cards stacked on you, for they caught you napping. I think they did you a favor, Joe, for you might have caught the hay-fever. I know you think your heyday is over and it will be for some time, for we gen't have a boy dreaming the happy hours away when he won't work and steals."

"Go on an' do what yer's gwine ter do wid me, Jedge Johnsing," exclaimed the prisoner. "I haint here for no foolerness."

"I was just going on to say," continued the recorder, "that the police beat you at your own game. You had been stealing, so they stole—a march on you. So we will have to march you out to the stockade and stop you sleeping in the hay during the day and flitting around at night with airy footsteps and light fingers. After life's flitful fever, you'll sleep well."

"Here's Liza Stallings er standin' right face ter face wid yer," called out a typically rotund Darktown washerwoman.

"Liza," said Recorder Johnson, "you are charged with cruelty to your one-year-old baby. The officer says you sousd the kid in a tub of water that was filled with soap suds, so you are now in the suds yourself."

"Yas er church 'omah, Jedge Johnsing," explained Liza as she wiped her sweaty brow with her apron, "but I seed ter hab some peace ob mind whilst Ise wurkin'. I nebber hurt dat chile none. I jest ducked hit in de water ter make hit stop squalling so I could wash de white folks clo'es."

"You are having squally times," the recorder told her. "I am free to admit that maybe the kid ought to get as much water and soap as it can, but the days for ducking people to make them good are over."

"I wish yer could hab heered how dat chile was er bawlin', Jedge Johnsing," exclaimed Liza as she got her hands up on her hips and gave the audience an exhibition of injured innocence.

"You ought to have balled out those suds," the recorder went on to tell her, "and then maybe somebody would bail you out now. You see your conduct may have a very baleful influence, Liza, and I will have to fine you $5.75. The next time that kid bawls, bawl it out. Always play ball fair and don't leave any foul tips, even if you are playing a scrub game."

Talking Machine Company Will Carry Latest Records

An announcement of importance and interest to thousands of Atlantans is that made in today's issue of The Constitution by the Atlanta Talking Machine company. This company, only recently organized, has taken over the retail business formerly conducted by the Columbia Graphophone company, and will continue to conduct its affairs in the former home of the Columbia company, at 132 Peachtree street.

The change, as announced, becomes effective Monday morning, February 23, and much interest is attached to the announcement by reason of the pleasing personnel of the new company. George P. Howard is president of the Talking Machine compang, and Richard Thornton is general manager.

The new company, in its retail department, will carry not only all the latest records, as fast as recorded, of the Columbia company, but these will be supplemented at all times with every record in the big Columbia catalogue. It will also carry one of the most complete lines of Grafonolas in the south, embracing every type and price, from the cheapest to the most expensive.

Mr. Howard, the leading spirit in the new company, is one of the city's best known and most popular business men. While this line of business is somewhat new to him, he is going to give his time and attention to it, and judged by his successes of the past, he will aid in making of the Talking company one of the strongest of its kind in the south.

No more affable man could have been selected as the manager of the company than Richard Thornton. Known familiarly to his scores of friends as "Dick," he will bring to the new company much strength and popularity through his connection as manager. Born, reared and schooled in this city, Richard Thornton has almost innumerable friends whom he has served in business capacities in the past, and whom he can count upon to give to him their patronage in the future. For five years he has been manager of the retail department of the Columbia company, and his experience has made him accounted one of the best-posted and most expert among Grafonola demonstrators in this section. His friends will wish for him the same success in his new connection that he has deservedly made in his former work.

The new company invites its friends and patrons to visit its place and hear the new March records, and assures to each of them a hearty welcome.

Clarke on Probation, But It's All a Joke On Part of Recorder

I. C. Clarke, the noted bond maker and politician, is on probation. That is Recorder Johnson's little joke for he and Mr. Clarke are great friends.

You see, I. C. was charged with violating the city sanitary laws, wherein he failed to take proper and legal care of stable refuse. Mr. Clarke denies the sanitary insinuations.

It chanced that a witness both sides wanted had not shown up and a continuance was asked for. Then it was that the recorder announced that he would continue the case and place Mr. Clarke on probation.

"I will go to see Coogler right away," stated Mr. Clarke.

SOUR STOMACH, COLDS, HEADACHES, REGULATE YOUR BOWELS—10 CENTS

Turn the rascals out—the headache, biliousness, constipation, the sick, sour stomach and bad colds—turn them out to-night with Cascarets.

Don't put in another day of distress. Let Cascarets sweeten and regulate your stomach; remove the sour, undigested and fermenting food and that misery-making gas; take the excess bile from your liver and carry off the decomposed waste matter and constipation poison from the bowels. Then you feel great.

A Cascaret to-night will straighten you out by morning—a 10-cent box from any drug store will keep your head clear, stomach sweet, liver and bowels regular and make you feel bully and cheerful for months. Don't forget the children.

CASCARETS WORK WHILE YOU SLEEP.

Thalians Score Big Hit in Play, "Arms and the Man"

English Professor Highly Commends Production. Atlantans in Cast.

Athens, Ga., February 20.—(Special.)—Professor S. M. Salyer, of the English department at the University of Georgia, has the following criticism of Shaw's play, "Arms and the Man," presented by the Thalians, the University Dramatic organization, this week at the Colonial, the criticism being of special interest in Atlanta, since practically all the male parts were taken by Atlantans.

The production of "Arms and the Man," by the Thalians Tuesday evening was a pronounced success. The play was not as heavy as some that the club has presented in former years and gave the actors little opportunity to win applause by tense dramatic situations. It did, however, call for great ability in the leading characters, for it requires finished talent to make such a play "go." The company fully met every demand. In spots where one might have expected crudeness there was exceptional finish. The Thalians did more than act the play; they interpreted it. One would not, perhaps, realize unless he paused for analysis, how much of the characterization was built up by the acting, how many touches were added which the bare lines of the play left unsuggested. In almost every case the characterization was not only consistent, but well-rounded.

The Thalians are to be congratulated on having associated with them this year three young ladies of exceptional talent. To witness Miss Bernstein's portrayal of Raina was to forget entirely that this was an amateur presentation. She brought to the part both the necessary strength and the necessary delicacy. Situations in the first act, which might have been awkward even in the hands of professionals, she and Mr. Howell raised to the distinction of dramatic moments. In the comedy of Act II and III she was delightful. Miss Mary Arthur had not so much opportunity to shine, but she lent distinction to the part of the mother. She had a chance to show her ability in Act II where more of the burden of the situation rested upon her and where she admirably sustained it. The part of the maid in most plays is a thankless one. She usually has little more to do than flourish a feather duster and bring in the tea tray. Not so in "Arms and the Man." Miss Lodia Griffith gave individuality and charm to the part of Louka. The interest of the play at times centered around her part and she was more than equal to the demands.

Mr. Clark Howell, Jr., in the leading male role, was as superior in his way as Miss Bernstein was in hers. The characterization demanded of him, especially in Act I, was peculiarly trying and he met it with a skill that is difficult of analysis. His was finished work of a very high order. He was master of the situation every moment that he was on the stage. Mr. Harrison's part was not so important or so difficult, yet his interpretation was clear-cut and individual and withal so true to life that it was one of the most pleasing features of the production. Mr. Dunlap proved himself the true major, on the stage as well as off. Likewise as good an actor as he is a playwright. Mr. Pinkussohn was excellent as Nicola and Mr. Jacobson did all that could be done in the Russian officer's role.

There were no weak spots in this production—no characters whose entrance one dreaded lest they mar the beauty of someone's else action, as is often the case in some amateur performances. There have been some plays presented by the Thalians more striking in spots, and more creditable, perhaps, for one or two special reasons, but it would be difficult to name one so commendable as a whole. Every part was in good hands and in every detail the play was perfectly articulated.

"It was encouraging to see so large an audience. Those who face patronize the Thalians continue to go. More attend each year and it is safe to predict that it will not be long before this organization has the recognition in the university and in Athens, that it merits. Miss Lyndon deserves the thanks of all for her tireless efforts in behalf of the Thalians now and in the past. The club under her direction will always put on a high order of play and will do its part in the movement which the Drama league has so successfully started."

"A journey through the world's most beautiful scenery, over rugged snow-capped mountains, along beautiful winding rivers, across fascinating, many-hued deserts, to a land of perpetual sunshine—California, the playground of America.

"I see you at the end of your journey viewing a glorious and wonderful exposition, whose towers and spires scintillate with light, and whose broad streets, gorgeous palaces and beautiful gardens are set in the shadow of a hundred hills. The waters of a great inland summer sea lap its very foundations, and its thoroughfares are thronged with a gay and laughing people assembled from all nations. The year 1915 will be the most eventful year of your life, one in which you will view the wonders of the world and pass judgment upon the best of every nation's accomplishments."

This prediction will become a reality for the many men and women, boys and girls this paper will send to this wonderful exposition in 1915. You can be one of our party, so make every minute count between now and the close of this campaign.

The conditions are equal in every particular, and you have the same opportunity as any other person of this vicinity. SCHOOL The Sunday Constitution's NEWS

BOYS' HIGH STARTS BASEBALL WORK

By Calling Meeting of All Prospective Candidates. New Alciphronian Officers Take Charge.

By Robert Foreman.

During the past week the B. H. S. basketball five downed both the Tech High and G. M. A. teams by large scores. The team showed up at its best in the game versus T. H. S., playing one of the best games of the season. G. M. A. put up a game fight and livened up towards the last of the game.

The last and most important game of the season will be played against Marist next Tuesday. This game will decide whether B. H. S. will tie with Marist for first place or not. When Marist defeated B. H. S. in the first game of the season, Lowry was not playing on the purple and white quintet, and as Lowry is now a big factor in the team, B. H. S. has a fine chance for the victory. The game will be played at the Wesley Memorial court.

The new officers of the Alciphronian took charge of last Monday's meeting. These are Gerideau, president, and Staten, secretary. Thomas Methvin Salter, alias the gentleman from Buckhead, was elected cheerleader for the rest of the year.

Baseball Practice Started.

Captain Fridell and Manager Weaver of the baseball team called a meeting of prospective baseball candidates recently, and about seventy-five boys signified their intention of trying for the team. Practice games have already been arranged with Riverside and other prep schools, and the team will soon begin the actual practicing at Brisbane park. With the abundance of material which has volunteered, B. H. S. should be able to duplicate her last year's victory and again cop the rag, with the able help of Coach Moore.

The United Daughters of the Confederacy have offered a medal for the student who writes the best theme on "The Causes of the War Between the States." This contest will be held on March 8. Wallace Zachry won this medal from B. H. S. last year.

SIXTH GRADE BOYS PREPARING YARD AT PRYOR SCHOOL

The seventh grade B is very much obliged to Vivian Vaughn for bringing them a beautiful pot of pansies.

The little boys of the third grade are dramatizing "The Knights of the Silver Shield." These little folks had a spelling match last week and many of them stood up.

Taking in consideration the bad weather we think our school average for the week was very good, it being 96.8 per cent. Four grades' averages were above 98 per cent. They were seventh B, 98.8; fifth A, 98.6; second, 98.4.

The sixth B boys have been very busy working on the yard steadily for the past week.

The seventh grades A and B enjoyed a talk on birds given by Miss Skinner. She talked about all the birds that we see more often around us and then, too, about the different kinds of woodpeckers. We enjoyed it very much, and hope we can soon go to the park, where we can see them alive and learn about the trees.

MARIE OVERBEY.

GIRLS' NIGHT.

Race for Spelling Medal Narrows Down to Three.

Miss Richardson, who is a kindergarten teacher for All Saints' mission, made us a visit last week and was very much pleased with the rapid progress made by the foreign girls in spelling and reading.

The whole class of division two are so busy with fractions they do not want to work on anything else.

Mr. Ward Green, of The Atlanta Journal, was up to see us last week and was very much interested in our work. We are always more than glad to have visitors, and we invite the public to come to see us.

All the girls of division three, who made A on their compositions on Georgia day, were made a present of a small United States flag by Miss Holtzendorff, their teacher. We have two new girls in this division, Ruby Deal and Bessie Caldwell.

Girls of fourth division are expecting their new copybooks and are going to work real hard for the medal offered to the girl who makes the greatest improvement in penmanship.

We are very sorry that Nora Bettis has been out so much on account of the sickness of her mother. In fact, the grip has reached so many of our girls or their families that our attendance has suffered a great deal.

REBECCA CHAMBERS.

Children Make Splendid Attendance Records

Top row: 130 children in Hill Street School, who have made perfect attendance marks since the beginning of the school year. Middle rop: Top, Edna Hamilton, Kathleen Chatham and Louise Simpson. Bottom: Elizabeth Allen, Willie May Simpson, James Wright, Ivey Willingham and Alberta Bieser. These eight children have been perfect in attendance for four years. Bottom picture: Three youngsters acting role of "The man, the boy and the donkey," an old story, showing that it is impossible to please everybody. The little fellow riding the donkey is Gus Trammell, the "donkey" is Raymond Kimberley, and the old man is Phillip Stotts.

By Clarence L. Feibelman.

The past week at Tech High has been almost interesting, if such a thing can be said of a week at school. On last Thursday afternoon Tech High met Peacock at basketball on the former's court. The game, which was, as a sub remarked, for the booby prize, was in the nature of a practice for the smithies, who romped to the tune of 78 to 7, so Peacock, by losing, won, that is, the prize. The stars were, for Tech High, Bill Bedell, whose guarding was great. Fincher and Harlan played good games at center and forward, shooting, between them, no less than 58 points. For Peacock, Jones and Knox played nice games. After the game a little dance was pulled off on the court, and a couple of the professors cavorted gracefully around, showing a few new steps.

Wednesday the seniors held their annual election. Hawes carried off the choicest honors, being chosen the most popular representative and intellectual. A few of the other results were Czintz and Bradley, the biggest boners; Hurt the biggest bonehead, and Feibelman the best-dressed and wittiest. Several other minor places were filled, but the results are not at hand.

Friday afternoon the seniors took revenge for four years' torture by defeating the faculty in a basketball game, the first of a series of three, by the narrow margin of 1 point. The game was at all times close and well played throughout, the final score being 35 to 34, with the seniors on the long end. All the players showed up well, and there were hardly any individual stars. However, for the seniors, Czintz, Bradley and Jentzen rang up the most goals, and Eubanks' guarding was good. For the faculty Professors McHarty, Hunter and Martin starred. The game was in the nature of a general athletic meet. Professor Culver slid in the first half; somebody swung a good solid one on Professor Durden's lip, and Professor Holt punted in the last 15 seconds of play. His punt, which was a good, long one, resulted in the loss of the game; Czintz scoring a point on the foul.

Saturday morning the contest for places in the annual exercises were held. The results, however, have not been announced as yet. There are a great number of contestants this year, and the exercises should be exceptionally good.

WOODBERRY'S SCHOOL GREATLY INTERESTED

In Medal Offered for Best Theme on the War Between the States.

By Georgia Dickinson.

Much interest is evidenced among the pupils by reason of the fact that a gold medal has been offered for the best essay on "The War Between the States," by the Daughters of the Confederacy. All are quite busy gathering information on this subject.

The pupils of Woodberry hall observed "Georgia day." Many interesting talks were made by the faculty and pupils. The readings of the "Marshes of Glynn" and "The Song of the Chattahoochee" by Miss Minnie Gilbert were greatly enjoyed.

The photographers of The Georgian and The Constitution made pictures of the basketball team, tennis players and the domestic science class.

The Dramatic club presented, in two acts, the play, "A Set of Turquoise," in the school auditorium on Tuesday evening. The cast of characters was Miss Minnie Gilbert, the count; Miss Lucy Davis, the countess, and Miss Pauline Witcher as both the page and maid. Each character was at her best, an all together it was quite a success. Following the play the dance given by the pupils proved to be one of the most enjoyable events of the season.

FAIR THIRD GRADES ENJOY EXCURSIONS TO STATE CAPITOL

The sixth grade A was very sorry to lose two of their classmates last week, Nellie Meyers being transferred to the Atlanta Training school, and Harry Standard to East Point.

During the week both third grades went on their excursion to the capitol. These little folks saw and learned much, and enjoyed the trip. Next week they will write a composition telling what they saw.

The third grade A has both spelling banners, one for making 100 in oral spelling, the other one for having the highest weekly average.

The third grade B is very much interested in the growth of corn, and they have made some pretty scrap books in which they are keeping many pictures of corn. When they planted their corn for the schoolroom they put a blotter in a glass, filled it with dirt, and between the blotter and the glass put the grains of corn. The corn receives moisture through the blotter from the dirt and everyone is delighted to see how the corn grows from day to day.

On Tuesday one of the classes went to the state museum at the capitol to see fruit that had been ruined by various insects, and now all of us are anxious to help the Burroughs club in the protection of birds, so that our state will have the very best fruit in the union.

As a reward to the class that makes the highest average in spelling, Miss Johnson lets them have the basket and volleyballs at recess for one week. The second grade A received them for the lower grades this week, their average being 98. They are making Georgia scrap-books, and they are very pretty.

The fifth grade A received the balls for the higher grades this week, their average being 95.7. This is the third week they have had the balls. Sol Cohen, John Bansley and Kathryn Felix, of the fifth grade, have not been absent this year. The two fifth grades are making "United States scrapbooks." They are grouping the states into sections.

Seminary Basketball Team Meets Lucy Cobb Five on 26th

By Elizabeth Macdonald.

The boarding students enjoyed another pleasant afternoon last Friday with Miss Sharpe and "Miss Selina Lue."

Saturday morning Miss Emma Scott entertained the sophomores, the faculty assisting as hostesses. It was a real Valentine party; the game played was hearts, the welcome hearty, and Cupid the chief decoration. Georgia Rice won the first prize, a Washington seminary memory book. Ydoine Rose won the second prize, a lovely fan. After the game delicious refreshments were served.

Valentine's day was celebated in another way by the intermediate classes. The lower study hall was gay with the pretty messages.

Miss Starke entertained the history of art girls at her home on Wednesday afternoon. Mrs. Henry Osgood gave an illustrated lecture on European art and architecture, which was much enjoyed.

Next Saturday, the 26th, the seminary basketball team plays the Lucy Cobb team, in Athens, and as one of the team told me "We expect to beat 'em."

FAITH SCHOOL.

Splendid Exercises Held in Honor of Georgia Day.

We have had very pleasant weather during the last week and the attendance has been very good, indeed.

We were very glad to have Mr. Slaton and Mr. Landrum visit our school. They gave very satisfactory reports of all the grades.

Miss Haralson also visited our school and gave excellent in music to the fifth and sixth grades.

The teacher of the fifth grade took her class on an excursion to the capitol. They were very much interested in the different kinds of minerals which were found in Georgia. They also went to the fire engine house and were shown how the firemen came down the poles and how they hitched the horses up. They had a very nice time.

The fourth grade went on an excursion to Grant Park, where they had some interesting lessons on geography and nature study.

Ruby Langley, Pearl Passmore and Susie Silvey, of the sixth grade, made a hundred in spelling during the last month.

The sixth grade invited the fifth grade into our room for our Georgia day entertainment. The program was as follows:

Recitation, "A Georgia Volunteer"—Ruby Langley.

Phonograph selection.

Reading, "Aunt Nancy Hart"—Ruby Crane.

Song, "Swanee Ribber"—Eight girls of the grade.

Reading, "Tomochichi"—Zelma Sherrill.

Song, "A Vow"—Sixth grade.

Reading, "Sidney Lanier"—Ethel Patrick.

"In What Georgia Has Been First"—Pearl Passmore.

Basketball Five Defeats Woodberry by Score of 17-12.

Friday, the 12th, the Normal department's basketball squad played and defeated the Woodberry team by the score of 17 to 12. It was a very exciting game from start to finish, due mostly to the splendid team work of Misses Crane, Thomas and Bates. Those on the victorious team were Misses Bates and Stephens, guards; Misses Crane and Thomas, forwards, and Misses Weaver and Mills, centers. There was a large crowd of footers that helped send the team to victory.

Our regular basketball team met and defeated Crew Street school Wednesday by the score of 16 to 8.

B.H.S. AND D. FRASER ARE PREP WINNERS

In Games Staged During the Past Week—Peacock, Tech High and G. M. A. Are Losers.

For the second time this season, the basketball five from the Boys' High school triumphed over the team representing the Tech High school in a game played on the Wesley Memorial court by the score of 47 to 19.

From the beginning of the game, everything was in favor of the Boys' High quintent. They out-played their oppnents at all stages of the game, this being considered more noticeably in the second period than in the first.

In the first half, the Tech High quintet put up as good a game as they have uncorked in any game played by them in the prep league. However, in the second period, their play dropped off a little, while that of their opponents picked up a great deal.

By dint of some fast passing and shooting towards the close of the first half, Boys' High emerged on the big end of the count when the half ended. The score stood 22 for Boys' High and 12 for Tech High.

In the second half, Boys' High completely smothered the team from the Marietta street school. Tech High scored but two field goals throughout the entire second half, the guarding of the purple and white team being great. Boys' High, mainly due to the great shooting of Scott, jumped into the lead by a comfortable margin by dropping 25 points through the basket.

Boys' High seemed to be in great shape for this game, as every man on the team was in good condition. Provided that they maintain this condition until the Marist game on next Tuesday, the Ivy street team are in for one of the hardest battles that it has ever been the lot of a prep team to face.

For the High school five, the playing of every man on the team was extra good. The work of Scott, however, stood out above that of the rest of his team-mates in that he was usually good at locating the basket, and this is saying a great deal, as he is usually counted upon for at least ten baskets in the course of a game. Jim Lowry was in the game every second of play and many times broke up what threatened to be a raly by the Tech Hig crew.

For the Tech High quintent, the playing of Czintz, B. Bedell and Fincher was the best of the day. Ed Czintz, although very closely guarded by the two High school guards, managed to roll in 11 points and also to get in some good passes.

The line-up:

Boys' High (47).	Pos.	Tech High (19).
B. Adams(12)	R. F.	Ed Carter (11) P. Day
White (8)	L. F.	J. Bedell (2) Hammlett
Scott (25)	C.	Fincher (6)
Lowry (2)	L. G.	W. Bedell
L. Adams	R. G.	Harlan, Bancher

Summary: Referee, Blanchard. Time of halves, 20 minutes. Field goals, Boys' High 21, Tech High 8. Foul goals, Scott 5, Czintz 3.

B. H. S.-MARIST FIVES WILL MEET TUESDAY

In Game on Wesley Memorial Court to Decide Championship of the Local Prep League.

The final round in the local prep league will be played on Tuesday afternoon. There are but two teams left in the running for the pennant, and since these two are meeting Tuesday, the pennant will most likely float over the school that emerges victor in this contest. Boys' High and Marist, as of old, will be the two contending schools, while Wesley Memorial court will furnish the scene for the encounter.

In the first game of the season the Marist quintet took the measure of the High school squad, but this has been the only game that the Purple and White team has lost the whole season, so one can very readily see that the game should be the classiest that the local league has ever produced. Marist has a perfect record for the season so far.

Should the Marist club win, they win the pennant, but should Boys' High come out on top, then they will be leading by half a game, and will necessitate Marist meeting Donald Fraser in the game that was postponed early in the season. Marist will then have to beat the Donald Fraser crew in order to tie with the High school team for the lead.

In the game that Boys' High dropped to the Marist five, the Purple and White team were without the services of one of their star men, Jim Lowry. Lowry has been one of the main cogs in the success of the team over the other schools, so his presence in the line-up should mean a whole lot to the High school.

Here is the complete standing of the teams through the games played last Friday afternoon:

CLUBS.	Won.	Lost.	P.C.
Marist	8	0	1.000
Boys' High	8	1	.889
Tech High	4	6	.400
G. M. A.	3	6	.333
Donald Fraser	2	6	.333
Peacock	1	8	.111

Donald Fraser Wins One.

By the margin of one field goal, Donald Fraser defeated Peacock Friday afternoon on the Decatur court by the close count of 12 to 10. From the start of the game until the final whistle had blown, it was a hectic struggle.

During the first half both teams were unable to do anything spectacular and the period ended with Donald Fraser leading by 2 points, the score then being 4 to 2.

However, in the second half, both teams loosened a great deal more in the scoring line, with the result that the play was a great deal more interesting to the spectators.

With but four minutes of playing time left, some of the Donald Fraser boys present took offense at the seemingly rough tactics imposed upon Stanley, the diminutive forward on the Decatur team. This offense was conducted yia the fist route and when the various players and spectators were unraveled from the mass on the floor, the referee thought it best to call off the hostilities. The game will not be played over, so the score will remain in favor of Donald Fraser.

The game was one of the best that has been played on the Donald Fraser court and marks another game to the already long list that Donald Fraser has won or lost this season by the margin of two points. If the Decatur team had won all of the games this season that it has lost by two points, the school would now be in the running for the prep championship, instead of being out of it now.

The passing and team work of both teams was not very good. This was due in the main to the terrific strain that the men were under throughout the game.

For Donald Fraser, the playing of Thompson and Stanley was good, while for the Peacock team the work of Knox and Pew featured.

The line-up:

D. Fraser (12).	Pos.	Peacock (10).
Stanley (2)	R. F.	Knox (3)
Talley (8)	L. F.	Parker (3)
J. Thompson	C.	Manget
H. Thompson (2)	R. G.	Pew (2)
Reeves	L. G.	Jones (2)

Boys' High Defeats G. M. A.

Putting up one of their best games of the season, the Boys' High five had very little trouble in disposing of the G. M. A. basketball team last Friday afternoon on the Wesley Memorial court, the final score showing 56 points for the High school and 11 for the cadet team.

This game is the last of the season for the Boys' High five, with the exception of the Marist game, which will be played Tuesday on the Wesley Memorial court.

From the outset of the struggle it was evident that the College Park boys stood very little chance of copping the contest, for, although they fought hard all the way through, they were not in the class of the Gilmer street lads.

The passing of the winners was all that could be desired. Time after time they worked their passes on the tip-off from Scott to Lowry to Adams. This resulted in two points almost every time that the play was attempted.

Boys' High's guarding was also good, the G. M. A. forwards, or for that matter, any member of the visiting quintet, rarely ever having a free shot for a basket. On the other hand, the cadet guardians were totally incapable of keeping the many shots from such accurate men as Scott and the two forwards from landing in the basket.

The G. M. A. team was off in its team work and passing, as, in fact, it has been for the whole season. At times during the season the College Park team would get its passing and team work to going together. When these two were working right, the G. M. A. bunch rarely ever tasted defeat.

The star of the game was Alfred Scott, who has featured in every game that the Boys' High five has participated in this season. The whole G. M. A. team attempted to guard the High school center, but they proved incapable, as is evidenced by the 32 points that Scott rang in during the game. White also got about in good fashion, passing well and annexing 6 goals from the field. Lowry was in every play anywhere near the High school basket.

Barr put up the best brand of ball for the visiting quintet, frequently getting about the court in such rapid fashion that the High school players were baffled for a while. He scored 7 of his team's 11 points. Babcock and Battle also starred.

The line-up:

Boys' High (56).	Pos.	G. M. A. (11).
B. Adams (8)	L. F.	Barr (7)
White (12)	R. F.	Cogswell (2)
Scott (32)	C.	Babcock (2)
Lowry (4)	R. G.	Port
L. Adams	L. G.	Battle

Summary: Referee, Smith. Time of halves, 20 minutes. Field goals, Boys' High 26, G. M. A. 5. Foul goals, Scott 24.

G. N. and I. College.

On Georgia day we had a feast of good things, mentally making. The Model school made us a visit at chapel hour and delivered the exercises with a number of beautiful songs, among them, of course, our Georgia songs. That evening we had with us "Miss Milne in her famous lecture on "The South." It is hardly necessary to add that "Rutledge" was present, as she is and generally known as "Miss Milne." At chapel the next morning she charmed the entire student body with a talk on "Georgia," and any person's heart that does not respond with an extra beat when made to realize what a grand state we possess, doesn't deserve to be a Georgian. A special meeting of the students was called immediately after supper on Saturday evening, at which time Miss Rutherford talked of the Georgia flag. Unanimously this gifted woman was given an invitation to return to us next year and spend a whole week.

Complimentary to Miss Rutherford, a group of domestic science seniors entertained at luncheon on Saturday.

Miss Rutherford was the guest of President and Mrs. Parks while here, but was entertained at the residence of H. D. Allen, O. M. Cone and S. A. Cook during her stay. She also visited the graves of some relatives at Mossville, a few miles from the city; among them buried there is the body of her grandfather, Mr. William Rutherford.

A charming little entertainment was given by the sophomores on Saturday evening in the auditorium, the main event being a "Valentine Party" by some of its members. This was entitled, "How a Woman Keeps a Secret," but then that's no secret, as we all know. The parts were well carried out, some of the girls showing unusual ability along those lines.

Miss Young, the traveling secretary of the Y. W. C. A., was present with us a few days the past week, and received a royal welcome. A special service of this organization was held on Sunday evening, at which time Miss Young presented the claims of the Y. W. movement to its members. This movement is a national one, in which students pledge themselves to take the course and to enter into some work for the betterment of conditions in their own community. Miss Young's talk was received with enthusiasm, and quite a number have given themselves. Miss Leonora Ivey, of the faculty, will be the leader, and work will be begun soon.

He used the character and the times of Miriam to bring out his views and ideals of the relations and duties of Christian life. His were the views of a splendid southern man.

The junior class gave a very delightful entertainment—a Valentine party—in the college auditorium Friday evening. The most unique feature was the postoffice at which Valentines were sold and from which they were, during the course of the evening, delivered by the postman. Clever features in accord with the Valentine spirit were the decorations, which made a very happy one for those participating.

On Friday afternoon in the college auditorium, the juniors gave a play entitled "Electra," a Greek tragedy written by Sophocles. The play was given with interest, and held the attention of an appreciative audience.

THOMASTON, GA.

One of the most delightfully pleasant events of the week was the bird luncheon given by Mrs. J. A. Yates, in honor of her guest, Mrs. Lee Institute. After a social hour, the guests were invited to the dining room, where the delightful luncheon was served. Much merriment was created in the exchange of the jolly party made the occasion a most happy one. Present were: Mrs. O. W. Bradley, Miss Elizabeth Davis, Mrs. Yates was assisted in entertaining by her sister, Mrs. O. W. Bradley, Miss Elizabeth Davis.

Without An Operation

Wonderful Healing of Rupture

How a New Jersey Man Got Rid of a Severe, Obstinate, Right Inguinal Hernia Without the Slightest Trouble.

Below is a picture of Eugene M. Pullen, a well-known carpenter of Manasquan, New Jersey. If you could see him at his work, particularly when he handles heavy timber, jumps and climbs around like a youth, you would scarcely imagine that he had formerly been afflicted with a rupture.

Rupture in Right Side.

At an early age, Eugene Pullen was an express driver. He handled railroad baggage. One day after delivering a heavy trunk on an upper floor he felt a pain in the right groin. The suffering increased and it was not long before the young man noticed the swelling.

The doctor told young Pullen that he was ruptured and that he must either wear a truss throughout life or submit to a drastic operation. All surgeons know that hernia operations, with anaesthetics, etc., are dangerous; they may end fatally. Moreover, it is a well established fact that many rupture operations are not successful; the bowel soon breaks through the sewed-up opening and protrudes worse than ever.

Afraid of Operation.

Like most others, Mr. Pullen declined to take the risks of an operation; the expense and loss of time had to be considered, too. Hoping he might get a little better encouragement, he went to another physician who, as a sorrowful question, gave him even less hope. It was pointed out to the young man that unless the rupture were speedily held all the time or the surgeon's knife successfully used, he might expect an increase or doubling in the rupture with further complications, or the dreaded strangulated hernia which kills so many ruptured people.

Victim of Trusses.

The victim bought a truss, a hard, spring-like affair, the best he could get. It tortured him. He tried another—still no relief. He was compelled to give up his express business. The hard tasks of ordinary men were forbidden him. He became an insurance agent, in which position he did not need to do bodily work.

For six years Mr. Pullen dragged around, using various trusses, hard, elastic, etc., with never any contentment. One day his mother told him something she had just found out. It was a simple and easy thing for him to do. He lost no time.

Discarded His Truss.

Relief came at once; he almost forgot that he had any rupture. Afterward came a cure—a complete healing —and, although years have passed and Mr. Pullen is an energetic carpenter, working on buildings, climbing over roofs, lifting lumber and such like, he is absolutely free from the old hernia. He knows he is completely, lastingly cured. There was no operation, no lost time, no trouble—comfort and contentment from the very outset. He is a strong, cheerful-minded man.

Valuable Information Free.

The valuable information which Mr. Pullen read in a newspaper many years ago and gave to her son, together with further important facts, will be sent free to any reader of this who writes to Eugene M. Pullen, 938-A Marcellus avenue, Manasquan, N. J., enclosing a stamp for reply. Mention the kind of rupture you have, whether on right or left side and what you have already done in your effort to cure it. A legion of cases of all kinds of rupture in men and women, including inguinal, ventral, femoral, navel, scrotal, etc., have been reported completely healed. Age seems to make no difference.

English Capital Is Planning To Develop Mining Projects In Northern Part of Georgia

English capital is planning to develop a number of north Georgia mining projects of various sorts and a $1,000,000 company, known as the Southern Mineral Products company, has been organized for the purpose, according to Lachlan Taylor, of London, who is registered at the Winecoff hotel.

The Southern Mineral Products company, he states, is only the holding company and the various interests will be developed under the work of subsidiary companies, the first of which has just purchased a large siricite deposit at Jasper, Ga.

This company is the Georgia Mica company, which will apply for a charter under the laws of Georgia this week, to be incorporated at a capitalization of $100,000. The chief shareholders in the Georgia Mica company are D. L. Pitner, of Robertson, Ga.; A. G. Smith, of Atlanta; G. H. Lutz, of Dahlonega, and Lachlan Taylor, of London.

Mr. Pitner will act as general manager of the holding company also.

The Georgia Mica company will erect a $7,000 plant at Jasper and will erect a 4½-mile tramway from the mines to the railroad station.

Siricite, Mr. Taylor explained, is a highly purified form of mica, resultant apparently from terrific natural compression of ordinary mica. Its uses are as a non-conductor of electricity and of heat and also as a lubricant.

Already the company is producing the mineral and has sent several carloads to Chicago and Philadelphia purchasers. There are now in Atlanta, says Mr. Taylor, examples of fireproof flooring which was made in Paris, France, from Georgia siricite and shipped back to America.

Mr. Taylor states that he expects quite as large a market for the Georgia product abroad as in this country.

Catholic Extension Society Chapel Car Draws Big Crowd

"This is only the beginning," said George C. Hennessey.

"And what an excellent beginning," quickly responded a group of visitors who were being shown the appointments of the "St. Paul," by the superintendent of the chapel cars of the Catholic Church Extension society. The impression gained by these ladies and gentlemen upon entering the vestibule of this new church on wheels is increased by an inspection of the chapel proper, the living compartment, the library, the excellent organ, the priest's apartment and the tiny New England kitchen on the rear.

This steel car is finished throughout in Cuban mahogany, and is lighted by electricity as well as by gas. There is a seating capacity of seventy-five persons, but 100 can be accommodated by the use of folding chairs. The ordinary "crew" consists of the chaplain, an assistant and one attendant. On this trip to New Orleans, where it will be dedicated by Cardinal Gibbons, March 14, the "St. Paul" is accompanied by the Rev. Alvah W. Doran, of Philadelphia, as chaplain, and George C. Hennessey, superintendent of the chapel cars of the Catholic Church Extension society.

The "St. Paul," which cost $25,000, is the gift of the Peter Kunts family of Dayton, Ohio, and is a sister chapel to the "St. Peter," now in Idaho, and which was also given by the same family. After the dedicatory exercises the car will be sent immediately to the diocese of Texas. The purpose of this chapel on wheels is to visit all small towns of this section. In addition to the three chapel cars, now maintained by the Extension society, there are two motor chapels which visit the outlying towns and camps which cannot be reached by rail.

The St. Paul is parked at the Terminal station, where it will remain until Wednesday night. Everyone is welcomed to inspect it—especially the well as Catholics. The hours during which it will be open to the public are from 9 o'clock in the morning until 9 o'clock in the evening. Father Doran, the chaplain, will be present at both masses Sunday at the Sacred Heart church, and will speak at 9:45 o'clock and 11 o'clock. While in Atlanta the crew of the car are guests of the Marist fathers.

NEGROES ARE FLEEING FROM NIGHT RIDERS

Terror Prevails Near New Madrid, Mo.—Rental System Caused Trouble.

New Madrid, Mo., February 20.—As the result of warnings of "night riders" that they must leave the district before Tuesday morning, nearly one hundred negroes left New Madrid county last night and this morning. Possibly as many more are preparing to depart before the time limit expires. Thus far there has been no violence.

The negroes, most of whom are employed on farms in this county, will be severely dealt with unless they obey the order announced. It is expected trouble will result. Sheriff Conran has asked Governor Major to send militia to help him restore order. Adjutant General O'Meara, who left Jefferson City last night, is expected today and will make an investigation of the situation, which the civil authorities say has gone beyond their control.

Negroes working on the government levee at Lenda and Dorena, in Mississippi county, also have been notified to stop work and leave the county. A foreman in charge of the laborers has been notified to stop employing the blacks. The first warning note was tied to a bundle of switches and the second contained a crude drawing of a shotgun.

Authorities said the order for the negroes to leave apparently was not based on any specific objectionable act, but on ill feeling because the negroes were doing work which some white workmen thought they should have.

The trouble between the whites and the negroes seems to have its origin in the land-rental system. Last December when white renters demanded a reduction from $8 to $8 an acre. The negroes were content to continue paying $6. Later when new rent contracts were drawn up in January more negroes than ever were given places on the farms.

Discontent among the whites then was revived, and personal threats were followed by the posting of notices for the negroes to leave. The more prosperous whites have condemned the raid, and are trying to prevent the exodus of negroes from the county generally.

Sheriff Kimes told today of a raid made February 2. Near the town of Lenda whites were fired into a house containing sixteen negroes. Forty negroes worked on the farm on which the house was located, and nearly all of them fled within two days.

Bloodhounds placed on the trail of the raiders went to the house of a white man, who was arrested, but who proved an alibi.

Negro's House Wrecked.

Princeton, Ky., February 20.—The house occupied by Baldress, a negro, who returned to Princeton last week after several months' absence that followed threats from night riders, was demolished today with dynamite. No one was injured.

Eighteen White Men Arrested.

Hickman, Ky., February 20.—Preliminary hearings of eighteen white men charged with being members of a night riding band which has terrorized negroes in this vicinity began here today.

Between Hickman and Tiptonville a number of negroes have been driven from their farms through fear, after notices had been posted warning them to leave. A number of cabins were riddled with bullets. At Linda, Mo., opposite Tiptonville, and at Dorena, Mo., opposite Hickman, night riders are also said to have terrorized negroes.

What Leads to Tuberculosis?

In the opinion of many medical authorities, the development of pulmonary tuberculosis (consumption) is hastened, if not actually precipitated, by a loss of lime from the system. "Where there is a decalcification, the lime salts must be supplied artificially," says Dr. J. W. Carhart, of San Antonio, Texas, in the May, 1915, issue of "Medical Progress."

To supply these necessary salts has in many instances, proved a difficult matter, since in some forms they are not easily assimilable.

In Eckman's Alterative, however, calcium (lime) is so combined with other remedial agents as to be assimilated by the average person without digestive disturbance, and to this, in part, is due the success of this remedy in the treatment of tuberculosis and chronic throat and bronchial affections.

We make no boastful claims for Eckman's Alterative, but a careful record of results obtained during years of widespread use warrants the assertion that many such cases apparently have yielded to it.

It contains no opiates, narcotics or habit-forming drugs, hence its use is not attended with danger. Your druggist has it, or will order it, or you can send direct.

CONGRESS MILLS GRIND ON BIG MONEY MEASURES

Effort Being Made to Pass Supply Bills Before the 4th of March.

Washington, February 20.—The mills of both houses of congress ground fast and long today on the grist of appropriation bills which must become law before March. The senate, after adding a million dollars to the legislative, executive and judicial appropriation bill as it left the house, passed that measure, also the $126,000,000 sundry civil bill with minor amendments and took up the army appropriation bill. Fourteen of the big supply bills are yet to be acted upon.

In the house the diplomatic appropriation bill was passed after it had been cut down half a million dollars. Appropriations of $360,000 for a consulate building at Shanghai and $50,000 for entertainment of Central and South American financiers at a Pan-American financial conference at San Francisco to be called by the president, were cut out, despite the state department's indorsement.

A proposal to have the president take steps to recover from Cuba more than $4,000,000 spent in the pacification also was eliminated.

The appropriation for participation in an exposition at Panama was cut from $100,000 to $25,000.

The house also passed the military academy bill appropriating $1,037,933 and took up the $6,080,000 fortification measure.

An amendment increasing the appropriation for the Yuma irrigation project in the sundry civil bill from $725,000 to $934,000 was adopted by the senate, as was the proposal to set aside $450,000 for the Deschutes project in Oregon.

During the debate on the academy bill Representative Platt urged his bill to authorize the president to fill all vacancies from the whole list of alternates. Vacancies of the last ten years have averaged from 42 to 129 a year, he said, and an emergency would demonstrate the need of these additional officers for the army.

STANDARD HOME MEN ARE DECLARED GUILTY

Birmingham, Ala., February 20.—After being out twenty-four hours the jury in the case against the Standard Home company, a loan company, F. E. Whitehead, president, A. A. Whitehead, vice president, and L. F. Harris, secretary-treasurer, charged with using the mails to defraud, brought in a verdict of guilty this morning. The verdict covers twenty-seven counts of the indictments returned against the company and officials. The defendants will appear before Judge W. I. Grubb next Wednesday for sentence.

The concern did business all over the United States.

The trial of the case against the Standard Home company and officials began two weeks ago, and witnesses were brought here from Washington state, Virginia, the Carolinas, Georgia, Mississippi and other states. Every point was fought hard. The contracts of the company, literature and all plans were placed before the jury in full, and the general scheme of the company laid bare in the court. The defendants claimed that their plans were legitimate, that misrepresentation on the part of any agent was not authorized and that every contract printed had been lived up to. Judge Grubb will fix the punishment which will probably be a fine for the corporation and fine and imprisonment for the officials next Wednesday. By which time bond will have been prepared on an appeal.

"PAPER CHASE" ENJOYED BY BIG PARTY SATURDAY

Members of the Governor's Horse Guards, under command of Captain O. L. Rudisail, and a number of civilians participated in a "paper chase" Saturday afternoon. There were about twenty in the party, using the new mounts recently acquired by the Horse Guards.

The chase led from the capitol through the south side and beyond Grant park into the federal prison neighborhood.

The Governor's Horse Guards will hold riding parties throughout the spring months upon days which will be made known later.

Darktown Listens; Here's Some Suit For Beau Brummel

If This Suit, Proposed as Garb for Convicts, Ever Reaches Decatur Street, There's Going to Be Riot.

There's a new style now ready for Decatur street, adopted from the exclusive circles of the convict gangs. The A. M. Robinson company has created a sensation with it in the meeting of the public works committee of the county board Saturday afternoon, when it was introduced upon the long and grinning person of Aaron Gantt, Darktown's celebrated "High Pocket Aaron."

If that suit ever hits Decatur street in the glare of a full-flowered sun there'll be a riot. It is in the fashion of a full dress suit, swallow-tailed, but reversed and cutaway, with the customary evening dress perquisites. It is cut out of the ordinary striped convict's suit, adorned with red velvet buttons, with a splash of riotous crimson blooming upon the lapels.

A gorgeously red stripe runs from cuff to hip of the trouser legs, and only a flowing red necktie is appropriate to the suit. A high hat, too, is preferable. That is, if the first model is to be followed, as Aaron strode into the public works committee's presence carrying beneath a shiny plug that tilted back upon his head.

The suit was introduced as a bit of burlesque upon the bids for convict suits made before Saturday's meeting by the various manufacturers. It was turned out by the A. M. Robinson company, a contestant for the convict contract.

The matter of awarding contracts upon the bids for the manufacture of convict clothing was deferred indefinitely.

A CHANCE FOR A WISE MAN.

My lack of money causes this advertisement. If I had the ability I would buy instead of selling 207 acres just across the Chattahoochee river from the suburban line. The price of $23,000 is just a little in the rise of $100 an acre, and nothing but nothing in five miles of this ground that can be bought for less than $300 an acre. That it is good and prolific ground is evidenced by the fact that the Bolton Land Improvement company tract and is surrounded by beautiful homes, is in this same class as this section. About 150 acres cleared and in cultivation, balance woods and pasture. This is one proposition I will do a bit of trading or give good terms. See me as soon as you can make it. Ivy 2229-L. Sale. Bargains don't last long. Frank J. Cohen, 510 Peters bldg.

R. town, 2 tobacco barns, 6-horse power, 2 mills, 8-room residence, 2 barns, plenty of water, 2 tenant houses. Thomas. You would have to see this place to appreciate same. Price and terms right and acceptable party. Thos. W. Jackson-Burwell Co., 1018-19 Fourth Nat'l Bank Bldg.

FOR a few days only you can buy this dandy little well located farm and get possession at once; it has all the improvements cost; must be all cash, $1,500; no more and no less; 20 acres in cotton in good state of cultivation, balance pasture and timber, 4-room cottage, barn and other outbuildings. This is a pick-up for some one. Thos. W. Jackson-Burwell Co., 1018-19 Fourth National Bank bldg.

STOCK FARM and water power, country store, cotton gin and other business to interest you; it is a money-maker and can be bought at a low price and I will consider a trade for unincumbered Atlanta property. This water power and loan is worth more than we are asking for all. Thos. W. Jackson-Burwell Co., 1018-19 Fourth National Bank bldg.

A $3,500 CHECK WILL INTEREST YOU in 40 ACRES near Atlanta; only over 2,500 feet road frontage, worth $160 per acre; under Atlanta corporation; ideal for acreage tracts. PRESS HUDDLESTON, Editor.

ANOTHER 'GET-TOGETHER' MEETING ON THURSDAY

Grocers, Butchers, City Salesmen, Jobbers and Manufactures to Meet.

On Thursday evening next, February 25, there will be another "get-together" meeting of Atlanta's retail grocers and butchers, city salesmen, jobbers and manufacturers.

This will be the second meeting of this kind, the first having been held a month ago, and was so successful and attractive that it was decided to hold monthly meetings of this kind.

The meetings are planned by committees from the Retail Grocers' and Butchers' association and the City Salesmen's association, to which are invited for friendly conference and for discussion of matters of interest to all the city manufacturers and jobbers. At the meeting last month a number of fine addresses were made by leading jobbers and salesmen. At the meeting Thursday night other addresses will be heard from, and while no definite program has been agreed upon, it can be safely said that an interesting time will be given all who attend. A thing of especial interest will be a talk on the Stevens bill soon to come before congress, a matter which vitally interests Atlanta's jobbers and manufacturers. Other good addresses will be made, and Secretary Dye, of the Grocers' and Butchers', says that some "unexpected stunts" will be pulled off.

It is desired that a large attendance of the two associations be present, and likewise every manufacturer and jobber in the city is invited to be present. The meeting will be held in the Chamber of Commerce hall.

WANT SOMETHING NEW? TRY A "GRAPE SMASH"

New Soda Fountain and Home Drink to Be Handled by H. L. Singer Co.

Just in a few days now, when you visit your soda fountain boy, suppose you try a "Grape Smash." This is one of the newest and most delightful drinks out, and just as soon as a solid carload of this delicious syrup, which is en route to H. L. Singer now, reaches the city, there are going to be many come to this new drink.

For the past two weeks J. R. Kelly, representing the Tropical Fruit Juice company, of Chicago, manufacturers of the syrup, has been in this section, working on the trade and taking orders with J. C. Porter, one of the road men for the Singer company. During the coming week he will visit the city trade, and before his canvass is over a carload of this beverage will be here, and then everybody will know all about how delightful the drink is.

"Grape Smash" is a new one for this section, and Mr. Singer thought so well of it when he recently had an order opportunity to take on exclusively the account that his first order was for a full carload. The manufacturers declare on the label that "Grape Smash" is derived from grapes, but is not a grape juice. By adding one part of the syrup with five parts of water a delicious beverage like fresh Concord grapes is produced.

It is not only a soda fountain drink, but is put up in various sized and priced bottles for the trade, and will be sold by grocers generally. One of its chief uses, the Singer company predict, will be for clubs and for social gatherings of ladies, where a delicious but non-intoxicating beverage is desired.

U. C. T.'S MEMORIAL ON SUNDAY, APRIL 4

Travelers Will Have Ritualistic Services in Their Hall Instead of Church, as Usual.

Atlanta council No. 18 and Fulton council No. 505, U. C. T., are going to have their annual memorial service on Sunday, April 4, in their council chamber.

The U. C. T.'s will deviate from their usual custom in Atlanta, where they have heretofore, on similar occasions, attended some church where a special sermon was delivered for them. This kind of service has always had the support of the membership, but it has never conformed to the mandates of the order. Why, for an unknown reason to the writer. However, this year the memorial will be strictly observed, and the work will be ritualistic in form rather than religious. This kind of service will no doubt be the custom here hereinafter.

This service in our council chamber will be most beautiful. It will unquestionably be a great inspiration to every member and the friends of all of our friends are invited as well as the ladies ones of our commercial travelers. The joint committee from both councils have had several meetings and they promise that the service to be held Sunday, April 4, will be very elaborate as well as impressive. This committee is already predicting that this memorial day of the order and all who shall be so fortunate to attend will say that it is the grandest thing attempted by the U. C. T., public in its character.

There will be special seats for the families of our deceased brothers, all of whom are expected to be present. The program will be announced later. The following are the committees:

Atlanta council No. 18—Chas. Ayer, H. M. Ashe and C. D. Montgomery. From Fulton council Fulton Colvin, Councilor Hopkins and Jack McDonald.

W. G. MOORE,

FIRING LINE NOTES

W. T. Culpepper, who was a recent convert to road service for Paine & Stamps, has made good on the road, and is delighted with firing line work. Mr. Culpepper spends about half the time in the office and the other half on the West Point road territory, and has continued to increase his sales from week to week since starting out the first of the year.

A busy force there was Saturday morning at the house of Paine & Stamps. Another carload of the popular A. J. Nye Florida oranges was being unloaded. This company handles exclusively this brand of Florida fruit, and their sales have been unusually good, selling from one to two carloads per week.

"Fair weather is helping conditions nicely," said E. L. Adams Saturday. "Our sales and our collections are much better than for some time, and a continuance of this pretty weather will open things up splendidly."

P. A. Garrison, special salesman for Skinner's macaroni, who has been here for two weeks working the trade with city men for Paine & Stamps, jobbers, reports heavy sales on this product. More than a thousand cases of this well known Omaha brand are now out and since he has been here. He will spend another week in this territory, working the outlying towns and sections next week.

"Hugh T. Burton, West Point route man for John Silvey & Co., continues to send into the house a nice bunch of business.

Ed M. Lonsberg, secretary and treasurer of the Binder Picture Frame Manufacturing company, is attending a few weeks visiting the big moulding and picture frame factories around Chicago.

Jack Bowers expects to make some valuable connections while there, as well as to get some new ideas concerning his line.

F. S. Patterson, manager of the Southern Moline Plow company, is spending some time in Louisiana territory. Patterson reports a line of his business from that state, shipments for which will be made from the New Orleans house. In Mr. Patterson's absence T. S. McCants is holding down the desk of general manager. He reports also a nice business from north Georgia and North Carolina.

Fred Thomas, secretary and treasurer of the Rice & Hutchins Atlanta company, spent Friday and Saturday under the bright lights of Birmingham. He left home unnoticed Saturday afternoon, but it is assumed he got what he went after—a big opening in that section. He left hands, so this assumption is not violent.

F. L. Durkee, who makes headquarters in Griffin for the Southern Moline Plow company, ran into the house for a day last week. He says things are brightening up in his territory.

Colonel C. G. Johnson, of the J. R. Orr Shoe company, writes in that workers in the house that he is improving nicely during his stay of several weeks at White Springs, Fla. The colonel has been a sufferer from rheumatism for some time, and he says he is going to stay at the springs long enough this time to "fix him for all time," if possible.

C. A. Tosh, who handles Atlanta territory for the Southern Moline Plow company, is landing some nice car lot orders these days.

H. L. Singer, of the company bearing his name, spent Tuesday and Wednesday in Chattanooga, an attendant upon a wedding of a relative of his. On returning to the city he stopped over for a day or so in Cedartown on business.

The office force of the H. L. Singer company report that the road force for that company has managed to keep the shipping crew mighty busy these days filling orders. "Our business has kept up splendid," said one of the force. "In fact, our business compares favorably with the same months last year, and we feel that is keeping up fine."

Arnold S. Harris slipped down and over the Florida line a few days ago, and put over several nice orders for his house—the A. J. Robinson one.

"Jim" Bates, the popular north Georgia man for Brown, Perryman & Greene, was in the house Saturday. He says the pretty weather up in his territory has put everybody in a good humor and the roads in good condition—at least a great deal better—and things are beginning to take on a brighter hue in the mountain regions.

Banks Whiteman is more than a raiser of blooded pigs. Few, if any, salesmen who check their tanks out of this city can put anything over on Banks when it comes to getting business—if there "are" any business from the number of nice sales reported from him at John Silvey & Co.'s the past week he is getting back to his old tricks again.

R. V. Haslett, special salesman for the Liquid Carbonic company, made a short trip to Dalton and Rome the past week. While it was largely a business trip, yet he combined enough pleasure with it to take Mrs. Haslett with him.

A. E. McLean, manager of the local branch of the Liquid Carbonic company, spent several days in Jacksonville and Tampa the past week. He reports business conditions as fairly good in that section, putting over a few nice orders while there. He says it was just a coincident that he struck Tampa while Gasparilla was at its height, but to those who know Mack, and his fondness for a real good time, there is a suspicion that there was considerable of the deliberate in his movements. At any rate, he says he enjoyed his two days' stay there; he did have to bunk up in a room with several nice-looking strangers.

"Not in a spirit of boasting, but just as a little piece of news," said J. F. Davis, of John Silvey & Co., "it might be said that I sold a nice little house order a few days ago for $1,000—the first one I had put over in a week or so." And Davis looked like right pleased over it, though. I can do the work of any of them when I have to."

E. F. Malone, vice president of the Capital City Tobacco company, is also well pleased with south Georgia. After spending a week in that section two weeks ago with one of the salesmen, C. C. Phillips, he ran into the house for a few days, but looked like right again. Either the pretty weather down there, new business and good collections, mixing with a pleasant trade, or simply a rest and relief from arduous office duties, has put Mr. Malone out of the city. W. P. Carlton, his side-partner in the Capital City, is trying to get a correct line on Malone before he returns. At any rate, President Carlton says that it's "the for a jolly trip around with the trade" when Malone returns.

Frank Reed, division man for the American Tobacco company, has been engaged for the past week or so putting on a special campaign for Red-J tobacco. The company has inaugurated the policy for a short time of giving away one pound of tobacco with every ten bought by the dealer, and the merchants in this section have kept Mr. Reed pretty busy taking orders under that liberal proposition.

"Shug" Smith, Central of Georgia man for the A. M. Robinson company, is making a noise like before the "war" these days. Judging from the size and number of orders he is sending into the house, Mr. Robinson doesn't know whether it is some orders "Shug" has held out on him, or whether he is "jes nachally" getting the business now. "At any rate, it looks mighty good," was J. D.'s comment.

L. B. Robinson, from up and down the Georgia road, and W. A. Kay, who has to hang around Birmingham when not on the road or in the house of the A. M. Robinson company, are both giving good accounts of themselves these days. "Slim Jim," as the boys dub him, keeps up a steady stream of little ones and big ones, while Kay is putting over some nice sales to some of the big corporations in his territory.

The Everett Seed company report that it is having large sales these days on its onion sets and seed Irish potatoes. The past week or so of pretty weather has put the idea of planting into the minds of many, and this progressive seed firm is certainly getting its share of business, judging from the activity shown at its place of business.

WILL NOT REQUIRE USE OF METAL STRIPS

Classification Committee Fails to Recommend Enforcement of Such an Order.

Much to the gratification of southern wholesale dry goods men, the classification committee, which has been under advisement the requirement to force shippers of dry goods who use wooden strips for the use of metal strips, has failed to recommend or enforce the requirement.

At the meeting of the committee some two or three weeks ago, one of the things being considered was this requirement. Under a ruling from President R. V. Covington, of the Southern Wholesale Dry Goods association, Messrs. W. H. Wyatt and R. S. Hambo, members of executive of the association, together with Harry Moore, representing the freight bureau, appeared and protested this requirement.

Notice has just been mailed out to the committee by the association that the classification committee failed to pass this requirement, which announcement will be hailed with satisfaction by southern dry goods shippers.

Spoke to Ga. Manufacturers

C. C. GILBERT.

Secretary of Tennessee Manufacturers' association, who addressed the Georgia manufacturers here the past week.

One of the most interesting talks made at the organization meeting of the Georgia Manufacturers' association, held at the chamber of commerce hall the past week, was that of C. C. Gilbert, secretary of the Tennessee Manufacturers' association. He gave an interesting resume of the work the Tennessee association has accomplished. Going into the question of association's activities in the matter of legislation affecting industrial enterprises, he advocated the enactment of legislation in the interest of invested capital of the state. He also spoke of the value of the association as a source for the securing of information on matters of interest to the manufacturers of the state, and the great benefits to be derived from information sent out in the interest of manufacturers.

The officers elected were: President, H. A. Dean, Rome; vice president, W. P. Stevens, Macon; vice president, F. B. Gordon, Columbus; vice president, H. P. Meikelham, Lindale; treasurer, Thomas K. Glenn, Atlanta; secretary, William W. Horne, Dalton. Mr. Horne will be in charge of the offices here.

NOT SUPERSTITIOUS, BUT HE BELIEVES IN SIGNS

Manager Monroe, of the Grand Lake company, Atlanta's newest and large wholesale paper house, may not be a bit superstitious, but he evidently believes in signs.

Painters and decorators have been busy this week around his office in the L. and N. Terminal building. Some striking signs have been hung out, and the office has been made as tasty as a pin, with its new paint and decorations, and with attractive signs on its doors and windows. Mr. Monroe reports that the sales of the company are coming along splendidly, and that with the advent of pretty weather, he looks for considerable revival in business circles.

BUSINESS GOING FINE, SAYS SIMMONS & SNEAD

"Good publicity and good goods are bound to get results," said J. J. Simmons, of the well known selling firm of Simmons & Snead, Saturday. The company began business only the first of the year, its chief lines being "Morning Glory" products and Sauer's extract. "Our business is just moving along fine and showing a nice improvement with each week," Mr. Simmons is a believer in Firing Line advertising and keeps his products before the people in this department.

BIG CATALOG FOR GOLDEN EAGLE SHOES

Faith of Atlanta manufacturers in the favorable business outlook for the southern states, and particularly for a big spring trade, is evidenced by an order which has just been placed for printing the semi-annual shoe catalog issued by the Golden Eagle Buggy company shoe department. It will be the largest single edition of any complete catalog yet issued by this progressive company.

The catalog will be a work of printers' art, in that the finest of work was placed on competitive quality, samples of high-grade work having been furnished by a number of large printing and engraving houses out of the city, and, in keeping with the slogan of the Ad Men's club, "Atlanta Always Ahead," Atlanta got the job. "It is satisfactory to us," says an officer of the company. "For Golden Eagle shoes are a Georgia product, made from Georgia leather, and all of our shoe catalogs and circulars have been made in Atlanta."

NEW CATALOG FOR RICE & HUTCHINS CO.

E. G. Thomas, president of Rice & Hutchins Atlanta company, is having mailed out to his nearly 8,000 friends and patrons a handsome, very handsome spring catalogue which the company has just received. The catalogue is printed in colors and is quite artistic in arrangement. It is something like 400 styles of spring footwear.

"We expect to get some good returns from our catalogues," said Mr. Thomas, "for the small order business just now is very satisfactory. We are getting a number of them, and some of them are really of good proportions. Our spring business is quite fine—in fact, surpassing the same period last year and we have no cause for complaint."

S. H. Galloway, city supply salesman for the Liquid Carbonic company, has just undergone an operation for appendicitis. He is said to be resting easy at St. Joseph hospital, and his wide circle of friends in the city hope to soon see him back on the firing line again.

Not What She Expected.

A charming, well-preserved widow had been courted and won by a physician. She had children. The wedding day was approaching, and it was time the children should know they were to have a new father. Calling one of them to her she said:

"Georgie, I am going to do something before long that I would like to talk about with you."

"What is it, Ma?" asked the boy.

"I am intending to marry Doctor Jones in a few days, and—"

"Bully for you, Ma! Does Doctor Jones know it?"

Necessity is the mother of invention, but she isn't always proud of her offspring.

Even some lazy men may get busy, but the trouble is that they don't keep busy.

HOME MANUFACTURERS NOW GETTING NEW TRADE

Temerity of Northern Houses an Aid to Home Concerns, Says Ed Lonsberg.

Ed M. Lonsberg, president of the Binder Picture Frame Manufacturing company, has just returned from an extensive business trip through North and South Carolina. He reports that business conditions are encouraging in those states, he himself having rounded up a nice lot of orders on his trip.

Mr. Lonsberg has recently had occasion to take issue with some of the larger concerns of the east and north in his line concerning their ideas of business conditions in this section, and while the Atlanta man regrets that some of the northern concerns have taken a somewhat pessimistic view of conditions down here, he maintains that that very fact is operating to help, in a measure, many of the smaller manufacturers of the south. In speaking along this line he said:

"It is to be regretted that some of the large manufacturing concerns in the east and north are looking askance at the business conditions of the south just now, some of them even writing to their houses that it is rather risky to do too much business in this section just now. As a matter of fact, while there has been some depression, as we all know, the south is as solid and safe as can be, and we fellows who are down here are going right along and getting all the business we can. We are not afraid of the future. Of course, the attitude of our northern brethren is helping us, because in their timidity to seek business they are giving us time to push their lines, it is giving us home manufacturers a better chance to get out and get business. I have put a number of new accounts on our books as a result of this temerity—you might call it—and we feel that we are safe in it all. Of course, some of the accounts are small, but it is a beginning with new customers, and we have got them we believe we will be able to hold them. I believe the same condition holds good in many lines."

HARRISON JONES TO ADDRESS CREDIT MEN

Third Quarterly Meeting on Tuesday Evening Will Be Interesting Affair.

An interesting meeting is promised for next Tuesday evening at 7:30 o'clock, when the third quarterly meeting of the Atlanta Credit Men's association will be held at the chamber of commerce hall.

A number of good talks will be made on subjects of interest to Atlanta business men, and a large attendance is anticipated.

Harrison Jones has accepted an invitation to address the body on the proper exemption laws, and many will avail themselves of the opportunity to hear his address. E. E. Church, of Bolling Jones will make five-minute addresses on the work of the credit exchange bureau, and D. Carter and H. A. Ferris will each speak five minutes on the adjustment bureau work. President E. L. Adams, of the association, will preside at the meeting.

"Our business is just moving along fine and showing a nice improvement with each week," Mr. Simmons is a believer in Firing Line advertising and keeps his products before the people in this department.

GEORGIA PIMENTOS NEW INDUSTRY HERE

Atlanta Jobbers Declare Home-Grown Product Is Taking the Place of Spanish Article.

A new industry has sprung up in Georgia—an industry the product of which this country has heretofore depended upon Spain to furnish.

The growing and canning of pimentos—and who is not familiar with the delicious little sandwiches these sweet red peppers make?—is the industry referred to. In the little town of Pomona, Ga., near Griffin, the firm of Wayman & Riegel are canning pimentos, the peppers for which are grown right in that section, which are declared the equal, if not the superior, of the goods of Spain.

One of the Atlanta houses who are handling the home product is the H. L. Singer company, and Mr. Mackie, of that firm, declares that the sales of the Georgia product are growing larger and the goods more popular every day.

"We find," he said, "that they more than take the place of the imported goods. They are giving satisfaction in every way, and, in addition, the cans put up at Pomona are a little larger than the imported, consequently people who are fond of pimentos are buying the home-grown article. It is something entirely new, as we understand it, in this section, and I see no reason why the growing of these peppers and the canning of these goods should not become a fine, growing and good paying industry for Georgia."

ALLEN EDWARDS TRIES HIS HAND ON THE ROAD

Allen Edwards, of the office force of Paine & Stamps, had last week his first try-out as a road salesman, and he seemed to like it immensely—and the beauty of it is that the big produce firm seemed to like it—for Allen was able to deliver the goods. Talk about through the sickness for a few days of Cliff Edwards, and it is a sence Allen was forced into commission. He was out three days and he behaved himself and secured business like an old-timer. He says he doesn't wish Cliff any bad luck, but any time he is ailing he will be "Johnny on the spot" to make his run for him.

In the absence of Allen from the shipping department W. P. Fain was the very efficient shipping clerk for the produce house for a few days.

"SWEETS TO THE SWEET," SAYS MANAGER HANCOCK

Atlanta evidently has a sweet tooth these days. Manager Hancock, of the Dixie Pickle and Preserving company, reports that while business has been good all this season, that all his men have been working the city for the past few weeks with success, yet sales on fancy groceries are unusually good. "Of course, this is the season for them," said Mr. Hancock, "but the sales on these goods, particularly, have been very gratifying for the past week or so."

The DOCTOR'S ADVICE
by Dr. Lewis Baker

The questions answered below are general in character, the symptoms or diseases are given and the answers will apply to any case of similar nature.

Those wishing further advice, free may address Dr. Lewis Baker, College Bldg., College-Ellwood Sts., Dayton, Ohio, inclosing self-addressed stamped envelope for reply. Full name and address must be given, but only initials or fictitious name will be used in my answers. The prescription can be filled at any well stocked drug store. Any druggist can order of wholesaler.

Sarsaparilla comp., 5 ozs.; wine of colchicum, one-half dram; sodium salicylate, 4 drams; iodide of potassium, 2 drams.

Miss Bertie L. asks: "What remedy can you recommend to reduce obesity safely? I want to reduce about thirty pounds."

Answer—I rely on five-grain arbolene tablets as being the most effective and convenient treatment to reduce abnormal fat, dropping this in small tablets with complete directions. After the first few days a pound a day is not too much reduction.

Mrs. M. D. D. asks: "Do you think it is possible for me to increase my weight from 97 pounds to about 125 pounds?"

Answer: Yes, I believe that the regular use of a special tonic tablet will do this for you as it has for thousands of others. Ask your druggist for three-grain hypo-nuclane tablets in sealed packages with full directions. Take them for several months to get the full benefit.

"Ray" writes: "Can a sufferer from bronchial trouble be relieved? Doctors do not seem to help me, what would you suggest?"

Answer: To relieve chronic cold, sore throat bronchitis, I would advise the use of concentrated essence mentho-laxene. Purchase this at any drug store in 2½ oz. packages and mix according to directions given on bottle and you will very shortly be relieved of all bronchial trouble. This will not only relieve, but will correct, and in very short time will cure.

M. G. W. asks: "What can one do for a bad catarrhal condition? I have suffered a long time and am unable to find relief. In addition to catarrh in throat and nostrils, I am also affected with Pelvic Catarrh (or leucorrhea)."

Answer: A good tonic and builder such as three-grain hypo-nuclane tablets should help you very much, while using antiseptic Vilane Powder for douche. Get either a two or eight ounce package of the powder and complete instructions with package will tell you how to use.

John C. L. writes: "I find my natural strength and nervous system failing me. I who not relish food, and what food and rest seem not to benefit as they should. Am weak, despondent and unable to perform the duties which were assumed earlier in life, while my ambition for work and pleasure is slowly going."

Answer: I think a powerful, harmless tonic and nerve builder will help materially and restore the functions of digestion, assimilation and elimination by invigorating the nervous system. Obtain three-grain hypo-nuclane tablets, packed in sealed boxes and take as per directions accompanying.

"Young Woman:" "For several years I have doctored for distressing stomach symptoms, such as sour stomach, belching, accumulations of gas, heartburn, drowsiness after eating, sleeplessness, coated tongue, bad breath, inertia, and I am getting thin and weak, my complexion is poor, and so far have not been improved by the medicines I have taken."

Answer: Your need is medicine to aid digestion, overcome dyspepsia and tone up the stomach, liver and bowels. I advise you to take double-four stomach and bowel medicine, sold in sealed packets, by druggists, with complete directions.

Miss Adele writes: "My hair is combing out, my scalp itches and dandruff is very annoying, and I want something to cure these conditions."

Answer: For hair and scalp troubles I have never found anything to equal the beneficial results of a thorough treatment of plain yellow minyol. It is cooling, cleansing and invigorating, and thousands now use it regularly as a hair and scalp tonic.

Henry J. C. writes: "Something seems to be wrong with my system and I don't know what it is. I have huge puffs under my eyes, my eyes are bloodshot in morning and my feet and ankles are swollen. Sometimes I have chills and feel weak and tired most of the time."

Answer: Your stimulating organs, such as liver and kidneys, are in need of treatment. Begin taking balmwort tablets at once. Get them in sealed tubes with full directions of any well-stocked druggist.

C. M. C. asks: "Please relieve me of a coated tongue, foul breath, headache, constipation, which ill health I suffer."

Answer: If habitually constipated, you should take three-grain sulpherb tablets to cool and purify the blood and to eliminate waste material from your body. These tablets purify the blood and improve the health by acting on the liver, kidneys and bowels. Obtain in sealed tubes with full directions.

"Sarah" says: "Can anything be done for one who is bothered with rheumatism? If so, please reply."

Answer: You can be relieved of your rheumatism if you take the following: Mix by shaking well and take a teaspoonful at meal times and at bedtime and you will soon be relieved. Comp. essence cardui, 1 oz.; comp. fluid balmwort, 1 oz.; syrup

Keep Your Lungs Strong

This advice is doubly important with the knowledge that every three minutes some one in the United States succumbs to consumption and many refuse to realize they are afflicted until it is too late.

It is after colds or sickness, from overwork, confining duties or when general weakness exists that tubercular germs thrive because the resistive powers of the body are weakened.

Only with fresh air, sunshine and abundant rich blood can one hope to arrest progress, and the concentrated fats in Scott's Emulsion furnish fuel for rich blood, and its rare nourishment helps strengthen the lungs while it builds up the forces.

If you work indoors, tire easily, feel languid or run-down Scott's Emulsion is the most strengthening food-medicine known and is free from alcohol or stupefying drugs. Avoid substitutes.

GIRL STOLE JEWELS AND BURIED THEM IN HER BACK YARD

Thomasville, Ga., February 20.—(Special.)—An unusual case in the annals of crime in Thomasville was the arrest this week of a little 12-year-old white girl of respectable parentage on the charge of pursuing a systematic course of theivery from various residences in the city. Watches, a diamond pin, a necklace, breastpins, silk stockings, dresses and various articles of apparel were what the child confessed to have stolen and they were found where she had buried them in the yard at her home.

For some time past Thomasville people have been worried and annoyed by having articles of jewelry, clothing and small sums of money stolen from their homes and not until a few days ago could any clue be found in the matter. The finding by Detective Woodward of a bundle at one of the houses entered and the tracing it up to the little girl in question led to her arrest and the subsequent confession of her guilt.

RACE HATRED YIELDING TO BROTHERHOOD SPIRIT

New York, February 20.—Race hatred is giving way to the spirit of brotherhood, and democracy is gaining over aristocracy, in the opinion of Professor William Sloane, of Columbia university, and of Dr. Toyokichi Iyenaga, formerly of the University of Chicago, who were the principal speakers today in a discussion on this topic by college professors at the Republican club.

The advancement of the spirit of tolerance in New York city has been almost incredible, said Professor Sloane. The same advancement has been noticeable during the last few years on the Pacific coast, he declared, where now the races from the Far East not only are being understood but are gradually coming to understand themselves.

The present situation in Europe, the speaker asserted, is due not to rulers or merchants, but to bureaucrats, "who have to keep their jobs by fanning the fire of race prejudice." The aristocrat in this country, he added, is the political boss.

Speaking of the European war from a Japanese standpoint, Dr. Iyenaga prophesied that "democracy, internationalism and the spirit of brotherhood will arise out of the ashes of sacked towns and heaps of bones."

Inequality among races, Dr. Iyenaga said, is indisputable, but injustice comes when the color of the skin is made the criterion of equality. The best cure for race prejudice, he thought, is knowledge and association.

"We Japanese beg for no grace, but will stand on our own merit," he added. "I find the Americans the most fair-minded and just people on the face of the globe."

William Pickens, of Wiley university, Texas, also spoke.

RELEASED CONVICT MAKES DESPERATE EFFORT TO ESCAPE

J. E. Brady, alias J. E. Clark, made a break for liberty Saturday morning when he was about to be arrested by Detectives Chewning and Sturdivant. Brady was to be released by Judge Newman from the federal prison, where he had completed a five-year sentence. The detectives were waiting for Brady in the lobby, and he saw them and tried to make a getaway by running out through a side door, but he was caught and placed under arrest.

Brady is charged with escaping from the Durham coal mines, where he was serving a twenty-year sentence for blowing a safe at Forsyth, Ga. He was subsequently sent up for five years for blowing a postoffice safe in Macon. The officers say that he will now be sent back to serve out his twenty-year sentence.

UNUSUAL REAL ESTATE OPPORTUNITIES

WE BELIEVE that you can get more for your money now in high-class real estate values than you will ever get in the future. Don't play the waiting game too long—Real Estate loan money is plentiful and getting cheaper: The answer is—active trading. We have been on the look-out for unusual propositions and believe that we offer several below—from the fact that in the past it has been almost impossible to trade for central and semi-central properties.

CENTRAL EXCHANGE

WITHIN the half-mile circle, 2-story modern building fronting one of the biggest propositions in Atlanta. Size 25x100. Price $25,000. Take $10,000 residence property as part payment, balance easy.

CENTRAL EXCHANGE

WITHIN the quarter-mile circle, 2-story and basement building; in one of the busiest blocks in Atlanta. Size 22x120 to alley. Price $25,000. Take $10,000 to $12,000 residence property as part payment, balance reasonable terms.

READ THIS ONE

MADISON AVE., surrounded by warehouses, and adjoining property sold for $200 per foot, we have a lot 108 feet front. Owner will trade on basis of $200 per foot. There is against it $7,000, payable easy. Also a large corner fronting Piedmont Park that is worth around $20,000. Will trade equity of $14,800 in Madison Ave. property and give clear deed to Piedmont Ave. property at valuation of $17,500 for home on or near Peachtree Street.

SEMI-CENTRAL

ON JAMES ST., in 1,000 feet of the Candler Building, a little store lot, 25x50, worth easily $300 per foot, or $7,500. Owner will trade for building lots or residence of equal value.

WALTON STREET

NON-RESIDENT owner, 25x100 feet, Walton Street, between Spring and Bartow. Should bring $1,000 per foot. Will sell on basis of $700, take farm lands as payment, or would take $10,000 in lumber at market price.

DO YOU WANT A HOME?

SELLS AVE., near Ashby St., 55x200 feet. Every city improvement down. Price $1,250. Pay $100 cash and will make you deed taking back five-year mortgage for balance.

ANOTHER ONE

COOPER STREET near Richardson, 50x130 feet to alley. All city improvements down. Car line in front. Price $1,500. Pay $100 cash and will make you deed, taking back five-year mortgage for balance.

TWENTY PER CENT

NEAR CORNER Windsor and Richardson, 4-room house on lot 30x75 with vacant lot adjoining, 60x75. Now rented for $8.60. This property is in rear of big Apartment house, and we believe that vacant lot can be improved with building suitable for automobile garage at such a small cost that the proposition will pay 20 per cent. Price $1,200.

CENTRAL EXCHANGE

IN SEMI-MANUFACTURING section and within 250 feet of new Southern freight depot, 2-story building on lot 75x100, alley side and rear. Price $50,000. Consider $10,000 to $20,000 in smaller properties as part payment.

CENTRAL EXCHANGE

WITHIN 200 FEET of new Hurt Building, 88x100 feet—some improvements. This property should bring $1,250 per foot. Can sell for $80,000. Take $25,000 to $50,000 in other property as part payment and give long time on balance. No loan or any other incumbrance to assume.

SEMI-CENTRAL EXCHANGE

ATLANTA'S STRIDES FROM DAY TO DAY

A number of large sales featured Saturday's and last week's activities in the realty field of Atlanta and an early revival of land trading is safely expected within the next fortnight.

A better rate of interest on loans on first-class property is now offered by the loan agents in Atlanta and some loans on farm lands and choice properties are being made at the lowest rate of interest since the outbreak of the European war.

Loans Easier.

The local agent of the United States Mortgage and Trust company announces he is now in the market for business loans on choice property at 5½ to 6 per cent interest. This is the lowest rate for several months. Also, through one of the largest insurance companies, this agent announces that he is again in the market for farm loans for the first time since the war began.

Local realty men look upon this readiness to loan money on property as a certain sign that a revival in the realty business is at hand.

Substantial Building Gains.

Seven building permits, including permits for repair and alteration work, were granted by Building Inspector E. R. Hays Saturday, totaling $3,325, bringing the week's total building operations up to $47,138.

Building shows a distinct gain for 1915, including January and February through Saturday, over the same period of last year. The gain is substantially over $100,000. The total building permits for 1915 to date number 335. The total amount of these permits amounts to $705,939.

Farm Tract Sold.

H. M. Ashe, of the firm of H. M. Ashe & Co., announces that he has sold a large tract of land near Chamblee for $16,000. This tract comprises 221 acres. He also announces that he has sold a house at No. 354 Lucile avenue for $5,500 and a lot on Morgan street, East Lake, for $1,500.

North Avenue Sale.

Edwin L. Harling, of the firm of Edwin L. Harling, Real Estate and Loans, has spent a busy week closing sales. Among a number of sales that he has made was 823 East North avenue to Mrs. Mary B. Hodges for the Southeastern Investment company. The consideration was $11,500.

He also announces the sales of four lots, corner of Iverson and Thelma avenues, at $1,250 each, for a customer.

Mr. Harling sold to Mrs. Marion C. McDowell a lot on South Boulevard facing Grant park for $1,250. This lot was sold to W. K. Anderson for Mrs. A. J. F. McCloud.

In addition to the above sales Mr. Harling has also sold for Mrs. Mary B. Hodges to a customer Nos. 9 and 11 North Butler street, 90x100, with two houses. The consideration was $13,500.

Imperial Sale Denied.

A report of the sale of the Imperial hotel, at Peachtree and Ivy streets, Saturday was denied by Thomas D. Meador and E. C. Callaway, part owners of the property, last night. They admitted there had been some propositions that embraced undesirable exchange features, and for this reason the propositions had been rejected. It has been decided to entertain no offers for the present time.

JOHN D.'S INSTITUTE IS SUED FOR $200,000

New York, February 20.—Two personal damage suits for $100,000 each were brought here today against the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research and members of the hospital staff, by Joseph and Remedios Garcia. The latter alleges that while she was employed as charwoman in the institute "the defendant physicians and experimenters corruptly took advantage of her position and induced her to submit to and be inoculated with a serum of toxin which caused her to be incurably and permanently inflicted with a malignant disease."

Both plaintiffs allege that later the defendants prevailed upon them to leave the United States.

Jerome D. Greene, secretary of the Rockefeller foundation, who was manager of the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research at the time of the occurrence complained of in the suite of Joseph and Remedios Garca, said tonight:

"The plaintiffs in this suit were employed at the institute at the time referred to, the husband as a porter and the wife as charwoman. They both complained of symptoms of a disease, and the ordinary methods of diagnosis were applied to see if they had the disease. As the institute did not at that time undertake to treat patients they were referred for treatment to a competent physician in private practice to whom the appropriate drug was supplied.

"At no time was any material injected by the institute. The drug administered by the outside physician was a familiar compound of a purely chemical nature.

Later, when the husband desired to return to his native country, some of his friends at the institute contributed their own money to enable him to make the journey."

CORBETT SAYS

By James J. Corbett.

That Havana combination ought to send for Sam Langford. The Cubans stood for Young Ahearn and Willie Lewis, and ought to be ripe for anything in the fighting line. The "Langford league" season could be started down there as most of the colored boys are on the ground. Battling Jim Johnson and Sam McVey are already there, and Joe Jeannette, I understand, is on the way. It's a fine chance for Sam to fatten both his batting average and his bank roll at the same time.

Word comes from Sydney that Jeff Smith recently turned the tables on Mickey King, the middleweight champion of Australia, and according to the wise men of the game over there that means Jeff is champion of the world.

The middleweight title does not lack claimants. Smith modestly asserts that he is now the world's champion, as does Young Ahearn. Then both Al McCoy and Jim Clabby have also filed their claims to the honors. Mike Gibbons has not yet told any one that he is champion, but a majority of the sports in this country would be ready to string with him if he is matched with any of the numerous "champs."

This is the season for legislation, and it is pleasing to note that boxing is coming in at last for a little respectful attention from the lawmakers in various parts of the country. Boxing bills have been presented in a number of states and the prospects at this time are that the good old sport will be revived in a number of localities where it has been taboo for years.

Here in New York considerable dissatisfaction has been expressed at the manner in which the commissioners have handled the sport, and while a bill has been drafted that would put a stop to boxing it is not thought there is a ghost of a chance of its being passed. Governor Whitman is known to favor boxing, and as long as his excellency is disposed to be friendly the fans will have small cause for worry over the situation.

I believe with Mr. Whitman that the members of the boxing commission should be paid salaries, and substantial ones at that. While district attorney he kept in touch with the sport and realizes that boxing has become popular with men in all walks of life. The governor can be depended upon to do the right thing by the sport.

A striking illustration of the desire for education in Formosa is furnished by the fact that the English Presbyterian mission is founding a high school in Tainan which will cost $60,000. Toward this sum $30,000 has been contributed by non-Christian Chinese.

GOOD FIGHTS FOR GOTHAM IN FUTURE

BY JAMES J. CORBETT.

Former Heavyweight Champion of the World.

New York, February 20.—Promoters in New York and elsewhere are trying to work up interest in a Packey McFarland-Freddy Welsh match, so do not be surprised if you wake up some of these fine mornings and learn that the champion has agreed to box the stockyards' expert ten no-decision rounds.

If the match is made New York will probably get it. McFarland is a tremendous card in Gotham, and no matter who his opponent may be, will be sure to draw a big crowd. Against Welsh even Madison Square Garden would be none too commodious. McFarland, although apparently taking little interest in the sport these days, has, so I am informed, been working assiduously and is prepared to step in the ring on a week's notice. Instead of weighing in the neighborhood of 150, as the critics will have it, I am told that Packey will find it a joke to make 135 at 2 o'clock, the weight condition suggested in the proposed bout with the champion.

McFarland's early return to the ring will be welcomed by sports everywhere. An artist of his type was bound to be missed, and there are many who never realized just what a great little man with the gloves Packey was until he voluntarily retired. Welsh at his best would give McFarland a warm argument, as he has done several times, but the Welsh of today will find it a difficult job to keep Packey from showing him up.

The lightweight champion of the world is ripe for a licking. I trust that when Welsh is beaten it will be by a boy worthy of the title and not by some dub who has been picked as a mark, and who manages to put over a lucky haymaker.

WELSH HAS FOUGHT MANY FIGHTS, RECENTLY.

Fred Welsh has been a rather busy young man since getting back on the job. In the past month he has engaged in four bouts, and next Friday night boxes Charley White, another ten-round bout in Milwaukee. After that Freddy has nothing to do until he meets Willie Ritchie at Madison Square Garden on March 11.

It will be time enough to speculate on the result of a McFarland-Welsh match when Freddy has disposed of these two huskies. If the champion can come through both matches with flying colors it will begin to look as if we will have to call out the reserves in the person of McFarland. But Freddy will have his work cut out to even hold his own against White and Ritchie, if his recent performances in the Garden are any criterion.

Welsh outboxed Willie Beecher by no great margin, although Beecher was hog fat and at best is a poor excuse for a boxer. Joe Shugrue outpointed the champion for the second time two weeks ago and had decisions been allowed the referee would have had no alternative than to pass the title along to the Jersey boy. It is also true that Shugrue shaded White in their ten-round set-to at the Garden a month ago, but White has a better chance to defeat the champion than Shugrue, and I will tell you why:

White Has Better Chance.

Welsh, when good, was a marvelous defensive boxer. He was here, there and everywhere in the ring, and as slippery as an eel. Even Packey McFarland, admitted the cleverest of the lightweight division, found Freddy a tough proposition to hit. But in recent matches, Welsh has been slow, and when Willie Beecher can land on him time and again then there is only one thing to be said for the champion—which is that he has gone back a long way.

Carries Hard Wallop.

White carries a wallop, a punch that if it lands on the right spot is liable to put the recipient away from the count of ten. He has proved this in many encounters and in his bout with Richie came close to stopping the then champion. Welsh is no longer hard to hit; he can't evade his opponents' punches as he could several years ago. White has a left hook that is a beauty and unless Freddy is lucky he is in danger of being shaken up badly, if no more, by one of them in the coming Milwaukee bout. White has the chance of a lifetime, and that he appreciates it was demonstrated by his refusal to box Welsh when suffering from a silent cold recently. Charley realizes that one punch may make him the champion and intends to be in the very best condition health and hard work can put him when he again steps in the ring with the title holder.

Welsh Should Win.

If the match goes the limit I look for Welsh to gain the popular verdict, as White is not so flashy a boxer and appears to lack aggressiveness. At least that seemed to be his greatest handicap when boxing Shugrue at the Garden. But anyone who has seen Welsh in his last half dozen bouts will not be surprised if Charley connects with a K. O. before the ten rounds are up. Freddy, as I said above, can be hit, and White can punch as hard as any lightweight in the game today.

Welsh, if successful against White, will have what will probably prove the hardest test of his career when he faces Ritchie on March 11. The latter is determined to force the champion to give him a return bout over a 20-round distance to a decision, and to achieve this laudable ambition he will have to prove to the satisfaction of the matchmakers that he is the Willie Ritchie of old. Welsh has confidence enough in his ability to defeat his rival over a ten-round bout, but to outpoint Ritchie decisively in the coming match he will have to put on more speed than he has shown us in many a long day.

DRY GOODS SALESMEN GETTING MORE ORDERS

New York, February 20.—Shipments of cotton goods on past orders continue to increase, although new buying for future delivery has quieted down. The January purchases were in larger volume than was commonly known. The business from road salesmen is improving steadily, notably from the south and west, and from some of the larger eastern industrial centers. Prices in primary markets have held very steady, despite their quieter tone and in some instances advances have been made. One of the leadnig lines of southern staple ginghams was advanced ⅛c a yard during the week, and some lines of pillow tubings and wide sheetings have become scarce for quick delivery.

Print clothes and convertibles are more quiet with prices barely steady. Printed goods of a staple character are selling moderately well. Staple ginghams are in very fair demand. Tickings of the better known quantities are well sold and denims are being bought moderately.

Bleached cottons are still sold to arrive in the large agencies and give no indication of easing, especially on the higher counts suitable for the retail trade.

Trade in wash goods is getting better steadily. The export shipments of duck aggregated 7,200 bales in the past four weeks and further large sales have recently been made. General import business continues to improve moderately, but steadily.

Prices are as follows: Print cloths, 28-inch, 64x64s, 2⅞c; 64x63s, ¾c; 38½-inch, 64x64s, 4c; southern standard brown sheetings, 6¼c; denims, 9-ounce, 12c; tickings, 8-ounce, 11½c; standard staple prints, 4¾c; staple ginghams, 6¼c; dress ginghams, 9⅛c.

Cotton goods and yarns were quiet today. Burlaps were strong and active. Fancy woolens were in good demand for fall. More activity was shown in underwear and hosiery for spot delivery.

The fellow who stands in his own light must expect to be thrown in the shade.

The Same Old Story

Dahlonega Gold Plants Running Night and Day Mining the Precious Metal

Recent articles in The Constitution telling of the opening up of two of the abandoned gold mills in north Georgia have been instrumental in awakening interest all over the country in the gold fields which had at one time the greatest output of the precious metal of any of the gold districts in the country.

A letter from Dr. Craig Arnold, one of the biggest mining factors in Dahlonega, has been received by The Constitution. Dr. Arnold writes that mining plants are being run full blast, night and day, and that mining authorities from all sections of the country are making investigations of the fields throughout the mountain territory.

Dr. Arnold likewise prophecies that Dahlonega will again be the Mecca of the searchers for gold, and that the coming of electricty and modern mining devices has made it possible to unearth the unlimited bulk of precious metal that lies embedded in the heart of the hills.

Up until 1849 all the gold that was coined in America was supplied from Dahlonega and vicinity. When the surface metal was exhausted, operations ceased and mining interests turned their efforts to California and Alaskan fields. The revival of mining in north Georgia, however, promises to equal even the historical rush of the eighties.

Dr. Arnold's Letter.

Dr. Arnold's letter follows:

"Editor Constitution: You will be pleased to learn that the chamber of commerce of Denver, Colo., recently sat up and took notice of the article published in The Constitution, and interested Mr. Edwin Goodwin to come here and make investigations of this mining field.

"Mr. Goodwin told me last week while in Gainesville that he was surprisedly impressed with the situation. He also said that The Constitution's articles created considerable interest in mining circles all over the country, and that he anticipated several more parties coming up here with a view to becoming interested.

Rich Vein Struck.

"The old Calhoun mine is running night and day, and they have at last struck that celebrated vein. It is producing more than ever. This mine has lately been purchased by some Chicago interests.

"A placer of some 175 acres has just changed hands for a princely sum, being purchased by some mining men from Denver.

"If there be no gold up here, why all this rush?

"The Crown mountain plant, too, is running, being operated by Buffalo parties.

"The mill of the Toledo company, lessees of the old Standard Gold Mining company, is running night and day, and what is more, it is a paying proposition. Just as soon as this gets noised around the country, Dahlonega will be the Mecca for those in quest of the king metal, and will put this camp on the map of Georgia once again.

"CRAIG R. ARNOLD."

ATKINSON TO TALK BEFORE AD MEN'S CLUB

St. Elmo Massengale, president of the Atlanta Ad Men's club, announces an unusually interesting program for the club luncheon next Thursday afternoon at 1 o'clock at the Ansley hotel. The principal speaker will be the Rev. John R. Atkinson, dean of St. Philip's Cathedral. His topic will be "Ad Men—Great and Small."

Julian V. Boehm, chairman of the club's entertainment committee, has a number of surprises in store for those who attend the luncheon. Business and professional men who are not affiliated with the club are invited to the luncheon. Subscriptions may be arranged through J. H. Atchison, secretary of the club, who is affiliated with the Southern Bell Telephone company. The price per plate is 50 cents.

Farmers Seeking Employees From Labor Federation Bureau

The employment exchange, established by S. R. Marks, president of the Georgia Federation of Labor, for the purpose of supplying farm labor, for the farm tenants from the large number of unemployed in the city, has proved a great success. While Mr. Marks did not expect to solve the labor problem confronting the city authorities this winter, he has contributed a material assistance.

The farmers at first either disregarded the opportunity to obtain through this means the help whose lack they were lamenting or were reticent, believing that tenants or hands from the city might prove impractical. This attitude has changed and employers from all rural sections of Georgia are freely asking Mr. Marks for men to cultivate crops and for women to do house work. In many cases men and their wives are desired by the same persons.

The only expense necessary to be incurred, Mr. Marks says, is that of postage, as the bureau is conducted without charge to those availing themselves of its services. A prospective employer is requested to state definitely what kind of work he has and what terms he is willing to offer. His statement will be referred to those seeking such a job.

Varying kinds of situations have been met by Mr. Marks, and a gratifying number of adjustments satisfactorily made. One Englishman and his wife, recently emigrated to the United States because they could not make a living in the old country under war conditions, have sought aid from the exchange. Both he and his wife were experienced under the demands of intensive farming abroad. Mr. Marks was enabled to put them in immediate communication with farmers who were looking for the help they could offer.

UNUSUAL CULINARY DISPLAYS PLANNED FOR BIG APRIL SHOW

It is likely that Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, known throughout the world as a pure food expert, will be one of the speakers at the Pure Food show to be held in the revivalist tabernacle, in Peachtree street, on April 5, 6, 7 and 8 under the auspices of the Atlanta Hotel Men's association and the Atlanta branch of the International Stewards' association.

Dr. Wiley has already been invited to attend the show and he has notified J. P. Letton, head of the hotel men's organization, that he heartily indorses the project and will do all he can to arrange for a visit to Atlanta during the exhibition.

Exhibitors in all parts of the country have notified Mr. Letton that they will be represented with displays in the show. There will be about 100 booths at which will be shown, not only pure food products, but also the most modern developments along the line of kitchen utensils and in the culinary art.

Chefs of Atlanta's hotels and clubs are already busy mapping out plans for culinary displays, for the best of which prizes will be offered. The show has the indorsement of the Atlanta Ad Men's club and the Rotary club of Atlanta and it will later be indorsed by the chamber of commerce, Retail Merchants' association and the Retail Credit Men and Manufacturers' association.

"It will be the biggest thing in its line ever held in the city of Atlanta," said Mr. Letton Saturday. "We are going to make it as attractive as possible and will arrange band concerts to be held daily in connection with the various other features. The proceeds of the show will be used in two big advertising schemes to boost Atlanta."

KAPPA SIGMA MEN OF THREE STATES TO MEET MONDAY

With delegates from Georgia, Florida and Alabama present, the annual conclave of the sixth district of the Kappa Sigma fraternity will be called to order in the convention hall of the Hotel Ansley Monday morning at 10:30 o'clock.

Ed L. Sutton, district grand master, will preside.

There will be two business sessions, the first in the morning, to be followed by a final gathering after lunch, at which time officers for the current year will be elected.

Aside from the business that is to come up before the delegates, several social features have been planned, including an informal reception to the visitors at Alpha Tau chapter house at Tech and a banquet at the Ansley in the evening. The reception will be from 5 until 7 o'clock and the banquet is scheduled to commence half an hour later.

Among the distinguished visitors will be R. Allan Stephens, of Danville, Ill., one of the national officers. Fully twenty-five visiting delegates will be present, not to mention the local alumni, which numbers over 150.

Can't Stop Exports.

(From The Cleveland Leader.)

It is a waste of time and energy to petition congress and the president to stop the exporting of wheat, flour and other food staples, or any of them. The reasons are perfectly plain.

The constitution expressly forbids the levying of duties on exports. That clause was written into the fundamental law of the nation to prevent possible unfairness to states or sections. To alter or repeal that provision of the constitution would require a long time, even if the change were supported by a sufficiently large majority of the people of the United States.

It is impossible, of course, for congress to pass a valid act in contravention of the constitution. Nor can the executive head of the nation do what the constitution prohibits. As a war measure an embargo on wheat or flour might be possible, but this country, fortunately, is not at war. While peace lasts the constitution has full force, in all respects.

Even if the way were not so completely blocked against action by the federal government, an attempt to stop the exporting of any great staple would encounter violent and formidable opposition. Millions of producers and shippers would fight any such interference with their business.

Other ways of meeting the high cost of living will have to be depended upon. The embargo plan simply can not be made effective.

STARS AND STORIES OF THE MOVIES

Conducted by L. E. Winchell.

WELLS TO OPEN LYRIC; SENSATION, 'HYPOCRITES,' THE FIRST ATTRACTION

Thousands of movie fans in Atlanta have heard and read about the wonderful screen sensation, "Hypocrites" now playing to the capacity of the Longacre theater in New York. Those thousands and additional thousands are going to be delighted with the announcement that the wonderful picture will be seen here. Jake Wells has decided to accept the situation just as it is theatrically and turn on the lights at the Lyric, devoting the theater to feature picture plays, commencing Monday, March 1, with "Hypocrites" as the first attraction.

The Lyric's policy will be two exhibitions daily—a matinee at 2 p. m. and an evening performance at 8:30—all seats reserved and at a fixed admission price of 25 cents afternoon or evening. Seats may be secured in advance; reservations can be made by telephone, and because of the fact that the Lyric will be operated precisely as the other legitimate theaters, theater parties can be made up with the assurance that there will be seats for every seat will be couponed and reserved for the holder of the ticket. Each week there will be a special feature exhibited afternoon and evening. There will be no advance in prices at any time, and season reservations can be listed without additional cost.

"Hypocrites" was produced last month at the Longacre theater in New York and the first week recorded 14,000 admissions at $1 a seat. Every newspaper in New York, news and commercial papers, weekly magazines and bulletins, gave space of praise to the most wonderful picture that has ever been placed on a screen. The National Board of Censorship called in a committee of representative New York people to sit with the board in passing on the picture and this combined committee gave "Hypocrites" the only special report that has been written for a picture play. Norman Hapgood, the editor of Harper's Weekly, saw the picture and editorially said "Hypocrites" is the finest both in spirit and execution the art of motion pictures has borne. The New York Press declared the picture to be the most superb of all motion pictures.

The Evening Mail's review said, in part:

"It was a notable assemblage of film folk and theatrical personages on Wednesday evening at the Longacre theater when William Sherry presented for the first time the Bosworth (Inc.) production, 'Hypocrites.' To say that the film 'went over' would be putting it mildly. As a production it not only pleased, but it made them all think, and it made them all talk, and talk seriously. As one very prominent and very successful scenario writer, a man who has made millions for others by the scenario work he has done, put it: 'If the public will take to this as they should, there is room for all of us who write. We can begin work now on really big things for films.'

"The presentation was perfect in almost every respect. The picture that Jake Wells will use to inaugurate a season of special photo-plays at the Lyric theater. The season starts on Monday, March 1. The result will be watched with interest.

W. H. CRANE IN "DAVID HARUM"—MONTGOMERY

An unusual acquisition to the realm of the photo-play is included in the announcement of the latest feature attraction at the Montgomery Monday and Tuesday, February 22 and 23, which presents William H. Crane in his immortal characterization, "David Harum," a famous Players-Paramount five-part production.

"David Harum" has been read by millions of delighted readers, and seen on the stage by thousands, to which appreciative number will be added considerably by all who will be anxious to see this prominent star enact his greatest characterization on the screen.

"David Harum" is unique as a work of the drama. It does not represent life in the manner presented in many of the modern plays, but reflects a type of story and personality of the most natural kind, though removed from the more usual principles of dramatic composition. "David Harum" as a character-study assumes first rank with the dramatic type delineations of the past half century. It is a character that is bound to expand one's outlook on the world and give one a broader sympathy for his fellow-beings. The honest philosophy and truthful creed of David are as welcome in a world with too many deceptions as a glint of sun on the lift of a song amid despair and gloom. The teachings of David, as exemplified in the development of the story, become more than drama—because they are based on truth and humanity, and not merely on an artificial foundation upon which only too often stage structures are built.

Though William H. Crane's personal achievement dominates the story, he is supported by an unusually competent cast, and assisted in giving the story its fullest value by a production commendable in its mechanical and artistic scope.

FINAL EPISODE OF THANHOUSER SERIAL

The final episode of the "Million-Dollar Mystery," by Herold McGrath, and one of the most successful serial photo-plays ever produced, will be shown at the Vaudette on Wednesday, February 24. Millions of people are waiting to see this interesting episode, to see the solution of the mystery, to see the closing chapter of this great serial.

The episode will announce the winner of the $10,000 prize offered by the Thanhouser Film corporation for the best hundred word solution of the mystery. It will show how the entire mystery can be solved in a hundred words. How the million dollars disappeared and how it was found.

The last episode is played by the same cast of characters as in the previous episodes—Florence LaBadie, James Cruze, Marguerite Snow, Frank Farrington and Sidney Bracy. These favorites portray with remarkable dramatic intensity the plot as written by the winner of the $10,000 prize.

Left to right: Francis X. Bushman appears in "The Accounting," Essanay prize 3-reel drama, Alamo No. 2, Tuesday, and in a 2-reel drama Friday; Charles Richman and Catherine Countiss in "The Idler," at the Grand Monday and Tuesday; Harry Mustayer and Mary Ryan in "Stop Thief," at the Montgomery, March 2 and 3; Rosemary Theby, in 3-reel Victor, "The Hard Road," at the Savoy Tuesday.

The Wells Interests Again Control "Grand"

This week's Grand program promises to be the best that has been offered in the famous old theater since it has become the popular movie house of Atlanta. And though the Wells interests have again assumed control of the theater, with Hugh Cardoza as its guiding spirit, there will be no change in the policy of 5 cents admission.

The Wells people expect to introduce innovations, add comforts and conveniences for the theatergoers and do a lot of things to make every Grand visitor actually happy. The weekly program of three features will grow better and better as the season goes along, and movie fans may expect some tremendous surprises in the way of features at 5 cents a seat—11 a. m. to 10:30 p. m.

There is the keenest sort of interest among the young folk in the contest for the juvenile auto to be presented to the most popular boy and girl Grand patrons. The little cars are on exhibition in the Grand lobby and attract great attention. The boys and girls are collecting coupons with interest and the contest will heat up this week to a regular race. The program for this week is very inviting. Monday and Tuesday the Box Office Attractions company's feature, "The Idler," will be the offering. It is a great picture, with Charles Richman and Catherine Countiss in the leading roles of the C. Haddon Chambers success. The picture has played in New York at dollar prices, attracting great attendance, and it has recently been in New Orleans and Birmingham at high prices. There are five parts and more than 400 scenes. On Wednesday and Thursday the Hybar Film Corporation's feature, "The Chocolate Soldier," with the original New York cast, will be the offering. This is conceded to be one of the great successes of modern screen work. The members of the company that held the New York Casino stage for more than a year traveled thousands of miles and visited foreign countries in making the picture. There are thousands of people used in supporting the cast and in making what is conceded to be a tremendous feature in motion pictures. Friday and Saturday the Box Office Attractions company comes to the front again with its marvelous success, "Will-o'-the-Wisp," a picture made in California during a flood period and that has recorded scenes that are educational as well as entertaining. It just happened that a company of movie players were producing another play and the flood came. Immediately a new scenario was written, and the "Will-o'-the-Wisp" produced with effects that could not have been gotten in any other way. The flood destroyed thousands of dollars worth of property and cost the lives of hundreds of people.

The Grand is fast becoming the popular movie theater of Atlanta, and that its comfort and conveniences have all to do with it is a fact that is being evidenced every day.

Louise Orth.

The Grand Announces Mary Pickford Films On Regular Program

Jake Wells, in assuming control of the Grand again, has determined, if possible, to make the Grand the most popular 5-cent admission-price movie theaters here. The program announced for the week, as it plays elsewhere on this page, has been made more inviting by an arrangement just perfected in New York, whereby a series of Mary Pickford pictures will be introduced each week in addition to regular features. And there will not be any advance in the price—5 cents for the best seats at all times.

On Monday and Tuesday, the idol of the movie fans will be seen in "New York Hat," a splendid subject, and on Wednesday and Thursday, Miss Pickford will be the star of "The Violin Maker of Cremona," one of her most popular successes. The week will end with Friday and Saturday presentations of little Miss Mary in "The Inner Circle," a screen success that helped to make Miss Pickford the great star she is today.

In addition there will be a comedy reel each day, making a program that is about the biggest bargain for the price of admission that has ever been offered in a movie theater—a big special feature, the Mary Pickford picture and a comedy reel, changing every other day to a complete new program.

HESSER STARTS WORK PRODUCING PICTURES

Edwin Bower Hesser started work on the actual production of motion pictures in Atlanta last Thursday, when he took his full company, including all the members in the school of motion picture acting, to Stone Mountain for the first day's work on a three-reel society drama which he is making. Excellent results were obtained during the trip and these were equaled by the quality of work obtained on Friday, when several scenes were taken on prominent Atlanta streets with thousands of people looking on. So far, the Hesser enterprise has been a great success and, although he has retained only a small portion of one-third of those persons admitted to the school, he says that he is well satisfied with Atlanta talent and that he expects to make excellent photo-players of most of the people who are now in the school. The failure of some of the students to show ability necessary to keep them in the class has left vacancies in both the morning and evening sessions and these Mr. Hesser is very desirous of filling during the present week.

Mr. Hesser intends to stay in Atlanta for at least eight or nine months and to produce on an average of two features a month while he is here. If conditions prove very acceptable it is probable that he will make it a permanent location for at least part of each year and his opening of the field intends to make Atlanta a motion picture community in the future.

SECRET SERVICE DRAMA AT ALAMO TUESDAY

Essanay's great drama of the secret service, "The Accounting," will be presented at the Alamo on Tuesday, February 23. Never was there a man, woman or child not interested in the doings of the secret service operators. This phase alone has aroused the interest of the general public. That and the fact that Francis X. Bushman is the leading part is enough to insure the success of the drama.

The play is filled with all the thrilling adventure that its name implies. Mr. Bushman, as the United States secret service agent who is at work on a mission in Europe to prevent the alliance of two continental principalities, is declared by critics who have reviewed the play to have reached the heights of dramatic insight, playing the part with a skill that cannot be surpassed.

Beneath the diplomatic battle of three nations, there is a love plot that reaches the hearts of all. Miss Beverly Bayne, as the foreign spy, plays her part with exceptional skill. While she is defeated in her plans to recover papers belonging to her government from the United States secret service agent, she wins a husband in the very man who balked her purposes.

The drama is the sixth complete prize mystery play produced in connection with "The Ladies' World." The complete short story appears in the magazine for March with the exception of one paragraph. The magazine is offering large prizes for this last paragraph, which can be seen only in the Essanay film. This means that the readers of the magazine will look for the film to solve the mystery.

Francis Bushman will be seen again at the Alamo on Friday in "The Stars Their Courses Change," supported by Edna Mayo.

VERSATILE SCREEN STAR AT SAVOY TUESDAY

Rosemary Theby, of the Universal company, who is considered one of the best-dressed women on the screen, is also very versatile and takes delight in playing character roles quite as much as she does roles requiring elaborate costuming. Such a triumph as she achieves in "The Hard Road," which will be shown at the Savoy on Tuesday, February 23, must be indeed gratifying to the talented player. It is in this remarkable Victor play that Miss Theby is seen in a lovely evening frock of white satin with the simplest of lines. The only trimming is a deep girdle of orange-colored velvet. As to the plot: Two sisters, young girls, live happily with their widowed mother. One is engaged to a good, hard-working man, while the other eventually succumbs to the wiles of a shaft employer who finally induces her to leave her poor home. The story then continues through episodes of her life, ending in her complete downfall. From a beautiful woman she is reduced to a shivering bundle, asleep on the sidewalk. It is quite difficult to imagine our lovely favorite to be the same bedraggled little body which fades out at the close of the picture. One of the best features of such a production is the splendid lesson which is taught to young girls, and there is no doubt whatever that both Miss Theby and her able co-star and -director, Harry Myers, will receive many letters of congratulation for the success of this film.

THIS WEEK AT ALPHA A WEEK OF STARS

This promises to be an all-star week at the Alpha. Manager Al Fowler has secured a program of Universal pictures, nearly all of which are played by the well-known stars in that aggregation.

On Monday "The Master Key" will be the bill. This is the great serial that Robert Leonard and Ella Hall have made so popular. In this week's episode, Dore and Ruth take a trip to the Orient and continue the search for the idol. On Tuesday, Billie Richie will be presented, in an uproarious comedy entitled, "Almost a Scandal." The opening scenes in a park are of the usual knock-about sort, and with the sword duel scenes at the last are very amusing. On Tuesday, also, a two-reel number will be seen in which Murdock McQuarrie appears as a sheriff, and Aknes Vernon as his married daughter, who is infatuated beyond on a slight pretext and flirts with another. The sheriff tells the story of how her mother deserted her for another man. The story is strongly featured and full of interest. The western scenic effects are good, particularly the scenes on the desert, where the husband finds the mother dead and the baby still alive. It is a picture of strong moral trend.

On Thursday Mary Fuller will be shown in "The Counterfeit."

On Friday, "Three Bad Men and a Girl" will be shown. This is a two-reel western number, written by Grace Cunard and played by her and Francis Ford. These cowboys are mistaken by the residents of a small town for three bandits, and the town is turned over to them. They shoot up the town and have a good time until the real bandits come and abduct the girl. Then the cowboys go to her rescue, and there is a prolonged fight on the edge of a cliff. The girl then crosses on a rope to safety. The plot is full of humor and novelty.

On Saturday, Rosemary Theby and Harry Meyers are scheduled to appear.

Helen Offered Job.

Helen Holmes has been offered a new position. Any time she tires of photo-play work, she knows where a job as bridge tender awaits her. It all happened while Kalem's latest episode of the Hazards of Helen Railroad series, "The Open Drawbridge," was being filmed. In one of the scenes, Miss Holmes was required to operate one of the huge drawbridges in the state of California. It seems that an official of the railroad which owns this bridge was present when the Kalem actress, with all the assurance in the world, raised the huge structure and then lowered it back into position. When the scene had been filmed, the rabid enthusiastically turned to the actress and informed her that the berth of bridge tender was hers whenever she cared to apply for it.

MASON SHORT $8,000, AUDITOR TELLS COURT

Employee Quotes Prisoner as Saying, "I Didn't Know It Was That Much."

Bound over under a charge of larceny after trust, John R. E. Mason, the Empire Tire company manager, who was arrested en route to Washington at Charlottesville, Va., was remanded to jail yesterday in municipal court under bond of $5,000.

W. C. Maryville, an attache of the Empire Tire offices, testified that on last Saturday he and E. S. Conover, auditor of the concern, visited Mason's apartments, where they informed him that there was a shortage of $6,000 in his books.

They quoted Mason as replying: "I didn't know it was that much."

It was testified by the auditor that there was a shortage of more than $8,000 in the prisoner's accounts.

Mason would make no statement, either on the stand or to newspaper men.

Better Times Shown By Larger Attendance At Southern Theaters

"Proof of the fact that business conditions are rapidly recovering, if not already at a normal state, is to be seen in the surprising increase in theatrical patronage. When the amusement world begins to take on a hue of prosperity, it is indisputable proof that general conditions are remarkably improved."

This was the statement of Ellison Van Hoose, the noted lyric tenor, who arrived in Atlanta Saturday from Rome, where he has been visiting his brother, Prof. A. W. Van Hoose, president of Shorter college. Mr. Van Hoose is accompanied by his wife, and is stopping at the Hotel Ansley.

The celebrated singer is a native Georgian, having been reared in Gainesville. He is now upon a tour of the continent, supported by his own organization, the Ellison Van Hoose Concert company, which contains such stars as Jeannette Norman, the prima donna soprano, and Edna Bents, the accompanist.

Faces As Fair As An Orchid

Are Possible When Stuart's Calcium Wafers Are Used After Meals to Clean Up Skin Eruptions And Discolorations.

When a face is covered with blotches, liver spots, pimples, blackheads, etc., Stuart's Calcium Wafers will act like some magical charm. However, there is nothing magical about them. They are nature's own way of cleansing the human blood and preventing it from filling the face of the body—the skin—with pimples and little skin eruptions.

The abolishing of all skin disorders must begin with the blood. Lotions, salves, cosmetics, etc., will do no material good. The trouble comes from within and there the remedy must be applied.

If you really desire quick action and at the same time a common sense, natural, harmless blood purifier, then Stuart's Calcium Wafers is this remedy.

The correct and best blood purifier known to science is—Calcium Sulphide. This great cleanser is contained in proper quantities in Stuart's Calcium Wafers and that is why all blood troubles and skin blemishes rapidly disappear after their use.

An unsightly and pimply face due to impure blood is one of the most disgusting sights one can see, and yet all about us, upon the streets, in the theater, when traveling, etc., we see these horrible results.

There is no need for this condition if you will take Stuart's Calcium Wafers daily and keep all salves, lotions, cosmetics and other harmful preparations from clogging the pores.

Every first-class druggist in this country carries Stuart's Calcium Wafers, which are pleasant to take, harmless, and may be obtained for 50 cents a box. A small sample package will be mailed free by addressing F. A. Stuart Co., 175 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

Business Men of Georgia Give Hearty Indorsement To Four Big Cattle Shows

J. Hall Miller, of the Miller Union stock yards, of Atlanta, acting agent for the Georgia Chamber of Commerce in organizing an association under the auspices of which to hold four big cattle sales and shows in Georgia this spring, has received letters from a large number of the leading business men of the state indorsing the proposition and lending encouragement to the scheme.

It is planned by the Georgia chamber of commerce to hold the cattle shows, first in Atlanta about the second week in April, and after that in Americus, Columbus and Macon. By holding the shows and sales in these four cities it will enable a great many more farmers to take advantage of them than by merely holding them in one city.

The show will not be held in south Georgia by reason of the fact that the Georgia-Florida Fair association is already planning a similar show and sale to be held in Valdosta next October 19-23.

Mr. Miller sent out several hundred letters to leading business men of the state putting the proposition before them and asking for opinions and advice. There were, to be sure, some letters discouraging the plan as being premature or on account of untoward money conditions, but the great majority of the replies recognize the advantages of the plan and encourage it.

Enthusiastic Approval.

R. A. Saville, president of Dawson National bank, Dawson, Ga., said:

"There is considerable interest being manifested in the growing of both cattle and hogs in this section with the view of supplying the home demand. However, the farmers have very little equipment for this line of endeavor, having very few fences and shelters to protect the cattle. However, we believe that if they were able to buy pure breeds of cattle and hogs in Atlanta they would prepare for their raising on a very liberal scale.

"However, we do not think the demand would be great this year, as it would take this year to prepare pastures, raise houses and places for their winter housing and we will not until next year see any great demand for stock. We think the dealer in your city carrying stock of good breeds and at fair prices, will ultimately do a large business, but just at the moment the farmer has hardly gotten his bearings, and until he does there will be but little doing in the live stock, cotton raising or any other endeavor."

J. P. Heard, president of the Fourth National Bank of Macon, Macon, Ga., said:

"I certainly would be pleased to see more and better grades cattle and hogs in this country than there are now and will be glad to be of any service I can to you along that line."

L. T. Pattillo, president of Bank of Buford, Buford, Ga., said:

"I would be very glad to see some sales of pure bred cattle and hogs put on in this section of the state, and believe it will be more to start the farmers in this section in the business than anything else.

"I have talked with a number of our farmer friends and some of them seem very anxious to buy some pure-bred cattle, and very anxious to see this business move up in our section of the country."

A. W. Muse, president of A. W. Muse & Co., Albany, Ga., said:

"There is a widespread movement to increase the supply and quality of hogs and cattle. I think a great many are interested in the question you raise. I would not, however, advise any shipment here on a considerable outlay of money until you come and look over the situation and judge for yourself as to what can be done."

Frank D. Allen, president of the Brunswick Bank and Trust company, Brunswick, Ga., said:

"I would like very much indeed to see sales of pure-bred cattle and hogs in this section of the state, and am willing to do what I can to co-operate with you."

Jordan Praises Move.

G. Gunby Jordan, president of Eagle and Phenix mills, Columbus, Ga., said:

"You, of course, will find much to discourage you at first. The people of the south are very conservative in their politics, religion and all reforms. They are only doing exactly what their grandfathers did. Fool with it least. But there is always a chance to convince the more liberal and the thorough investigators, and there is no doubt that pure-bred cattle and hogs are needed in the state of Georgia. There are a good many sensible, progressive men who already have these, and have found them profitable and comforting."

W. Tutt, president of Pruitt-Murray company, Thomaston, Ga., said:

"I think the idea is a good one. Some parties here have already bought some pure-bred cattle and hogs."

J. N. Starr, of Starr & Paschall, Calhoun, Ga., said:

"There is a disposition in Gordon county among some of the leading farmers to pay more attention to pure-bred hogs and cattle than therefore, and I am inclined to think that your scheme to have sales in several sections of the state is a step in a direction that would mean much to the state and I would be glad to see you become interested in this immediate section, and it will be a pleasure for me to render you any assistance that I can."

H. S. Cooper, vice president of the Citizens & Screven County bank, Sylvania, Ga., said:

"It is our opinion that you can dispose of some well-bred hogs and cattle in our county. Our people are in a position right now as cotton has proven unprofitable and they are ready for something else."

John H. Almand, president of Bank of Rockdale, Conyers, Ga., said:

"There are quite a lot of people in this section that are interested in pure-bred cattle and hogs, and some are bought each year, but the majority of people do not know much of these good cattle and hogs, and as none of these people see many pure-bred cattle and hogs, therefore have never been interested as they should."

Calloway Interested.

Fuller E. Callaway, LaGrange, Ga., said:

"There is unquestionably a great deal of interest in pure-bred cattle and hogs among the people of this section, but as to whether there is sufficient to justify putting on a sale here at this time we are not prepared to say offhand. The buying power of our section has been greatly diminished by the low price of cotton and the large amount of the staple that is being held over ($600,000 worth being on storage in this city alone.

"A great deal would depend upon the price at which the pure-bred cattle and hogs will be sold. I would like more specifically as to the range of prices of each, and in the meantime will make inquiry, and will possibly be in position to give you a more definite opinion by the time your reply is received."

SIX BRONZE BARS AND MEDAL GIVEN FOR LONG SERVICE

Lieutenant Colonel Turner C. Thomas, of the national guard, retired, is the proud and happy possessor of a medal and six bronze bars, indicating that he has served in the military of Georgia for thirty years. The medal is given after six years of service, and for every four years thereafter a bronze bar is given.

Colonel Thomas is the third member of the guard to wear so many bars. He is a sharpshooter who has won many prizes and was for four years an aide de camp to Governor Atkinson. The first company in which he enlisted was the Richmond Hussars, Augusta being his home. The medal and bars were given to him Saturday by Adjutant General Nash. It may be added that the colonel is a handsome and jolly bachelor.

I. T. AIKEN IS INJURED IN MOTOR ACCIDENT

Ashburn, Ga., February 20.—(Special.)—I. T. Aiken, for many years an engineer on the Hawkinsville and Florida Southern railroad, was seriously injured when an automobile in which he was riding turned turtle on the National Highway at Swift Creek bridge, near Dakota, this county, late yesterday. The car was driven by a son of Mr. Aiken and when it had descended about half the distance down a steep hill it is said to have hit a root in the road, the jar in some manner deranging the steering gear, and causing it to turn over, pinning Mr. Aiken beneath it. Four other passengers of the car who were only slightly hurt quickly removed the injured man from the wreckage and he was carried to Ashburn in a passing automobile. After an examination it was announced that no bones were broken and the injuries only slight with the exception of a severe wrench of the back.

MEN BRED IN CITIES TO BE PUT ON FARMS

Washington, February 20.—The unemployment situation was discussed with Secretaries Houston and Wilson of the agricultural and labor departments at a joint meeting today by a delegation headed by Mrs. Haviland H. Lund, of New York, which presented a plan which will be given further consideration next week. The proposal is the creation of a bureau of land information for the purpose of getting city-bred men on farms. Much money would be made available for that purpose by philanthropic organizations or citizens, the delegates believe, and under experienced guidance the city men would make good farmers.

AUGUSTA POULTRY MEN ELECT NEW OFFICERS

Augusta, Ga., February 20.—(Special.)—The Augusta Poultry association has elected the following officers for the ensuing year: President, W. R. Munday; vice president, M. C. Jones; treasurer, Dr. George M. Woodbury; secretary, H. W. Cameron, and a board of fourteen directors. The dates for the next annual poultry show have been fixed for November 2-5.

KNOTTY QUESTIONS ABOUT PROHI LAW PUZZLING POLICE

Two knotty legal questions arose in that many prohibition cases in the police court Saturday afternoon.

The first was in this wise: Hood Worthy, a negro, was arrested for having on hand for illegal sale some whisky. "Bubber" Moreland, a negro witness, came forward and said the liquor was his. Then Moreland was placed on trial and he admitted that the whisky had been shipped to him. The recorder didn't believe him and held him in a $500 bond for perjury.

When Worthy was tried his case was dismissed. The evidence didn't show that the draymen had ever delivered the whisky to anybody but the policeman, who found it on the dray. The legal knot was who was guilty, and the recorder decided to let a jury pass on the admission of the witness Moreland. He said it was a trick, pure and simple, and got the case in a nice legal tangle.

The other was the seizure of four-teen cases of whisky said to have been found in a house believed to be occupied by Tom Duncan, a white man, but nobody could swear that Duncan lived in the house. Duncan would not admit it. So the case had to be dismissed.

Whole Lamar Family Faces the Recorder And All Given Fines

Like the noted Damn case in which the whole Damn family was arrested, the police had the whole Lamar family on trial in the recorder's court Saturday afternoon. Mattie Lamar, said to be a social leader in Hobo Hollow, gave a ball Friday evening at which beer bottles as decorations and red as the color scheme. A free for all fight followed the libations and the police came in as uninvited guests.

The recorder fined the hostess and each of her large family, including four daughters and one son, $5.75 each. Jim Lamar, the head of the family, butted in and paid the fines, but before doing so he proceeded to express his opinion of the police in terms that were couched in profanity. He was arrested and fined $5.75.

"Now, the family circle is complete," remarked the recorder.

RECEIVER NAMED FOR MAURICE MANNHEIM CO.

Macon, Ga., February 20.—(Special.) Pringle Willingham, of Macon, was today named receiver for the firm of Maurice Mannheim company, of Hawkinsville, against which an involuntary petition in bankruptcy was brought yesterday. Judge Speer also adjudicated the company bankrupt.

The petitions in bankruptcy and for a receivership were brought by the Hawkinsville Bank and Trust company and other creditors. The assets of the concern are placed at $3,200.

Two New Santa Fe California Trains

The Santa Fe reports that tourist travel to California this winter is much better than last season. All of its five trans-continental trains are running almost to full capacity. The European war seems to have stimulated interest in seeing our own land, particularly the Far West.

Prospects for Panama Exposition business are so good that the Santa Fe announces a brand-new daily fast train, Chicago to San Francisco and Los Angeles to be known as the Missionary. The name is a reminder of the old Spanish missions of California. The Missionary will make its initial run February 7, leaving Chicago 10:30 p. m., Kansas City 10:45 a. m., arriving Los Angeles 7:50 p. m. the third day out and San Francisco 8:00 a. m. following morning. It will traverse the Belen cut-off, saving many miles in distance, over mountain range and several hours time. By this route there is a new line through Denton, Texas, through the Panhandle of Texas to Albuquerque, than the old main line through La Junta. While passing the picturesque scenery of Raton and Glorieta passes, the traveler who takes the Missionary will find much of scenic and historic interest in Abo Pass, noted for its wild grandeur and prehistoric ruins. Beyond the Rio Grande the route is that of the other Santa Fe trains to the coast.

On the same date through service will be inaugurated from New Orleans to California, via Gulf Coast Lines (Frisco) to Houston, thence "Santa Fe all the way" over the cut-off. This new train, the California Special, will compete for Exposition traffic from the Southeast to Pacific coast. It will run over the shortest line from New Orleans to San Francisco.—(adv.)

FARMERS OF WILKES WILL RAISE CATTLE

Concerted Movement Is Organized by Wilkes Live Stock Association.

Washington, Ga., February 20.—(Special.)—Wilkes county will soon begin to feel a strong, although indirect benefit from the demoralized conditions brought on by the war and its resultant effect upon the price of cotton. For the past year or more, progressive farmers of Wilkes and adjoining counties have been directing more of their thoughtful attention to the matter of cattle raising and the improvement of their stock strains. But within the past few months there has developed a concerted movement among a large number of farmers to enter upon an extensive cattle raising scale in this territory. To this end the Wilkes County Live Stock association was recently formed, a very important meeting of which has been called to discuss the best methods to improve and enlarge the cattle and stock industry in this section of Georgia.

President Austin H. Barnett, of the Wilkes County Live Stock association, who is also president of the State Live Stock association, has announced his intention to go to Missouri just as soon as the tick eradication movement is well under way in this county, to purchase a carload of registered shorthorn cattle for himself and associates. Mr. Barnett is a great believer in good stock. A small herd of pure bred Berkshire hogs of the finest strains are already owned by Mr. Barnett and his stock farm eight miles from Washington is one of the show places of Wilkes county.

Dipping vats are placed in every section of Wilkes county at a cost of $6,000 to Wilkes county besides the large voluntary subscription to the movement by private citizens. Wilkes will soon be producing some of the best types of live stock to be found in the country and in so doing the farmers of this section will not only save many dollars from annually going to the middle western states, but will realize handsomely on the investment.

Mrs. Emily Ross Perry, poetess and author of "Minnehaha Laughing Water." Has been honored by her state and given a medal in recognition of her services. She is the wife of Commander Freeman G. Perry, of Dudley P. Chase G. A. R. Post No. 68, and well known in G. A. R. and society circles. Her home address is 819 18th Ave., N. E., Minneapolis, Minn. She writes:

"I have tried Peruna and found it an excellent tonic and cure for catarrh. It is good for all catarrhal affections of the stomach and all diseases leading to consumption and bronchial troubles. I believe it to be one of the best medicines on the market, and thousands can testify to its cure with the same pleasure to the public that I can." We have many letters from women who have had a similar experience.

Peruna is a Splendid Medicine for Stomach Troubles. Thousands of Women Tell us of Their Remarkable Cures.

Mrs. Elizabeth Reuther, No. 508 Twelfth St., N. W., Washington, D. C., writes: "I am pleased to endorse Peruna as a splendid medicine for catarrh and stomach trouble, from which I suffered for several years. I took it for several months and at the end of that time found my health was restored and have felt splendidly ever since. I now take it when I contract a cold and it soon rids the system of any catarrhal tendencies.

"I would not be without Peruna. Although it was over ten years ago that I first gave you my testimonial, I am of the same opinion as when I wrote it, and give you the privilege to use it as you see fit. I still use Peruna when I think it necessary. I am recommending it to my neighbors whenever a chance occurs."

DEVELOPMENTS OF THE PAST WEEK REPORTED BY EXPERTS IN BUSINESS

ALL ALONG THE LINE WITH FINANCIERS

Why Trading in Securities Was Dull the Past Week. Our Accumulating Balances Abroad.

New York, February 20.—(Special.)—The possibilities of friction of a serious character with Germany on the shipping question could not be overlooked during the past week and as a result the security markets showed a halting tendency much of the time, with some evidences that it would not take much to have heavy liquidation of stocks and bonds running full swing. There was a startling increase of selling from Holland, most probably largely for German account, in view of developments, as it was taken to mean here that security holders in Germany were also discounting possible trouble. There is no definite feeling in banking circles that war is possible, and in some quarters there has been a tendency to say that war with that country was an utter impossibility, owing to lack of a place to wage it, but there are many well informed financial and banking leaders who are not prepared to say what may be the outcome if there should be a fulfillment of some German threats regarding shipping. American securities were under pressure in London during the week, largely as a result of existing disagreements between this country and Germany and also because of the matters of dispute with Great Britain, although from no quarter has there been even a hint that the latter affairs might terminate seriously.

Stock Market Weak.

As a result of all these conditions, and also because of bear attacks at opportune times, securities were very weak in several sessions, a number reaching minimum levels. The volume of business in the stock market fell off sharply as the week progressed, with only professionals showing much interest in what was going on. There have been too many sudden changes recently, and there are too many most important possibilities ahead of the market to keep outsiders in it now. Prices are so low that they do not prove attractive to anything but the professional bears for attack, while there are so many things which may prevent advances that few outside speculators seem to want to take the bull side just now. Investment buying has dropped off somewhat also, although it is about heavy enough to offset the foreign selling, especially in bonds. The security markets have also suffered because of a considerable diversion of attention on the part of moneyed interests to attractive new offerings. The fact that large interests are out of the stock market now has been generally acknowledged here, and it has not tended to create any demand for securities on the part of small buyers. One of the peculiar things about the market at present is that bullish talk and bull tips on stocks are most conspicuous because of their absolute absence. Everyone seems to be more or less enthusiastic about the future of the country's business, of stocks, and about future prosperity, but no one seems ready at this time to state that it is the time to buy for an advance. However, judging by the experience of some traders who have been in the market for years, the turn always comes just when no one is looking for it. There cannot be any doubt but that the market is in a much better position for an advance than it was a month ago. Then there had been a large amount of weak bull accounts started by small speculators, and although there had been a good advance, it was not founded on solid backing, and so the collapse which extended over the last month has shaken out the weak accounts and left the market better off. However, even traders who take this view do not give advice to buy with it. One bit of advice on this subject which attracted wide attention in Wall street was to hold off buying securities until the high tide of European selling had been reached here. It was pointed out in this that the only way that Europe can offset present foreign exchange prices and make its credit sounder here is by sending over larger batches of American securities. There are still at least $4,000,000,000 par value of American securities in Europe.

Decline in Foreign Exchange.

The huge exports from this country have resulted in such a trade balance in Europe that everyone had exchange to sell, and there were no buyers during the past week, and at one time the exchange market was "crazy," as the dealers said. Exchange prices on Tuesday were at the lowest point in the history of international finance, with demand sterling down to 4.9. With reports that London banking interests were going to establish a large credit, also that they would not let any gold go at this time excepting small amounts from Canada, there came a steadier tone in exchange later in the week. An international agreement between New York and London bankers is in process of formation to offset the present difficulties of accomplishing business and banking between the United States and Great Britain. Lesser difficulty exists with other nations, as most recent exchange bills have been drawn through London. Whatever is done now, however, a flow of gold to this country sooner or later is inevitable. The trade balance of the United States has been growing at the rate of about $30,000,000 a week, which means in excess of $1,500,000,000 trade balance in a year. As buying of all kinds of raw materials, manufactured goods, ammunition and other supplies for Europe is increasing steadily, the outlook is for an even greater trade balance, unless shipping is further tied up though action of German submarine attacks. There is considerable talk of effecting exchange tendencies through the purchase of British, French and Russian bonds; in fact, an offering of $500,000,000 in British bonds is said to be planned for next July for this market. It is said that the objections of the administration at Washington as to loans to belligerents have been overcome. One result of exchange tendencies is to establish "dollar exchange" in place of sterling exchange in recent transactions with South America. In contract to low exchange rates during the week sterling exchange went to $7 last August, or $2.21 above this week's low.

Leaning rates stiffened a little as a result of the possibilities of complications over the German submarine blockade. Call rates, however, did not get much above 2 per cent. Demand for all kinds of loans was at a low ebb.

After having suspended making fortnightly reports since November 1, the American Railway association resumed its statements of idle car conditions in the United States and Canada. It showed that on February 1 there were 226,641 idle cars in this country and Canada, as compared with 172,325 on November 1. In considering that in November there was a heavy grain movement in progress, the report is not so unfavorable, with its increase of 54,316 idle cars in three months, but both totals are abnormally high, and there can be no doubt but that business conditions in the country are far from good when over 225,000 of freight cars are not in use.

Very Favorable Sign.

Although the offering of $100,000,000 New York Central 6 per cent convertible debenture bonds is the largest single piece of financing in several years, as the $170,000,000 Interborough issue is spread over a long period still to run, the rush of banking houses to participate in the Central offering is considered a most favorable sign. There was a large oversubscription, so that there had to be allotments made. These were not made pro rata, however, some out-of-town bankers getting as much as 50 per cent of what they asked for, while some New York bond dealers only received 20 per cent. The rights to the subscription in the bonds have been rather freely sold by shareholders, depressing the "when issued" value from over 104 to around 102, but most of this selling of rights has been by foreign shareholders.

During March, about $80,000,000 capital will have to be raised by corporations of this country to take care of maturing issues. This will be followed by only $55,000,000 maturities in April, and then $120,000,000 in May and about $140,000,000 in June. During the rest of the year, excepting in October, when about $130,000,000 in securities mature, there will be less than $75,000,000 in every month, and less than $50,000,000 in all but July. For 1915 the total maturities is in excess of $850,000,000.

Although the statement of New Haven's new policy brought out favorable sentiment, the shares touched new minimum prices during the last week, but much of the weakness was due to selling by foreign holders. The directors of the company say that hereafter they will dispose of all holdings of all kinds not essential to the main property, and apply the proceeds of all such securities and land sales to paying off the floating debt and for improvements. It was the idea of the directors to place themselves on record as being in favor of giving all future attention to transportation.

Every effort is being made by the Boston and Maine railroad directors to avoid receivership for the road. Holders of notes due March 2 have been asked to extend them to September 2, or else to make certain arrangements to extend part and exchange part for longer term issues. At the same time, there is a movement on foot to have New Engalnd states take over the lines and run them.

Conditions of Labor.

Reports of industrial and labor conditions through the United States show that the course of improvement is slow. The money being received from foreign commerce is being gradually disseminated and is having some influence, while great efforts on the part of many leading industrial concerns to get their machinery running nearer to normal are also having some effects, but the general public has not started spending money freely yet. While retail buying of all kinds is so small, there cannot be much done by wholesalers or manufacturers in many lines. The decrease in unemployment, however, is bound to have stronger influence in this direction all of the time. There are still too many uncertainties to be overcome before anything like real prosperity can be seen. One of the great disappointments of the present time is that so little progress has been made in building up South American and Asiatic trade, as the present business with Europe is largely of a temporary character for war needs only, and does not represent the establishment of permanent markets in which to plan for future business. Such will be given when headway is made in South American business.

The Metal Market.

The copper metal market took a further turn downward during the past week, with sales of the metal at below 14 1-2 cents a pound. The stricter enforcement of blockade conditions by the allies has cut off some sales to neutrals, while other foreign buying has not been as heavy as for several months. Domestic demand has been light, while production is somewhat increased. The above applies to electrolytic copper. Lake copper has been relatively strong, with sales as high as 15 1-4 cents a pound, because of the keen demand for it by cartridge manufacturers. Electrolytic is serviceable for cartridges, but is not as good, and is more in use for industrial purposes. Sellers, however, are confident that there will be a resumption of buying of electrolytic before surplus supplies accumulate to a degree sufficient to weaken the market.

The most favorable feature of the steel market is that of foreign buying, with export orders in good volume. Domestic buying has dropped a little in the last two or three weeks from the earlier pace, but is still fair as compared with what has been seen. Prices are now about $2 a ton above the low of December. Operations of steel mills are in excess of 60 per cent of capacity in much of the industry.

Cotton and Wheat Market.

Large exports of cotton have been made in recent weeks, but the market has been weakened recently by continued liquidation by southern holders. The census bureau reported 469,000 bales consumed during January, making 2,591,000 bales consumed since the start of the season as compared with 2,817,000 for the same period last year. Exports have been 3,979,000 from the start of the season to January 31 as compared with 6,490,000 last year. While this means a falling off of over 2,700,000 in use of this year's crop from that of last, the difference is being steadily cut down by the size of the export movement and by greater activity of domestic mills. It is now expected that the total exports of cotton this year will be around 8,500,000 bales, even though that means over 4,500,000 bales to be exported from February 1 to next August 1.

The wheat market was demoralized during the last week, Saturday's sharp break being followed by a good recovery Monday and Tuesday, and then by new weakness. European buying was in evidence all of the time. Farm offerings were freer during the week than for some time. There was some tendency in grain market circles to believe it possible that action will be taken by the government to prevent further wheat exports. This had a depressing effect on speculative activity, but served to increase export buying. One day during the week, export clearances were close to 2,000,000 bushels. The new winter wheat crop is experiencing ideal weather, with the possibility strong of another new record production. Corn and oats had an easier tone during the last week.

MERCHANT MARINE IS BADLY NEEDED

Argument Why the Shipping Bill Should Have Been Passed—Opportunity at Our Door.

New York, February 20.—(Special.) Wall street beyond question was more interested than any other part of the country in this week's developments in the proposed shipping law; but interest in that subject was by no means confined to the financial district. On all sides business men from every walk of life were asking: "Why does Wilson insist on having the shipping bill passed?" Declaring that they had been told why the bill should not be passed, business men asked: "What are the arguments in favor of the law?" With the one idea of answering such inquiry, an appeal for information was made to Washington officials, who have been active in behalf of the bill. Here is the reply received:

"The people of the United States have not awakened, in the judgment of officials of the administration, to the great emergency which confronts this country in the shipping situation. It is the confident belief that when the nation begins to appreciate the power possessed and relentlessly exercised over our helpless commerce, throttled and imperiled by the greed of shipping interests, there will be a demand from ocean and from frontier to frontier for relief at the hands of the only agency that can afford relief in the unparalleled circumstances—the federal government.

Increases in Ocean Freights.

"A careful investigation of the situation has revealed conditions that should startle the country and annihilate all opposition in a patiotic coalition of all parties in an effort to free the commerce of this country. This inquiry developed:

"'Increases in ocean freight rates ranging from 50 per cent to 150 per cent on the important commodities exported from the United States.

"'Arbitrary increases of rates overnight, so that no shipper after he procures a foreign contract knows how much higher will be the rate when he is ready to ship.

"'High rates are not only restricting the general volume of our export trade but are actually stopping exports in some lines.

"'Business plants have closed down and men thrown out of employment as a result of prohibitive rates.

"'Ship owners discriminate between American commodities in favor of those which will bear the highest rate, much to the detriment of general business conditions, and particularly to such industries as coal, lumber and tobacco.

"'The South American, as well as the European, trade is being hampered by increased rates, and the opportunity of the United States to develop the South American market neutralized to immeasurable extent. Written contracts between steamship interests and shippers violated and broken because the traffic will bear double and treble the contract rates. Ocean freight rates on grain from New York to Rotterdam have been increased since the outbreak of the war 900 per cent, on flour 500 per cent, on cotton 700 per cent. From New York to Liverpool the rates on the same commodities have increased from 300 to 500 per cent. From Baltimore to European ports (excepting German) rates have been increased in grain 900 per cent, on flour 364 per cent, on cotton 614 per cent. From Norfolk to Liverpool rates on grain have increased from 157 to 200 per cent, on cotton 186 per cent. From Norfolk to Rotterdam the rates on cotton have been increased 471 per cent; to Bremen the rates have increased on cotton 1,100 per cent, namely, from $1.25 per bale to $15 per bale. From Savannah to Liverpool the rates have been increased on cotton 250 per cent; to Bremen the rates have been increased on cotton 900 per cent. From Galveston to Liverpool the rates have been increased on grain 174 per cent, on cotton 361 per cent; to Bremen the rates have been increased on cotton 1,061 to 1,150 per cent.'

Appeals From Manufacturers.

"These appalling conditions are specifically outlined and supported by the irrefutable evidence of business men in various parts of the country. Scores of letters from manufacturers and exporters appealing for relief were incorporated in the report of the two secretaries to the senate. In the view of the president, no virile government should stand feebly aghast in the fact of conditions of this character. Business throughout the country is immeasurably affected—our ports are congested with commodities ready for export to a waiting world: industries are paralyzed, because in some cases not even a rate quotation is obtainable.

"According to American Consul-General Skinner at London, this is what Sir Edward Hain, the ex-president of the chamber of shipping and chairman of the General Shipowners' Society of London had to say in this connection while discussing the question of Great Britain intervening to reduce British ocean freight rates:

"'Supposing government intervention was possible, and it could reduce the rates of freight by 10 shillings ($2.43) per ton, it would simply mean that that 10 shillings would pass into the hands of the grain sellers in the Argentine and the United States, who at the moment have a monopoly in wheat, and would be lost to the British shipowner. The price of wheat, not only in this country, but also in Italy, would remain exactly the same.'

Freight Rates a Drawback.

"Opportunity to expand commercially is knocking at the door of the United States. Here is a typical American consular report from Consul General Weddell, at Athens, January 2, 1915:

"'The sentiment in Greece is now decidedly favorable to the United States and to its products; the question of freight rates is the great drawback to the continued extension of American trade. With this difficulty removed, it is confidently believed that with a careful study of the market the ensuing years would see a steady and healthy growth in exports to the Hellenic kingdom.'

"The exorbitant freight rates alone testify to the scarcity of tonnage, and it is reliably estimated that since the outbreak of the war 5,803,014 gross tons of ocean-going vessels flying belligerent flags have been withdrawn from commercial use. This represents 13 per cent of the world's total supply of tonnage.

"No one denies that the United States should have a merchant marine. For decades all political parties have promised to strive for its restoration. There never was a time when it was needed more. Action is necessary, and the only debatable question is the nature of the action." R. L. B.

Closed steady.

New York, February 20.—Nervousness over the shipping situation appeared to be checking fresh business in the cotton market again this morning and trading was very quiet, with fluctuations narrow and with the close steady, net unchanged to 2 points lower.

The market opened at a decline of 1 to 3 points, under overnight selling orders and during the early trading sold about 3 to 4 points under last night's closing figures.

Liverpool was a shade better than due on the American close of yesterday and London advices seemed somewhat reassuring, as they indicated that war risks on over-sea commerce were still being written in large volume at comparatively low rates, but the talk around the ring here reflected a very much unsettled sentiment and there was some Wall street selling. There was nothing, however, to indicate that apprehension of a check in the export movement were causing any change of attitude on the part of southern spot holders, as there was no hedge selling here and prices soon steadied on a moderate demand from trade interests.

General business remained very quiet, and after the rally to about last night's closing figures, prices showed little further change.

The New York cotton exchange received today from the department of agriculture the tentative types of middling stained and low middling yellow and blue tinged cotton and a meeting of the revision committee was called to fix differences applying to deliveries on the first March delivery day.

Monday will be a holiday in the American markets, while Liverpool will be open for business as usual. It is reported that war risks on shipments of both grain and cotton from this country to British ports have increased during the past few days, but that the advance has not proved sufficient to check business.

Selling in New Orleans.

New Orleans, February 20.—The week-end session in cotton closed at a net loss of 2 points. A moderate volume of selling, divided between offerings from liquidating longs and short cotton, put the market 3 to 4 points under yesterday's close at the lowest, while the steadiness derived from the large mill takings for the week and the heavy export movement brought about an advance of 1 to 3 points over yesterday's finals at the highest. It was a narrow market.

Mill takings were larger than expected, 349,000 bales, and they might have stimulated buying but for the holiday Monday and the nervousness over the situation abroad.

In the week-end statement it was shown that an unusually large amount of cotton was afloat for European ports, Hester putting it at 1,300,000 bales, and longs feared that during the week to come some of this cotton might be in danger.

SELLING STOCKS SENT PRICES DOWN

But There Was Considerable Underlying Strength. New Minimum Prices for Some of the Issues.

New York, February 20.—Renewed selling of stocks at the outset of today's session was in such volume as to bring the average of prices down to the lowest level for the present movement. Speculative favorites and various specialties declined from 1 to 3 points before buying appeared and the downward movement was arrested. On the recovery, trading became dull with an irregular close. On the whole, the ease with which prices were restored, suggested considerable underlying strength.

Wall street's attention was again directed across the water, latest developments offering little immediate hope of any diminution of the recent strain. London's markets were dull and Americans were in light request. Local conditions were further complicated by recurrent weakness in foreign exchange and extreme nervousness in the cereal markets. There were intimations that our bankers were continuing their negotiations for the placing of large foreign credits here, but definite or conclusive details were lacking.

Loose-Wiles first preferred was the only stock to register a new minimum price today, declining six points to 86. Southern Railway preferred fell almost 3 points to within a fraction of its established price of 45 and Harvester Corporation dropped 15 points to its minimum of 55.

After the close of the market, the stock exchange announced this new minimum prices, effective February 23: American Car and Foundry, 40; American Locomotive preferred, 80; American Steel Foundries, 24; Baltimore and Ohio, 65; New Haven, 45; Federal Mining preferred, 24; Loose-Wiles second preferred, 74; National Railways of Mexico first preferred, 17; Pressed Steel Car preferred, 94; Seaboard Air Line preferred, 34.

The bond market was heavy, a contributing cause being the further selling of investment issues for European account. Total sales, par value, aggregated $1,170,000. United States registered twos advanced 1-8 of 1 per cent on call during the week.

Review of Two Weeks.

Increasing tension in the foreign situation, coupled with further foreign selling of American securities were paramount influences in this week's irregular stock market. Prices rose and fell to the accompaniment of European advices, the downward movement being assisted at odd times by a formidable short interest. Quotations were at their lowest for the week yesterday, the decline being coincident with the decree of the British admiralty ordering a suspension of travel between England and the continent.

Domestic affairs were mainly in the direction of improvement, general business both as to merchandise and the leading industries manifesting an inclination to expand. This was borne out by a moderate increase of bank clearings at reserve centers outside of New York. Continued heavy exports also offered ground for encouragement, but this was nullified to a great degree by the demoralized state of foreign exchange which fell to lowest rates in a generation. This unsettlement resulted primarily from the refusal of the Bank of England to release any of its gold to this country, although conditions were altogether in favor of such a movement. Several small imports of gold were received from Canada, but it is the opinion of bankers the prevailing situation can be remedied only by the placing of further foreign credits in this market.

BIG INCREASE SHOWN IN OUR TRADE BALANCE

During Month of January Our Balance Climbed to $145,536,103 in Our Favor.

Washington, February 20.—The trade balance, as shown by excess of exports over imports, touched a new high mark in the history of the country last month with a total of $145,536,103, according to complete figures for January, given out today by the department of commerce.

Exports for January were $267,801,370, against $204,066,603 a year ago, and imports were $122,265,267, against $154,742,928 in January 1914.

Gold imports last month were $6,896,398, against $10,442,373 a year ago, while gold exports were $691,509, against $6,914,056 in January, 1914.

RESERVE BANKS' GOLD DECREASED $7,500,000

Washington, February 20.—Gold holdings of the federal reserve banks decreased about $7,500,000 during the last week, while holdings of legal tender notes, silver certificates and subsidiary coin increased a little more than that amount, according to the statement of condition February 19, made public today by the federal reserve board. The statement shows:

In its weekly analysis the board says:

"Loans and discounts show an increase for the week of about $670,000, the large gains in the southern district banks being partially offset by decreases shown by the other banks. Of the total amount of paper held over 48 per cent matures within 30 days and about 82 per cent within 60 days.

"The amount of agricultural and live stock paper maturing after 90 days, but within six months, was $824,000, held mainly by the Dallas, San Francisco and Chicago banks. Discount operations of the federal reserve banks are likely to receive a fresh impetus as the result of the further resumption of discount rates authorized by the board during the current week. The New York rate of 4 per cent for commercial paper maturing within 90 days is lower than like rates maintained at present by the European central banks."

PROFESSIONAL VIEWS ON COTTON MARKET

New York, February 20.—(Special.)—Our local traders continue to feel very bearish as to the future course of prices, bringing forward the large supply to be carried over and the absence of any determined effort to reduce the acreage. Nevertheless, the market closes practicaly unchanged. Our mail advices from Liverpool contain the following report on the cotton manufacturing industry in England: "One point which may figure very largely in the consumption of the present crop is the quantity of heavy goods, or coarse counts of yarn, which are being required for military purposes, which will greatly increase the weights of the actual cotton spun as compared with that of ordinary years. There is an enormous demand at present for wool, much more than can be supplied, and this may have in its turn a considerable effect in the demand for cotton mixed with wool, especially for army uniforms, etc. It is roughly estimated that for men in the fighting line on really active service a uniform only lasts something between one and two months, so that the renewals required will absorb extraordinary amount of textile material."

HUBBARD BROS. & CO.

New York, February 20.—(Special.)—The market today showed no particular feature, business being small and of a miscellaneous character. During the week selling has been quite freely stimulated by the fear that exports of cotton from this country to Great Britain and the continent will be seriously curtailed by reason of the war zone decree of Germany. However, prices have declined only moderately under the selling pressure due to the fact that demand has been in god volume as values turned easy. Sentiment continues in favor of a further decline, as no aggressive buying is expected until the question of shipments is cleared up.

JAY, BOND & CO.

WHEAT WEAKENED; CLOSED AT DECLINE

Danger Abroad for Export Shipments Caused Selling. Prices Over 1 Cent Lower. Corn and Oats Down.

Chicago, February 20.—Dangerous conditions developed abroad for export shipments brought about a fresh decline today in the price of wheat. Notwithstanding rallies, the market closed unsettled at 1⅛ under last night. Other net losses were: Corn ⅝ to 1@1⅛; oats, ¾ to 1, and provisions 7½ to 37½ cents.

Corn was under pressure from the bears the greater part of the day.

Seaboard assertions of a big export call for oats were ineffectual to overcome, in that cereal, the results of the oppression of other grain.

Provisions showed decided weakness, especially pork.

Behind the Screens
With Britt Craig

The walnut tree and the hickory,
Productive though they be,
Could never bear a nut so rare
As any Family tree.

Wherein Our Best Bow Is Made.

Aided and abetted by our best friend and admirer, Mr. B. Craig, we have been elected to fill this space each week with linotyped monologue, trespassing two columns, sometimes more, sometimes less, upon the moving picture business.

It is going to be a permanent proposition, otherwise our raise in salary won't hold good. If, at any time, you don't like the column we warn you in advance that a threat to cancel your subscription is now considered small town stuff, and is no longer used in the best of circles.

You will note a piece of poetry at the top. It was put there at great risk of scaring our customers away. Its object is solely to keep in style. All other columns like this use poetry, only the others are not like this. Our purpose in putting it first was to hurry and get it over with.

If by any means a joke appears in this column wherein you fail to see the laugh, we have facilitated matters by inaugurating an information bureau. If you will kindly communicate with the editor of this bureau you will be promptly supplied with the point of said joke.

We'll Have Original Stuff If We Must Steal It.

In announcing the weekly perpetration of this column, we seek to impress upon the public the fact that nothing will be put in it that isn't original. Original! That's the word! We assure you that no matter how much stuff is clipped, it will, without fail, always be made to look as if it were original.

(Thanks for the applause.)

There is positively no ulterior motive in mind, no sinister design. We have no grudge against the movie fans who read The Constitution. Our intentions are the kind that makes splendid paving material in a famous winter resort.

If you don't care to laugh, turn over to the market page, where you can weep at the decline of comparative port receipts.

Having bowed, scraped and salaamed as much as we feel like doing this morning, we will now proceed to bombard the vicinity with screen shrapnel.

WAS MARY BENEVOLENT?

This from The (N. Y.) Morning Telegraph:

"Mary Fuller, the Universal star, has donated an exquisite, filmy fantasie of dainty, shell-pink, pussy-willow silk, trimmed with tiny rosebuds and flossy tassels, to the fashion auction being held in New York by the Save-a-Home fund."

The question now arises, what was it Mary gave?

Myers Is Out of His Sphere.

Tradewinds publishes this article:

"In The Message, Harry Myers, the Universal actor and director, had to hang from a window of the second story and swing his body until he could climb into another window several feet away, while eight pistol shots were fired at him at a range of 10 feet. He survived."

Mr. Myers qualifies for a first-class soulmate.

"Should Ora have sacrificed her own happiness when she saw she stood in the way of her husband's future?"

We could answer that question better, perhaps, if we knew how much happiness Ora had.

Why Not Use Eggs?

Another from The (N. Y.) Telegraph:

"While taking a scene in which Eddie Lyons and Lee Moran, the Nestor comedians, were having a fight in the kitchen of a cafe, a cabbage, thrown by Lyons, which was intended for Lee, missed and hit—Victoria Ford. The worst part of it was she was on her way home, adorned in one of her prettiest frocks."

BLANCHE SWEET.

Blanche Sweet is one of the most popular favorites of the screen. Local lovers of her work observed Monday and Tuesday for the first time her efforts under new direction, when "The Warrens, of Virginia," a 5-reel Lasky feature, was offered at the Montgomery. Since her advent into the moving picture business, but a few years ago, Miss Sweet had always been under the personal direction of the great David W. Griffith, her Christopher Columbus.

Under the master guidance of Griffith, she was an appealing actress. Her individuality radiated from the lifeless screen. But it was plain to be seen that in the "Warrens" picture she lacked the subtle Griffith touches and stimulus. Luckily, however, Miss Sweet is endowed with a wondrous element of personal charm and magnetism that are of sufficient force to counteract the loss of the Griffith touch.

During his early days as a director in the Biograph studios, in which Miss Sweet made her debut, Griffith elevated her from the obscurity of chorus girl to the constellation of stardom. He carried her, with other stars, when he deserted the Biograph for the chief directorship of the Reliance and Majestic studios. Until her departure for the Lasky organization Miss Sweet was considered the pride of the Griffith pick.

Borrowed Biographies

Mae Marsh, the Majestic star, and one of the freshest, most buoyant in the business, even if she isn't the prettiest, denies having temperament, but admits freckles. She's proud of them; they got her her first job.

Two years ago, when she stole into the Biograph studio to investigate the source of many pistol shots, Director Griffith happened to catch sight of her freckles glinting in the sunlight.

"You have a shapely head," he commented.

"Aw, them's freckles," she replied.

He brushed the straw-colored hair back over her forehead, gazed intently upon the transformation, then exclaimed:

"You're beautiful. Any girl who can roll her hair back from her forehead and stand the test, is gifted by nature."

"But I'm not," protested the spindle-legged girl. "I'm the ugliest heathen in our neighborhood—and that's some ugly." Truly, her reputation for homeliness, awkwardness and general lack of charm had exceeded even the boundaries of her own neighborhood.

"I'll give you a job acting," Griffith offered.

"Give it here," she urged.

Whereupon, Mae Marsh, the now illustrious, went to work. One of her greatest roles was "Jennie Joyce," in Griffith's notable feature, "The Escape." She is one of the valued stars in the Griffith firmament.

THE HYPOCRITES.

Now that "The Hypocrites" is booked for the Lyric all of the week of March 1, we will have a chance, perhaps, to get a line on the views of our own board of censorship. "The Hypocrites" has startled the east. It is a moral play and a sermon, and is reputed to be one of Bosworth's most elaborate offerings. Portraying the role of Truth, Miss Myrtle Edwards occupies in the neighborhood of 1,000 feet of film clad only in her personality. And it is this phase of "The Hypocrites" that is likely to be productive of the activity on the part of the Atlanta censoring board that will either amuse or gratify us.

There is one thing, at least, to be said in this connection: The Atlanta board permitted Kellermann in simply her hair, and gave a clear track to "The House of Bondage," an underworld picture that made no pretenses whatever. Surely allegorical nudeness isn't going to agitate our morals!

One More, Then We're Done.

From "Notes of the Trade:"

"In order to make his acting realistic in the Essanay picture, 'The Strength of the Weak,' Bryant Washburn paid a visit to an opium den, where he spent the night getting local color. The next day the result was that he portrayed the role with such exactness that a doctor, who witnessed the picture, declared that Washburn's acting was unmistakably perfect."

Question: What role did Washburn play, "A. Hangover?"

I'd do the same if the office approved my expense account when I "spent the night getting local color."

Buy Diamonds That Are Worth While

Our interests and the interests of our customers are identical. We do not mean by this merely that it is good business to render good service.

We invest heavily in diamonds, and naturally take care that they are carefully and efficiently graded, weighed and priced. This we do ourselves, as diamond specialists.

Diamonds carefully bought are an investment. They are particularly safe, marketable and appreciate in intrinsic value. They are not subject to manipulation or depreciation.

Our Diamonds are marked in plain figures; nothing is hidden. If a stone is not perfect, the shape or cutting not correct, or if it is "off color," it is so marked.

Every diamond is absolutely guaranteed to be just what we sell it for, and you are therefore fully protected, as it is graded and classed to its real intrinsic value.

We are never too busy to give you courteous attention, whether you are ready to buy or merely seek information.

Atlanta Britons Are Asked To Help Purchase a Warship

The Patriotic League of Britons Over-Seas is raising a fund among British-born subjects resident outside the empire to build and equip a warship as a free-will offering to the mother country.

Every one of British birth is anxious to do something for the empire at the present moment. Britons have hurried from the four corners of the earth to enlist in the national forces; they have subscribed generously to the funds for the Red Cross and relief of distress, but Britons abroad are anxious to give some more definite and tangible proof of the loyalty with which they are animated.

Careful inquiries have been made as to the form of offering which would be of the greatest practical use, and which at the same time would express most forcibly the loyalty of Britons who are compelled by business or other reasons to live outside the king's dominions. A large proportion, of course, are women and children, but if every Briton will subscribe to the best of his or her ability the money will soon be raised.

Send all contributions to Miss Ethel Hall, 494 Piedmont avenue, who, at the invitation of the Patriotic League of Britons Over-Seas, has been asked to help collect for the fund.

SOUTH SIDERS ANXIOUS TO GET CONVICT CAMP

Citizens From Both Sections Appear at Meeting of the County Commission.

The charge of territorial discrimination was made in the meeting of the public works committee of the county commission board yesterday morning by Captain James W. English in the campaign to bring about the removal of the Sandy Springs convict camp to the south side.

It was charged by the speaker that for years the north side had dominated the county board, and that it would take, at least, fifteen years for the present commission and succeeding commissions to "fight the wrongs that had been done."

More than 500 South and West side citizens were present at the meeting to advocate the transfer of the Sandy Springs camp. A large body of north siders was also present to protest.

Another incident of the meeting was the declaration by Captain J. M. Wright, of the United States secret service department, that he had been endeavoring for fifteen years to no avail to get needed improvements on the south side in vicinity of his property holdings.

General Clifford L. Anderson, Judge Spencer R. Atkinson and B. F. Burdette acted as spokesmen for the north side delegation. They stated that they had no objection to the transfer of the convict camp, but urged that some of the convicts be left at the disposal of the north side.

UGH! CALOMEL IS HORRIBLE! IT SHOCKS YOUR LIVER, IF BILIOUS

Look at the tongue, mother! If horrible! Take a dose of the dangerous drug tonight and tomorrow you may lose a day's work.

Calomel is mercury or quicksilver which causes necrosis of the bones. Calomel, when it comes into contact with sour bile, crashes into it, breaking it up. This is when you feel that awful nausea and cramping. If you are sluggish and "all knocked out," if your liver is torpid and bowels constipated or you have headache, dizziness, coated tongue, if breath is bad or stomach sour, just try a spoonful of harmless Dodson's Liver Tone tonight.

Here's my guarantee—Go to any drug store and get a 50-cent bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone. Take a spoonful and if it doesn't straighten you right up and make you feel fine and vigorous I want you to go back to the store and get your money. Dodson's Liver Tone is destroying the sale of calomel because it is real liver medicine, entirely vegetable, therefore it can not salivate or make you sick.

I guarantee that one spoonful of Dodson's Liver Tone will put your sluggish liver to work and clean your bowels of that sour bile and constipated waste which is clogging your system and making you feel miserable. I guarantee that a bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone will keep your entire family feeling fine for months. Give it to your children. It is harmless; doesn't gripe and they like its pleasant taste.

FOR A KISS ON HAND GIRL WANTS $50,000

Just Suppose She Had Been Kissed on Lips, How Costly It Would Be.

Miss Genevieve Lehne, a stenographer, fair and pretty, will be forced to answer this question when she prosecutes her own suit in superior court for $50,000 damages against J. D. Patterson, superintendent of the Atlanta Joint Terminals, and against his employers, the Louisville and Nashville, Atlantic Coast Line and Atlanta and West Point railways.

Miss Lehne, who lives at 180-A East Fair street, was recently employed in Mr. Patterson's office. She charges that he "unlawfully, negligently, maliciously, wantonly, wilfully, without cause and against her will, did grab and kiss her left hand, after which she did jerk it away with great force."

VETERANS TO RECEIVE THEIR PENSIONS FIRST

State Unable to Meet Other Increased Appropriations at Present.

On account of the tardiness in the payment of taxes the state finds that it is not in a position to meet all payments of appropriations passed by the last legislature at once, and the governor announced on Saturday that the payment of the confederate pensioners will receive first attention.

The governor has written a letter to John T. Brantley, of Blackshear, Ga., chairman of the board of trustees of the state sanitarium, stating that it will be impossible for me to sign warrants for the increased appropriations to the state sanitarium authorized last year and made available out of the 1915 revenues until I have finished paying the contracts pensioners. These include $26,262 for increased maintenance, $17,362 for enlargement of the laundry, and $17,905 to pay an overdraft. It is my belief that none of these sums can be paid until the corporation taxes for the current year begin to come in next September."

The trustees are cautioned not to incur any additional expenses to be met out of the foregoing appropriations. He states that collection of taxes is $500,000 behind the corresponding period of last year. He attributes this condition to the European war.

The governor has also written to President K. G. Matheson, of Georgia Tech, that the state cannot now meet the balance due of $5,000 on the extra maintenance appropriation.

PEEVISH, CONSTIPATED CHILDREN LOVE "CALIFORNIA SYRUP OF FIGS"

Harmless "Fruit Laxative" Cleanses Stomach, Liver and Bowels.

Look at the tongue, mother! If coated, it is a sure sign that your little one's stomach, liver and bowels need a gentle, thorough cleansing at once.

When peevish, cross, listless, pale, doesn't sleep, eat or act naturally, or is feverish, stomach sour, breath bad, has stomach ache, sore throat, diarrhoea, full of cold, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in just a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, undigested food and sour bile gently moves out of its little bowels and you have a well, playful child again.

You needn't coax sick children to take this harmless "fruit laxative;" they love its delicious taste and it always makes them feel splendid.

Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has directions for babies, children of all ages, and for grown-ups plainly on each bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here. Get the genuine, made by "California Fig Syrup Company." Refuse any other kind with contempt.

GO TO GROVETOWN TO APPLY MADSTONE TO POODLE BITES

Augusta, Ga., February 20.—(Special.)—Dan F. Boone and his wife were both bitten by a pet poodle, which was later declared by a veterinary to have the rabies. Whereat they took the train for Grovetown to apply a "madstone" which has reputation among a certain element. It is announced, however, that they may go to the Pasteur institute in Atlanta, presumably when the madstone fails to act.

GLOBE-TROTTER WALKS AWAY FROM HIS BRIDE

Savannah, Ga., February 20.—(Special.)—Norman Grantham, self-styled globe-trotter, who came to Savannah two weeks ago and married a pretty blond telephone operator at the Savannah hotel and next day deserted his bride, is now being sought by the police for bigamy. It has developed that he has a wife and child waiting for him in Ohio.

Today his Savannah wife, who was a widow with a child, when she met Grantham, asked the police to help her locate the long-distance walker, that she might force him to support her and her child. She gave up her position as operator when she married.

Grantham is being sought in Jacksonville.

INJUNCTION NOT GIVEN IN BANK STOCK SUIT

Macon, Ga., February 20.—(Special.) Judge Matthews in the Bibb superior court today declined to grant an injunction against the American National bank, as liquidating agent for the Commercial National bank, as defendant, as asked for by Guy Armstrong, a local business man, to restrain the bank from prosecuting a suit against him in the city court of Macon.

Armstrong claimed that he bought 200 shares of stock in the Commercial National bank, after the officers of the bank had been misrepresented to him. He still owes $2,000 on the stock and is being sued for that amount.

SAVANNAH WINS FIGHT FOR CHEAPER GAS

Savannah, Ga., February 20.—(Special.)—Savannah won today her fight for cheaper gas when the Savannah Gas company agreed to reduce the price from $1.25 to $1.10 a thousand feet March 1 and make the rate $1 in the summer of next year.

The compromise came after Mayor Lucian and committees representing the city and board of trade had threatened to go before the railroad commission and fight for 80-cent gas. The gas company recently offered to make the rate $1.15, but the offer was promptly declined.

INTEGRITY MARKS EUROPE'S POLICE

And Also Efficiency, According to Rockefeller Investigator—One Man Controls—Report Coming on American Police.

New York, February 20.—A study of police problems in European cities under the auspices of the Bureau of Social Hygiene, of which Mr. Rockefeller, Jr., is chairman, was issued here today in book form, under the title "European Police Systems." It is the third of a series issued by the bureau, the two former having dealt with prostitution in New York city and in Europe. A fourth volume, now in progress of preparation, will treat of police systems in America.

The Bureau of Social Hygiene, in announcing the publication of the present work, stated that while the bureau is concerned with the problem of commercialized vice, it was felt that intelligent suggestions concerning this problem could not be made without a thorough understanding of the European and the American police systems.

In collecting the data upon which the book is based, Raymond B. Fosdyck, former commissioner of accounts of the city of New York, visited 21 European cities and devoted nearly two years to personal inquiry into the subject. The most striking fact disclosed by his studies, from an American point of view, the bureau's announcement says, is the uniform integrity of European policemen. General corruption and favoritism, it is stated, are absolutely unknown.

Reasons for Integrity.

Summarizing the reasons for this integrity and for the efficiency of European police departments as a whole, the writer states:

"First, the police are not called upon to compel conformity to moral standards which do not meet with general public approval. They are not asked to enforce laws which, from the standpoint of accepted public belief or taste, are fundamentally unenforcable.

"Second. Control is centered where responsibility can be definitely fixed—in a single official. This official, thoroughly trained for his work and chosen with painstaking deliberation, is clothed with independent authority. Secure in his position and free from external interference, he enjoys the widest powers to deal as he will with his subordinates.

"Finally, the rank and file of the European police forces are selected and trained with the greatest care and attention shown in the case of their superior officers. Indeed, it is largely the character of the personnel is the essential constant factor of efficiency on this and on no other basis is it possible to secure an effective organization."

British and Continental Police.

Contrasting the British and the continental police, the writer says:

"In England the police are civil employes whose primary duty is the preservation of public peace, but the continents, and particularly in Germany and Austria, the police force is the right arm of the ruling classes, responsible to the crown or the higher authorities rather than to the people."

The English constables, he says, are chosen from private life, whereas the continental police must first serve in the army. Where the police force is recruited from former army men, the writer says, "a certain degree of indifference to the general public tends to develop."

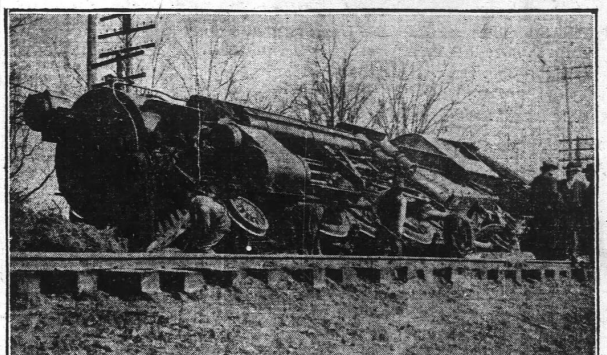
Georgia Road's Giant Locomotive Topples Over in Wreck at Decatur



This is one of the three new engines, the largest in the southern states, just purchased by the Georgia railroad, which met disaster at Decatur yesterday on practically her maiden trip. It is stated by Georgia railroad officials, however, that the new giant is not seriously damaged by the shake-up and will soon be in commission again. The engines cost $24,000 each. They will pull over eighty freight cars, the one which was wrecked pulling seventy-one at the time of the accident.

Decatur, Ga., February 20.—(Special.) Wreck of a through freight on the Georgia railroad, opposite Agnes Scott college in Decatur, which occurred this morning about 2 o'clock, completely isolated Eastern Decatur from the outside world during the day, and it was only by transferring that passengers could continue on their way by rail.

An engine and eleven freight cars were derailed, several of the cars being completely demolished. Th big locomotive, after leaving the rails, ran over the ties for about fifty feet and then turned over on its side, plowing its nose into the embankment. Engineer C. A. Redmond, of 573 Edgewood avenue, and his fireman escaped with only a few bruises.

Switches Didn't Work.

The wreck was caused by an automatic switch connecting the double track between Atlanta and Decatur failing to work.

The train consisted of seventy-one cars, bound from Augusta to Atlanta, and was being pulled by the largest locomotive ever put in service in Georgia. It is one of the Mikado type, built by the Lima Locomotive Works, of Lima, Ohio. It is 77 feet long, 15 feet 9 inches high, weighting 162 tons without coal or water. Its cylinders are 27x30. It carries 9,000 gallons of water and 20 tons of coal and will pull 2,750 tons. It is one of three big locomotives bought by the Georgia railroad, and has made only a few trips on the road.

Wickersham on Job.

Charles A. Wickersham, general manager of the Georgia railroad, arrived on a passenger train early in the morning. He organized a crew and began the work of clearing up the wreckage. A track was built around the wrecked train, the main line connected and through traffic was resumed early in the afternoon. Owing to the wreckage covering the electric car line near the depot and the wires being down cars did not begin running around the loop until late in the afternoon. The wrecking crews of the Georgia, Seaboard and N. C. & St. L. railways worked throughout the day and early tonight have succeeded in clearing away the wrecked cars. They will begin work on raising the locomotive tonight.

Through traffic has been resumed, but it will be several days before all the wreckage is cleared away.

PROMINENT AMERICANS ACCUSED BY CARRANZA

Charges Plot Against Lower California—Other Arrests to Follow That of Chandler.

Los Angeles, Cal., February 20.—The indictment of Harry Chandler, millionaire son-in-law of General Harrison Gray Otis, owner of The Los Angeles Times, on the charge of having encouraged a revolutionary movement against lower California, brought statements today from agents of Venustiano Carranza, the constitutionalist leader in Mexico, that prominent men in various parts of the United States probably would be arrested soon on similar charges.

The indictment of Mr. Chandler, Walter Bonner, manager of a great ranch on the California-Mexican border, and five other persons by a federal grand jury here is only the beginning of the results of an investigation by the United States government, it was asserted by department of justice agents.

The grand jury here, it was stated, will continue its investigation of an alleged plot to set up a new government in lower California, on the information granted by six government agents who have been here several weeks. This information was first pointed out by agents of General Carranza, whose representative here, Roberto V. Pesqueira, said it was conclusive in showing that the alleged conspiracy was nation-wide and had for its object not only the overthrow of present authorities in lower California, but the overthrow of Carranza throughout Mexico and setting up some other Mexican leader more amenable to the wishes of Americans who are heavily interested in the southern republic.

NEW TRIAL IS SOUGHT FOR CHARLES BECKER

New York, February 20.—Counsel for Charles Becker, now in the death house at Sing Sing for the murder of Herman Rosenthal, served notice today upon District Attorney Perkins that he will move in the supreme court on February 26 for a new trial for Becker. The affidavit in Philadelphia by James Marsden, repudiating testimony given by him at Becker's second trial, counsel said, is to be basis for the motion. Attached to the formal papers of notification were affidavits, the contents of which neither Mr. Perkins or Becker's lawyers would make public.

FIRST COUNTERFEIT OF U. S. RESERVE NOTE

Washington, February 20.—The first counterfeit Federal reserve note has made its appearance. It is a $5 note of the Dallas federal reserve bank, printed from poorly executed etched plates, the secret service says, on two pieces of paper with silk threads between. The note is a quarter of an inch shorter than the genuine—and Chief Flynn says is such a poor piece of work it should be detected readily.

DEPUTIES AND STRIKERS IN A PITCHED BATTLE

Fairmont, W. Va., February 20.—In a fight between deputy sheriffs, led by Sheriff C. B. Conaway, of Marion county, and striking miners at Farmington late today, one man was probably fatally hurt, four were seriously wounded and many suffered cuts and bruises.

The trouble started when the miners attempted to release two miners who had been arrested on felony charges. The miners drove the sheriff's party into a store, but fled to the hills when twenty-five special deputies reached Farmington from Fairmont. Constable W. R. Riggs, of the sheriff's party, is in a critical condition. The seriously injured are Sheriff Conaway, two deputies and a miner.

One thousand miners employed in three mines of the Jamieo Coal company walked out yesterday because they alleged the company had put into force a new wage scale which reduced their pay. Company officials say the men quit when the company began to charge them for powder used in mining. The district is unorganized and it is reported the miners have sent for organizers of the United Mine Workers of America.

At one time watches were called Nuremburg eggs, because they were oval in shape and made in that town.

Jack and Bob Say:

The Big Ones

Said Jack to Bob yesterday: "Strange, isn't it, how among the fifty-odd measurements we've taken in the past two weeks, about forty of them have been for men of 44 chest. Looks like we have a corner on the big man tailoring market, but I'd like to see some of the slim ones come in; it's our only chance to break even on the quality of service we are giving in this one-price tailored-to-measure idea at $35."

And as he spoke another 225-pounder came in the door.

QUEEN OF SHOPLIFTERS GIVEN TO BAY STATE

Jefferson, City, Mo., February 20.—Governor Major tonight honored the requisition of the governor of Massachusetts for the return of Mrs. Lulu West, said to be known by police throughout the United States and Canada as "queen of pickpockets and shoplifters."

Mrs. West was identified by John H. Boyle, chief of detectives of Springfield, Mass., and by Bertillon experts from that city and St. Louis.

SAGE TEA DARKENS HAIR TO ANY SHADE

Don't Stay Gray! Here's a Simple Recipe That Anybody Can Apply With a Hair Brush.

The use of Sage and Sulphur for restoring faded, gray hair to its natural color dates back to grandmother's time. She used it to keep her hair beautifully dark, glossy and abundant. Whenever her hair fell out or took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect.

But brewing at home is mussy and out-of-date. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for a 50 cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get this famous old recipe which can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair and is splendid for dandruff, dry, feverish, itchy scalp and falling hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, it becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and abundant.

The United States government has a representative of the federal children's bureau at the San Francisco exposition and requests the co-operation of all federated women's organizations in promoting public health, in securing accurate birth and death registration, in urging better legislation affecting the health and education of children, in conserving child life, etc.

With the co-operation of our state chairman of child legislation, Colonel R. C. Alston, Atlanta; chairman of vital statistics, Mrs. A. P. Port, Atlanta, and chairman of public health, Hon. R. C. Ellis, Tifton, and the secretary of state, secretary commission provided for in the Ellis bill, the Georgia branch of the National Congress of Mothers and Parent-Teachers' association should be able to render a substantial service to the children's bureau.

Miss Julia Lathrop, chief of children's bureau, department of labor, Washington, D. C., is ready to furnish upon application all literature and literature in child welfare work.

A letter from Mrs. Frederick Schoff congratulates the Georgia Congress of Mothers and Parent-Teachers association on the splendid work done in the state.

Miss Ellen C. Lombard, secretary of the home education division, bureau of education, will speak at the annual meeting in Macon. Miss Lombard is also chairman of the department of loan papers on child welfare in the national congress and a member of the national board.

Eighth District.

The Elberton Parent-Teacher association observed Founders' day, February 17, with a splendid program. In the auditorium of the high school about a hundred ladies, with the superintendent, principal and the teachers were gathered. Professor M. L. Britt, state superintendent of schools, gave a highly interesting address; lasting nearly an hour, delighting his audience with practical plans for the betterment of school conditions. Another splendid address was that given by Mrs. W. H. Wiggs, state chairman of home education, finance and extension. Mrs. B. L. Thornton, local president, announced that she would at once appoint delegates to the annual convention. Delicious refreshments, prepared and served by the young ladies of the domestic science class, were enjoyed.

Tenth District.

John Milledge School association at Augusta now has a membership roll of 93 wide awake workers. They recently won a prize of $50 offered by local business interests. This association is doing some splendid work along practical lines and should be a great help to the school. Mrs. W. E. Vaughan will represent the club at the annual convention in Macon.

Woodlawn School Parent-Teacher association has affiliated with the Georgia Congress of Mothers, and will be represented by delegates at the meeting in Macon.

Canton Parent-Teacher association has sent for forty-eight new membership cards, indicating that this club is an active one.

Fourth District.

The fourth has two new Parent-Teacher clubs. One of them is organized at Gentian, the other at Fortson. Both are doing excellent work.

Eleventh District.

This district has done splendid work all the year. They observed Founders' day with an excellent program and took collection for state work, appointed delegates for the annual meeting at Macon. The officers of the organization at Brunswick have organized a colored Parent-Teacher association. This is a good beginning, and it is to be hoped that more work of this kind can be effected.

Mrs. Alexander Thesmar, vice president of the first district at Savannah, writes that at the last meeting of the board of education consent was given by the body for the formation of Parent-Teacher associations in the public schools of Savannah. She will form the first club in the Chatham high school within a few days. This is, indeed, pleasing news, for for seven years the board has opposed the formation of clubs in the school. Mrs. Thesmar is receiving hearty congratulations for her success. She has made a splendid beginning, and is thoroughly enthusiastic, having already expressed a desire that the Georgia Congress of Mothers meet in Savannah.

WAR PREVENTS TOURS OF THE KAHN FELLOWS

New York, February 20.—Trustees of the Kahn Foundation for the Foreign Travel of American Teachers announced today that because of the difficulties of touring abroad and the consequent impossibility of attaining the ends of the foundation, no fellows will be appointed for 1915-16. Experiences of the present appointees, who have been unable to carry out their itineraries have led to the decision.

The fellows for 1914-15 are Professor Lindsey Blayney, William Rice Institute, Houston, Texas, and Professor Benjamin Siedd, of Wake Forest college, Wake Forest, N. C. Professor and Mrs. Blayney were in Germany at the beginning of the war. The professor started for Egypt, India and Japan, and was in India when last heard from on December 25.

Professor Siedd was in England when the war began, and has visited Geneva and Rome. Both travelers have suffered great delay.

PREVENTION VS. CURE

The main reason why corporations that have large lists of stockholders and float their paper on the open market have yearly audits by Certified Public Accountants is—

That the management and stockholders want to know definitely, not only what the business has produced, but that the statement is correct.

When a man examines the account's services are first in demand.

The Master Key

By John Fleming Wilson

A Thrilling Story of Mystery and Romance

By special arrangement for this paper, a photo-drama, corresponding to the installments of "The Master Key," may be seen at the Savoy and Alpha theaters tomorrow. By arrangement made with the Universal Film company, it is not only possible to read "The Master Key" each week, but also afterward to see moving pictures illustrating our story.

TWELFTH INSTALLMENT

SYNOPSIS—Doors open upon strange things. How many locked doors are there in this world? How many people are there trying to find "The Master Key?" Thomas Gallon found gold. He thought of two things: his daughter Ruth, and gold for her. Gallon died because his partner, Wilkerson, backed and demanded a share of his find. Wilkerson is seeking gold for the sake of a woman, John Dorr, the mining engineer in whose charge Ruth was left, is also fighting to find the secret which Thomas Gallon apparently took with him to his grave.

In his search for the Hindu who had bought the idol containing the plans of the mother lode of the Master Key mine John Dorr had recourse again to the pawnbroker.

That individual's curiosity was aroused by now and he asked a great many questions which John answered evasively. When it came to getting a description of the Hindu the broker could give but few details. He laid emphasis on the fact that he sold rugs and that he looked like any one of a dozen East Indians frequenting a Pacific port. He knew of no address.

With this Dorr had to be content, and he returned to Ruth to discuss with her what they should do next.

"If Wilkerson gets it, there is an easy way to get him," he said in the course of their conversation.

"How?" demanded Ruth.

"Have him arrested as a fugitive from justice and held for the county sheriff on the warrant that Tom Kane swore out," he replied.

Ruth considered this thoughtfully and shook her head.

"It would mean our going back to the mine and all kinds of trouble," she said wisely. "Besides, we wouldn't be any nearer the papers father wanted me to have."

"That is very true," John agreed. "We'll keep that in reserve in case we discover that he has the idol. Our only plan, then, is to trace this Hindu. That will be a hard job."

"Why not put detectives on the trail?"

"I don't think any detective could do better than myself," was the reply.

"But you can't do it all," she argued. "You can't be looking for this peddler and keeping an eye on Wilkerson and seeing to me at the same time."

"The seeing to you is the pleasantest part of the job," he said, laughingly. "I refuse to delegate that to anyone. Of course, you're quite right, though, about its being too big an affair for me to handle alone. I think I'll ask Everett to join us. Maybe he can suggest something. I'll wire him and then we'll take a trip down to the waterfront and interview our launchman again. He seems to me a pretty level-headed chap, and he'll maybe be able to put us on the track of the Hindu if he took a steamer for the North, as I strongly suspect he did."

Ruth could not understand why the peddler should do this, and Dorr explained that the Hindu evidently had set great store on the idol, as he had not only paid cash but had given a rug as well in exchange.

"He would know that the thing was worthless as an article of merchandise," he went on. "In the next place he wasted no time in getting possession of it once he saw it. I have no doubt that it is sacred in his eyes, a god. It was stolen at some time from a temple. What more natural than that he should see the chance of a great reward for doing a pious duty and returning it to its native place?"

"But that's all guesswork," Ruth insisted practically.

"I know it," he admitted. "But a good guess is better than nothing to work on. Let's go and see our skipper person."

The launch captain received them genially and listened to John's story. At its finish he agreed with John that it was very likely that the Indian had recognized a native god and would restore it to its own temple.

"I've visited those eastern ports a good deal," he told them. "I know boys on a lark from the ship will do just that trick—run off with an idol for a curio, and I know the fuss the heathen make about it, too. They'll go any lengths to get back a first-chop god."

Before they left he promised to keep an eye open for the Hindu and inform them if he got the smallest clue. With this they had to be satisfied, as inquiries elsewhere developed nothing helpful.

Everett arrived on the evening train and after dinner listened to the story of their adventures with great interest. When he had asked a few questions he and John looked at each other. Finally Everett spoke.

"It might take years to locate that lode without the exact plans," he said thoughtfully. "I don't doubt that your father, Miss Ruth, spent many a long hour and day prospecting for it. So we must have the plans, if it's in the bounds of possibility to recover them. I think you will have to find your Hindu."

"There is the question of the mine," John said soberly. "It has already been allowed to go pretty much to ruin. Tom Kane would do his best, of course, but actually we are looking for the bird in the bush when we have one in the hand."

"I see your point," the promoter said promptly. "My offer of days ago still holds good. I'll finance this matter to the end and I'll look after the mine, too. So you can be carefree so far as that goes, John."

"You know I wouldn't take it for myself," John began awkwardly, and was silenced by a smile.

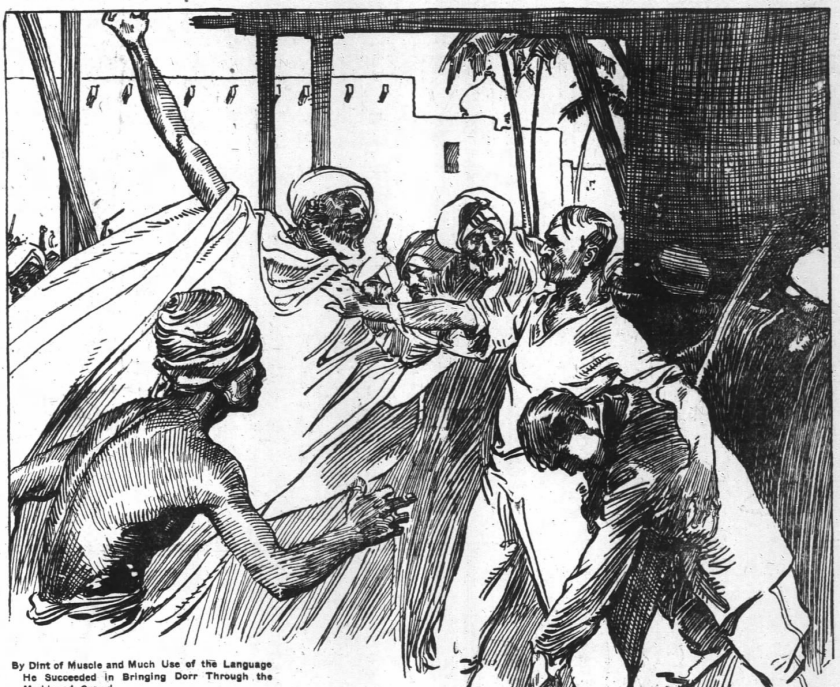
The next morning they had barely finished breakfast when the launch captain was announced.

The three of them found him bursting with news.

"I think I located your Hindu," he told them. "He came down at daylight this morning looking for a steamer sailing for the North. The Halcyon leaves at noon and the steward gave him a job in the galley."

"But it might be another, Hindu!" Ruth suggested.

The captain turned toward her and shook his head. "I don't think it possible," he said. "He answered the description, clear down to the rugs. Besides that, he seemed kind of nervous and when one of the sailors jollied him the man nearly had a fit. I'm sure he's your man."



By Dint of Muscle and Much Use of the Language He Succeeded in Bringing Dorr Through the Maddened Crowd.

"There's only one thing for you to do," Everett said promptly. "Take passage on that steamer yourselves to San Francisco. By that time you can be pretty sure whether he's your man or not."

This was agreed upon and Ruth started on her preparations immediately. Everett insisting that she take her maid with her.

"But I don't need her!" Ruth protested. "She's so expensive, too!"

"You are merely a youngster," Everett said quietly, "and you must have a woman traveling with you. It is all right to do as you like out in the mines, where no one would dream of speaking evil or thinking it, but Mrs. Grundy insists on the maid."

John agreed with Everett and departed to get the tickets in spite of Everett's warning that he had better send and get them. The result was that George Drake, just landed from the mine and in search of Wilkerson, found him shadowing Dorr. Drake explained his coming by saying that he had heard nothing from either Wilkerson or Mrs. Darnell, and he could be of no use at the Master Key.

"It's just as well," Wilkerson said sulkily. "I have a dozen things to attend to, and you can help. The first is not to let that man Dorr get out of our sight or turn a hand unless we know it."

In a few sentences filled with bitterness he told the story of the finding of the chest and the futile search for the plans and the abstraction of the idol containing them.

When Wilkerson found that Dorr and Ruth had booked passage on the Halcyon for San Francisco, and had inquired about the next sailing for the Orient, he took Drake aside and they determined that this could only mean one thing! Dorr was on the track of the idol.

"We'll follow them!" he said savagely. "We've spent too much to quit now."

Jean Darnell received Drake coolly and listened to Wilkerson's explanation of his new scheme without a word. Her steely eyes boded no good to someone, and Wilkerson feared she would abandon him. But there was the tenacity of a tigress in her passions, and now she could not give up her sweet revenge nor forego the thought of possessing the wealth that had once been Tom Gallon's, and which he had tried to conceal. She agreed to go and they decided to leave by train that evening, this being in San Francisco in time to meet the steamer and watch for Dorr's next movement.

Two days later Everett again met John and Ruth in the hotel in San Francisco. John's news was that the Hindu they sought had undoubtedly been on the Halcyon and that he had bought a steerage passage for Bombay.

"You ought to get the plans before you get to India," Everett said earnestly. "You'll find yourself in a strange land where it will be like looking for a needle in a haystack to get hold of your man."

Dorr acknowledged this, and outlined his tentative plan of getting hold of the idol during the passage.

"After all, we don't want the idol. I shall try to persuade the man of this, and get him to let me have the papers concealed in it."

At this moment Sir Donald Faversham was announced.

The entrance of the Englishman who had made himself so attentive to Ruth at the Southern hotel awakened little enthusiasm in either Dorr or Everett, but for Ruth's sake they played the civil part. She, on the other hand, received Sir Donald with every evidence of lively pleasure.

"We are this minute talking of going over to India where you lived so long!" she told him, after the first greetings. "And you are just the man to tell us all about it."

"Going to India!" ejaculated the baronet. "My word!"

"Yes," she proceeded, "we are after a Hindu and his idol!"

At this point John laughingly came to the rescue and briefly explained the object of their quest. Sir Donald listened quietly, occasionally glancing at Ruth, whose beauty was enhanced by pretty excitement. At the conclusion of the tale he nursed the end of his stick awhile in very apparent perplexity.

"That is just where you can help us!" said Ruth impulsively.

For the instant Sir Donald actually blushed with embarrassment.

Then he gathered himself together and went into details of what they must expect and the difficulties they must encounter.

"If you could only go along!" Ruth said plaintively, when he had got them thoroughly discouraged. "You could talk their horrid language and make them behave."

"By Jove!" said the baronet, smiling, "that's not a half bad idea! I have nothing to do and I might as well see the chaps in India again as stay here."

"You know Sir Donald was in the army there," Ruth explained to Everett.

"Brought up there," Faversham added. "Know India pretty well. I really believe I'll go with you, if you'll accept my company. What a lark!"

Neither John nor Everett received this proposal with undue warmth, but Ruth found it delightful, and before any of them realized the seriousness of the conversation everything had been arranged.

Outside Faversham spoke to Dorr as man to man.

"I don't want to thrust myself on you in any way," he said briefly. "I happen to know India, and to be sure that I can be of service to you. In fact, I should think it a jolly trip. But if you think I take advantage of the little lady's courtesy, say so."

Entirely disarmed, John Dorr had to confess that Sir Donald's offer relieved him of a responsibility too heavy for him. The two parted the best of friends, though John could not refrain from an expression of jealousy to himself. But he knew that Ruth's interests were now doubly safeguarded, and he tried to restrain his unruly heart.

As the steamer sailed the next day they had little time for their preparations, but John made sure that the Hindu was on board before the last line was cast off and the big liner backed into the stream and headed slowly round for the channel to the open sea.

During the long voyage to Hongkong the three were thrown much together, and Sir Donald learned in full the history of the Master Key mine and the present search for the plans of the site of the mother lode. At first he could hardly believe that such things could happen, but slowly he came to understand that the tremendous passions that were fighting to be satisfied would stop at nothing.

"I fear you will find it difficult in India," he told John many times. "The country is immense, it is inhabited by races of different speech and habits and religions, and yet over it all there is the vague spell of the East which is so foreign to your western America that I fear you will not easily recover what you seek."

"But I must get the papers back!" said John quietly. "There is no question about it."

"Many a man has refused to acknowledge that a thing is impossible," Faversham warned him, "and the East has driven him mad. However, I am much interested myself, not only for the sake of Miss Ruth, but from a sporting standpoint, and I promise you I'll do my best to help you."

They considered the suggested plan of taking the idol away from the Hindu during the voyage, but Faversham vetoed this, after a somewhat extensive investigation.

"You see," he told Ruth, "I know the fellow's language, and he comes from a tribe far in the north of India. Most of those chaps are looked upon as rather sacred, and this man in special, I see, is much respected by the other natives in the steerage. To desecrate his image would simply mean an uproar that we could never explain to the satisfaction of the captain and his officers. In fact, we should all get into the most serious trouble."

"Then your advice is to wait?" she murmured.

"Most decidedly," said the baronet. "And the waiting isn't so bad, is it?"

The steamer was slipping easily along across a moonlit sea that night, and Ruth and Sir Donald were far in the bows, watching the waves foam softly away from the cutwater. The girl had awakened during the last few weeks to the dim happiness of being always the center of men's thoughts. She was not in love, but she was ready to be. The experienced man beside her surmised this. His own heart was beating a new tune. He had lived much, and women had not been aloof from his life. But this fair, proud, inexperienced, yet self-contained girl wakened in him a deeper feeling than he cared to confess.

To be sure, he had John Dorr to contend with. Faversham did not underestimate him as a possible rival, when he allowed himself to go so far as contemplating marriage with Ruth. He liked the young American, and none knew better than he the effect that constant association must have upon a young and very impressionable girl. John's own sentiments were unmistakable; he was deeply in love.

From Hongkong they transshipped to a P. & O. steamer for Bombay and under Sir Donald's expert guidance they shortly found themselves in India and installed in a very good hotel.

"Why not simply trace him?" demanded Dorr, impatient to be about his errand.

"That would be out of the question," Faversham explained. "In the first place, you don't understand any native tongue and in the second place the British government doesn't look with favor on strange and unattached Europeans stumbling about among the natives. If you will leave it to me, I think I can not only ascertain the exact place where this fellow comes from, but the temple where the idol belongs."

Several days passed, during which Sir Donald was busy among old acquaintances, leaving John and Ruth to their own devices. They occupied their time in sightseeing. At last Faversham came in to dinner one evening with a smile on his face.

"I've found your man, and learned something of the history of the image," he said.

"But that is what we came for!" she went on.

"The fact of the matter is," said the baronet. "That image was stolen several years ago, a great many, in truth. It is the tutelary deity of a small city on the river Bhala, and it is about as sacred an article as you could pick up. The people of that city think that since they have lost their image the god is angry with them, and for some years they have quietly conducted a search for it."

"And this man will take it to Bhala?" demanded Ruth.

"He has already started, I understand from some of the natives I know."

"Then what are we to do?" demanded John.

"Bhala is some hundreds of miles up country," Sir Donald continued. "Part of the way we can go by rail, but part of the road we must travel either on foot or by litter—if we go."

"Of course we are going," said Ruth.

"I most earnestly beg you to stop here," said the baronet. "You don't know your India as I do, and even if we accomplish our purpose we should run double risk in getting back."

They argued the matter for some time, but Ruth refused to consider retreat at this stage, and John, impressed though he was by the other's evident sincerity, could not help feeling that as an outsider he did not understand the necessity of the recovery of the plans.

When he and Sir Donald talked it over alone the baronet was even more insistent. He characterized the whole expedition as rash and plainly stated that should the British government get wind of such a search immediate steps would be taken to see that the Americans went no farther.

Dorr was unconvinced, and finally intimated that Faversham had not meant what he said when he volunteered to help them.

"At least I can go along and do what I can to save the young woman from actual peril," he remarked. "I by no means promise to give you active assistance.

They made the journey to Bhala safely, Ruth and John viewing the novel sights that met their eyes on every hand, Sir Donald acting as general guide and instructor. On their arrival at the teeming city they were soon installed in an inn outside the center and some way up the river. Faversham wasted no time in looking up certain people he knew among the natives, and was in a position to inform them that he had not only discovered the temple, but that he had learned that the idol had been recovered and would be restored to its proper shrine with due ceremony and great festivity.

"That will be just our chance," said John. "In the crowds we ought to be safe."

Faversham tried to convince him that this was not so, but Dorr insisted so strongly that the Englishman yielded against his better judgment.

"I'll try to get you within sight of the idol, anyway," he consented. "But I must insist that you obey my instructions implicitly. Otherwise we shall all get into trouble and you will effectually kill any chance you may have of attaining your purpose."

The result of this was that Ruth late that night was awakened by Sir Donald's rapping at her door. When she had flung on some clothes and opened the door she saw from his manner and his dishevelled dress that all had not gone well.

"It's true," Faversham told her. "Dorr couldn't resist what he thought was a chance to get hold of the idol. He was captured, but I managed to get away by my knowledge of the language and the help of some natives who are friendly to me."

For the moment Ruth was speechless. Then she inquired for the particulars, and Sir Donald gave them briefly. At the conclusion he remarked, "They won't harm him, but if it gets out that he really intended to steal that image, we shall have trouble."

"But he is a prisoner!" she cried.

"True," said Faversham wearily. "I didn't dare stay. If they had got me, too, you wouldn't have known anything about what had happened for days possibly."

"But you will save him?" she pleaded.

In her appealing beauty Ruth stirred Sir Donald to the depths. He knew that he loved her. For love of her he would do what he knew might mean his own death, but he was helpless in the grip of this sweet passion. Yet he would not go without at least a word of hope and promise.

"I'll get him," he told her. "It will be a hard job, but I'll save him. For your sake, Ruth! and when I come back with him—"

She leaned forward gloriously content that John was to be brought back to her. She did not read aright the expression in the man's eyes. She threw out her little hands to him joyously.

"I'll always love you if you will!" she whispered.

He stared dizzily and she withdrew before he could put out his hands or say a word. Five minutes later he was hastily making his way back towards the temple.

To his dying day Sir Donald was never able to explain just how he found John Dorr nor how he extricated him from the howling mob who yelled for the life of the impious man who had laid foul hands on their sacred god. His own recollection was of desperately using his tongue, his muscles and his knowledge of the usual intricacies of a native city. John himself could give no clear description, but confessed that he had given up hope of rescue when Sir Donald had appeared as by magic.

It was dawn when they reached the hotel, and Ruth was on the balcony watching. When Faversham looked up and called out, "I managed it!" she leaned far over, her eyes shining, and threw him a kiss.

The fact that Dorr and Ruth had sailed for India did not escape Wilkerson's and Mrs. Darnell's sharp senses, and they sailed with Drake as their companion on the next steamer.

He found this true. Within two days he had also ascertained that they had left for the interior under the escort of Sir Donald Faversham.

Without delay they followed, and in due time landed in Bhala, not long after Sir Donald had rescued Dorr from the mob who had seized him when he had tried to recapture the idol. Wilkerson grinned when he told Mrs. Darnell of this fiasco.

"But will you fare any better?" she demanded.

"Sure," he said confidently. "I'll let Dorr and this British baronet burn their fingers getting the thing. Then I'll get it away from them. It's a long way back to America, and if we stick tight to Dorr we'll sooner or later be able to handle the plans ourselves.

"Then the Master Key will be ours for good and all."

Use Business Sense in Housekeeping

By DOROTHY DOLAN.

MUCH is said these days regarding efficient and inefficient work. An efficient worker is one who produces a high grade of work, reducing the method of work so there is little waste of time and energy. This same standard should exist for the home-maker and housekeeper, as well as for the man or woman in business.

All credit is due to the public-spirited woman who works for neighborhood welfare and civic improvement, but the place to begin this work is in your own home and neighborhood.

I certainly agree with the women who say, "Women are responsible for more than the health and morals of their own children. If the neighborhood is unclean and the alleys all littered up, however clean our own homes are, we are failing in our duty."

The right way to make a city beautiful is to keep all parts of that city up to the alley as clean as you can. Be glad for the assistance your city authorities give you and supplement this work by your own efforts. Have three galvanized garbage pails close to the barn or alley fence. Keep one for garbage, another for ashes and a third for papers.

See that all this garbage is removed once a day at least. Be equally particular in handling the garbage in the kitchen. No liquids should be placed in the garbage pail; all liquid waste should be poured through the zinc strainer.

If you are an efficient housekeeper you will be equally particular about your dealer selling impure milk to you and to your neighbors. Insist on having the milk brought to you every day in bottles instead of tin cans. If you are in doubt about the purity of the milk have it analyzed by the milk commission of your city. Typhoid and other deadly germs are readily carried through impure milk. Be careful not to contaminate pure milk by reckless handling after it reaches your own kitchen.

It is your business to investigate the sanitary conditions of your butcher shop and grocery to see that the food is kept clean and free from contagion. When you find the food unprotected give your dealers a word of warning and if they do not mend their ways go elsewhere. If they are particular in regard to these sanitary conditions let them know by some simple remark you appreciate it and that you will inform your neighbors.

You should protect your children by visiting their school from time to time to see that hygienic conditions are good and that the children are not threatened by contagious diseases. If your children have anything contagious be careful that they are segregated, not to endanger the children of your neighborhood.

This is your duty as a home-maker, as well as planning the daily menus and trying new dishes. Home life begins in the kitchen, but its duties and influence permeate many walks of life.

Suggestion—It is well to have the sink lighted by one or two big windows. It should be provided with a broad shelf; this is of great service to the housekeeper and keeps out dirt and insects. The drain can extend clear across the table and form part of the counter shelf at the side. There should be a cupboard over the end of the sink to contain the cleaning preparations. At the right of the sink there can be a cupboard for all the dishes used at the breakfast table.

If the kitchen is small and you have not space for many brushes have them stored in the bottom of a bucket. As you move from point to point it contains the whole paraphernalia. The bucket has a double bottom, the second one about four inches above the lower one, with a small opening between large enough to introduce the scrub brushes, rags and soaps.

Question—If you can be of any assistance to me your prompt attention will be greatly appreciated. It is necessary for me to know how milk should be prepared for a 6-month-old baby also a year-old baby. B. G.

Beloit, Wis.

I should recommend that you give both the children clean, pure milk. If you think your six-month baby is not as strong as he should be for his age you can treat the milk as follows: Put one tablespoonful of milk sugar and two of lime water in every twenty ounces of milk. You should now begin to give your baby a little orange juice or scraped apple.

Give the year-old child any good, clean milk. If you are not sure of this put in two tablespoonfuls of lime water with every twenty ounces of milk.

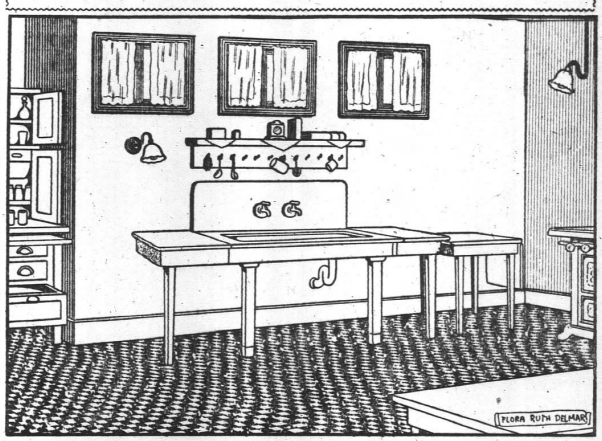
To Iron Linens—We all like our table linen to have just the right body and polish to it, but it is oftentimes hard to get them starched just right. Try ironing the linen with a hot iron before it dries, instead of using any starch at all. First, iron on the wrong side to bring out the pattern, then on the right, to polish. Be sure the linen is dry when you finish.

ASSOCIATION of ideas leads American housewives to agree that the homeliest, ugliest word in our language is the word sink. Yet here is a kitchen made attractive by its ultra-modern sink. Plenty of natural and artificial light, scientific planning and use of materials, selected for their utilitarian values, bring about this happy situation.



Home Decoration and Furnishing

By MADAME MAISON.

IN DAYS gone by a big kitchen was considered quite the proper thing and very little if any attention was paid to making this most necessary room in the house comfortable and attractive. When I think what miles of space was covered in needless steps taken from pantry to sink, from table to stove and from stove to icebox, how the sinks were at a back breaking height and no attention paid to proper lighting, either by night or by day, I wonder more housekeepers did not give up the ghost long before they did.

The other day I heard a young matron say regarding the new house they were building: "We began with the kitchen and shall furnish it first and do the rest afterward." Here is the way she has planned it. The sink of ample size with wooden drain boards on either side is to be placed under a row of three casement windows facing the west; drop leaf tables adjoin the drain boards so there is ample space for extra dishes. A side electric light is on the wall over the sink to be turned on when needed, then there is a hanging ceiling light over the stove and a side light on the wall over the table. A steel kitchen cabinet fits in a space on the west wall, there are two windows to the north; the floor is covered with blue and white inlaid linoleum, or will be; the side walls a deep cream and the ceiling a shade lighter and all the enamel. Wash paint will be on the walls. Twelve by fifteen feet is the space allotted for this room; there is a small butler pantry off with a small sink under a window just for washing the silver and glassware. A coarse quality of scrim makes excellent curtains for kitchen windows, as it stands frequent washing; it is well to make two or three pair at a time. Over the sink, which for the average woman should be placed thirty inches from the floor, there should be hooks for hanging spoons, strainers, measuring-cups, egg beater, pancake turner, etc.; also a shelf for the clock and for cook books. In most kitchens there is room for a built-in cupboard for dishes and underneath there are shelves for pots, pans, etc. When furnishing all the receptacles for spices, tea and coffee may be purchased of one color, like-wise mixing bowls, so there will be a harmonious color scheme. A high stool and a couple of chairs are a necessary part of the equipment. Zinc covered tables or glass covered ones are a boon greatly to be appreciated, but if too expensive white oilcloth must be the substitute, using the pieces left over for covering the cook books. This same young housekeeper told me she was using the elimination process in furnishing her house, and said it was astonishing how much one could do without. Elimination and concentration are the two words one hears most frequently these days, and I assure you they both apply to interior decorating and furnishing.

A Southwest Living-Room.

I HAVE a problem which I bring to you to help me solve. In the house which we must occupy for some years to come the living-room is on the southwest and the adjoining room is a bedroom. It has just one door, but it is often open, and I wish a color scheme for it as well as the living-room that will be in harmony. I have some green rugs, also green silk Madras draperies, that I must use, as they are still quite good. The woodwork is light oak and will have to remain so, as the landlord will not have it changed; the walls are to be repapered in both bedroom and living-room. J. H. M.

Probably a tanniah gray oatmeal paper will be best for the walls, with a creamy white ceiling. The green rugs will go well, also the draperies. For the bedroom use a pink and gray striped or figured paper, cream ceiling, rose rugs or gray and rose. This contrast will be a pleasing one when seen through the open door. Plain white curtains may be used in the bedroom with rose drapery.

Novelties in Home Entertainments

By DAME CURTSEY.

AT A church social when every one had arrived, three little girls appeared on the platform with placards. The first said; "My first, I hope you are"; the second, "My second, I see you are," and the third placard read, "My whole, I know you are." The answer is "Well-come," and the one who first guessed the charade and spoke the answer while the girlies stood on the stage received a prize. This promoted immediate conversation and the ice was broken. More charades worked out by committees could follow, and the evening be called "a charade social."

A Doll Carnival.

QUITE the prettiest affair of the season is to be a "doll carnival" given for the benefit of a children's charity. It is being given by children, of course superintended by older people, but the girls and boys, too, regard it as their special entertainment. There is to be a sale of dolls, dollhouse furniture, clothes, and a complete dollhouse is to go to the child whose turnout receives the most votes in the parade which is to be a feature of the evening. Only children under 10 years of age will participate in this, and each doll is to be in a doll buggy trimmed with flowers or in any manner that suits the owner.

The judges are youthful also: 14 is the age. The interest in the affair is widespread; fathers are arranging to be present, school-teachers have caught the fever; in fact, the "doll festival" is in the air, and someone remarked that the way to success lay in interesting the children. One especially interesting booth is to be entirely in charge of boys. They will display all sorts of homemade toys, orders will be taken for dollhouse furniture from samples, pictures framed, etc. And there is to be a clown doll in a wheelbarrow in the parade. Popcorn, salted peanuts, homemade candy and "light" refreshments will be on sale. Canned fruits, jelly and other delicacies for sick children will be received, also contributions of pictures and cards suitable for making into scrapbooks.

Entertaining and Serving.

MOTHER wishes to entertain about half a dozen friends some afternoon. She would ask them to bring their sewing, and could you suggest something different from a contest? What refreshments could she serve? Should they sit down to the table? Please answer in Sunday's paper.

ELDEST DAUGHTER.

As long as it is needle work affair, why not get mother to furnish some cheesecloth, the same sized piece for each guest, and offer a prize for the one who hems her square first, and then the guests could take the pieces, which we will call dusters, as souvenirs. Offer a little prize for the one who finishes first and one for the best sewing. A box of home-made candy or a fancy cake or pie would be an acceptable reward, or a needle book or work bag. Half a dozen could easily be seated at the table, so you may with perfect propriety serve in the living-room by just passing the things. A fruit salad, coffee and sandwiches would be delicious. Pass salted nuts and olives if you like, but they are not necessary.

Notes of Condolence.

WILL you kindly print forms of notes to write to express thanks for flowers and for kindnesses shown at the time of our dear mother's death?

The simplest and best thing to do is to take the visiting card of the eldest daughter and write underneath the names of the others and the words, "Wish to express their sincere gratitude for the flowers and sympathy expressed in their sorrow."

A Birthday Shower.

Try it the next time a bride-elect is to be honored. This is the way one was managed: The guests are requested to bring something suitable for their birthday month. For instance, say the natal day is in June, a bunch of roses, or any gift, for June is the month of brides; or in May a basket of flowers or something in green glass to represent an emerald, for only a few are rich enough to give a real emerald; in February, a heart-shaped pincushion, or a book of Dickens' quotations. This shows how to work it out. An umbrella, or even a pair of rubbers for April, a bunch of fire crackers and a fan for July, or a silk flag. This, you see, may be made very interesting and amusing. Having funny things always adds to the merriment. This is a shower in which the men can participate and is best for the evening. A rhyme to go with each parcel will help make more fun. A clothes basket or hamper may be given in which to send everything home to the bride.

I have heard of similar affairs being given under the name of "calendar" showers; that is when there are just twelve guests and each one brings a gift suitable for the month which the hostess designates in the invitations. Every one, of course, selects something acceptable and appropriate for the new home.

VIVIAN'S Heart to Heart Chat

DEAR VIVIAN: I am a lonely bachelor, having plenty of money, a beautiful home—in short, everything but a wife to make me happy. I have been so engrossed in business that I have neglected society and the little things that attract many women. I want to get married, but I do not know how to court and win a wife. Perhaps I am mistaken in my dream. Is love worth while? LONELY.

Your question is exceedingly worth while, because the all-important question of love is too often neglected in our busy, practical world. I should advise you and all other bachelors who can afford to marry to do so. As you admit you have many material comforts, and still your life is incomplete because you lack that which is most worth while. Love, human, passionate and still divine, is the force which keeps a man's feet on the earth and his head lifted heavenward. As Ellen Key, the brilliant Swedish writer, says: "Thus great love already gives to two human beings what only completed development can give to mankind as a whole: unity between senses and soul, desire and duty, self-assertion and self-devotion, between the individual and the race, the present moment and the future."

Hunt long and well to find the one you want. Do not judge hastily nor impulsively. Bear in mind that the finest gems have to be cut and polished to reveal their marvelous beauty. If the one you love is already a polished gem, so much the better; if not take time to analyze her thought and manner and find her real worth. Manners, like the petals of a flower, by the grace and charm indicate the intrinsic beauty of a soul; again they are only a half expression of the real beauty.

❦ ❦ ❦

Dear Vivian: I am a young married woman. My husband is many years older than I. He objects to my flirting with the boys I liked before we were married. Since I am still young, I do not see why I should not have a good time. Who is right?

Chicago. H. K.

You are right in wanting to have a good time. Youth is youth and should be spent in pleasure instead of sorrow. This pleasure should be gained through your husband's love and companionship. Surely you need friends, but they should be those who are agreeable to your husband as well as yourself. If you want your husband to consider you and your feelings, first and foremost you should play fair and square.

It is one thing to win a man's love and another to hold it. The safest and surest way is to prize your husband's love and admiration instead of seeking it from men who loved or even admired you before you were married.

❦ ❦ ❦

Dear Vivian: I am a debutante this season. I have plenty of beaux and should like to settle down. Mother wants me to wait until I am 20. What is your honest opinion?

A DEBUTANTE.

I should recommend your taking your mother's advice. Mothers are usually disinterested and have their children's welfare at heart. Because you are young and have plenty of attention it may be difficult for you to select carefully and with the most mature judgment now. This will come with time and will be of real value in helping you decide the qualities and type of man you want for a lover and lasting comrade.

❦ ❦ ❦

A Devoted Daughter—I think you and your husband can come to an agreement on these points and you still be a devoted daughter. To be frank with you, your husband comes first as far as considering his wishes are concerned. The law takes this stand, and your mother understood this fact when she gave her consent to your marriage.

TALKS With the WOMAN WHO WORKS

MANY a girl is a failure in business because she intrudes her home life into the business world. If you will learn at the start you will save yourself many heartaches and disappointments later. Most men understand this intuitively or learn it quickly. Many women workers feel they are a little too masculine if they divorce their home life from the workaday world.

When your employer hires you, be sure and understand what he expects, including hours, the quantity and quality of the work he wants, and salary. After making a bargain try to keep to it. Do not come in ten minutes late in the morning. Do not take another ten minutes more than what is expected for your midday meal and have your wraps on when closing time comes.

If you make this as your program it will certainly count against you, though your employer makes no comment on it. Taking time that does not belong to you is quite as bad as stealing anything else. If you are expected to be down the first one in the morning, be there or have some better reason for not being there than there is nobody to watch you. Do not take time off to make engagements for theater, for luncheons, and for other social affairs. Remember that business is usually too important to be deferred for society. The same holds good for sickness. Be at your post unless you are sick abed. If this happens, let your employer know immediately so he can arrange for somebody to do your work without delay.

Once at your work take on a business attitude and try to keep it all day. You are being paid to work and to do the best work of which you are capable, not for your charms and femininity. By talking and laughing incessantly you not only interfere with your own work but you hinder others from doing their best work.

The worker who is put on her honor has deeper obligations to her employer than one who is watched. Do not wait until your employer tells you that you alone, or in the company of others, are disturbing him by unnecessary noise.

The best recreation to be gotten from you work is the satisfaction of knowing that every day you are doing the best of which you are capable.

For the Woman Who Works at Home—The Council Table Letter Box shows that there are many women who are capable and want to do a variety of fine sewing and embroidery at home. Still sewing and embroidery is only one of the many channels in which the woman with taste and skill can expend her ingenuity. Trimming hats at home is certainly a line of work which should appeal to many women and give satisfactory remuneration. If you have trimmed hats for yourself and the children for some time you need not hesitate to begin this work without further instruction. Without it you had better take some lessons which will give you some knowledge of the work. Experience supplemented by smart fashion illustrations given in the newspapers and magazines will be of valuable assistance to you.

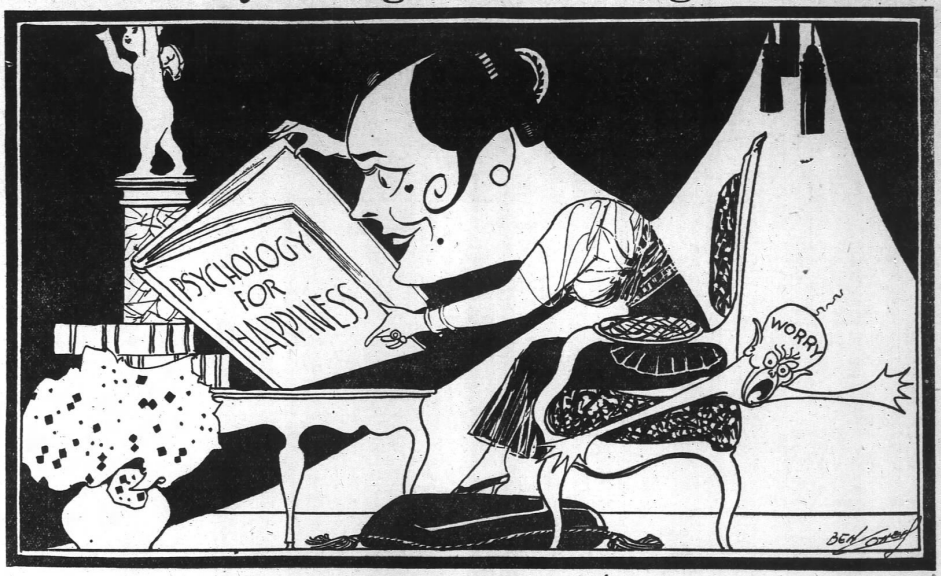
New Process for Auto Bodies

A FRENCH firm of motor car manufacturers makes its car bodies by a novel process of plastering. Builders are familiar with the process of making partition walls by erecting a screen of wire netting and coating it with a layer of plaster. Practically the same thing is done in the new process of making car bodies, except that a very different plaster in used. The framework of the car is made of wood, and on this wire netting is tacked. Then the modeler begins operations with palette and trowel, daubing the wire netting with the plastic material, which he spreads out smoothly. When the coating has set it may be dressed down with a plane and sandpaper, just like wood. After that it is painted and rubbed down with oils and varnish until it assumes a very high polish. It is claimed for the new process that the car bodies can be manufactured with a great saving of time, and also that a very light and durable body is obtained.

How Healthy Thoughts Will Bring You Health



Select Your Reading Matter With the Idea of Feeding Your Brain on Health-Producing Ingredients, Just as You Do Your Stomach.

YOU are what you think, or if you are not, it is not for lack of hearing the affirmation that you are.

A Washington physician is the latest authority to put his patients on a diet compounded chiefly of the aphorism, "Think well and you will be well."

Instead of sending his wealthy society women patients to sanitariums or sunnier climes to rest their overtaxed nerves, he is ordering them into classes in psychology to learn how to adjust their thinking in such wise that they will not overtax their nerves or anything else in their effort to live twenty-four hours out of a day.

One of these classes meets weekly in the library of one of Washington's feminine leaders of higher thinking, and its teacher is the head of a famous girls' school.

Early in the social swing of the winter debutantes, in the midst of the whirl of a first season, and matrons with the weight of the smartest functions of the season on their shoulders came on medical advice, or without it, to hear the laws of the intellect and the interrelations of the will with instinctive reflexes expounded.

What they expected to get out of it from a health point of view was a helpful understanding of the intimate connection between peace of nerves and poise of body, and the physical reflexes which accompany every grade of emotion.

"If a person has chronic kidney trouble"—in the words of the teacher of another of these morning society classes in psychology that are interesting Washington this winter—"you may expect to find that that person is harboring a sense of wrong, or is the possessor of a chronic grouch.

"Irritation or worry has its reflex action upon the digestive organs, while happiness enables one to digest nails, if such a thing were necessary."

The elements of psychology are taught by means of James' famous book on this subject. When the novices have mastered that book and have themselves well enough in hand to be able to stand and deliver their reasons for keeping poise through intellectual grip on their nerves, they are taken further along, deeper into the mysteries of human consciousness and psychic control, and are introduced to the master philosophers of past and present, one after another.

If it does no more than keep the society woman's mind off herself and the symptoms of her particular sort of nervous unrest, the astute physician who started the fad of studying psychology o' mornings proclaims that it is doing as much as he expected, and more.

How to Drill Holes in Glass

THE following is a satisfactory method of drilling holes in glass: Take a piece of straight copper the size of the hole that it is required to drill. The tubing should have a wall of one-thirty-second of an inch or more in thickness, depending upon the diameter. The tube is set up in a drill chuck and driven at a speed corresponding to that of a twist drill of the same size. The tube is fed down onto the glass with an intermittent movement, and a mixture of emery and oil is dropped onto the glass at the point where the hole is to be drilled. After a ring has been cut in the glass on one side the work is turned over and the drilling completed from the opposite side. This will prevent chipping the glass when the drill nears the opposite side. The copper tubing is soft, so that it holds the emery, and as copper is an excellent conductor of heat it draws the heat away from the glass, preventing it from being cracked. An idea of the rapidity with which holes can be drilled in this way may be gathered from the fact that a five-sixteenths inch hole can be drilled through an ordinary sheet of window glass in seven minutes.

Electric Bulb a Healing Power

THE ordinary sixteen candle power electric bulb, attached to an ordinary reflector, has been used by the French physician, Chaput, in a series of interesting experiments. It is said he has succeeded in healing refractory sores and ulcers, such as those caused by burns, or severe abrasions.

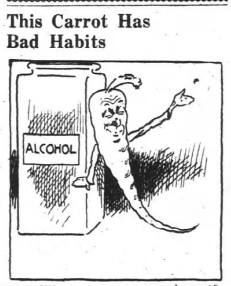
The reflector, with bulb attached, is placed on either end of the affected area on folded towels, the bulb being kept as near as possible to the lesion without causing the unpleasant sensation of heat. The treatment is applied daily or on alternate days for an hour. It is observed to cause a copius outpouring of serum at the affected area, and the area of redness surrounding it disappears shortly after the exposure. Rapid healing of previously rebellious ulcerations and rapid disinfection were produced in this manner.

The method of treatment is also effective in certain chronic skin eruptions where there is scaling or discharge.

Some New Uses For Old Rope

OLD rope, like old tin cans and other things generally considered as waste, has its special market and uses, and in every seaport the collecting and classifying of old rope is an important business. Rope that is covered with heavy graphite or tar is even more valuable today for making oakum than lightly tarred material, while hemp rope with the original heavy coating of tar worn off by weathering is often used for bag paper. A small percentage of untarred hemp rope, used in its prime for hoisting and other such purposes, is being converted into cigaret paper in Europe. Scraps and waste from old tarred rope, and also old oakum removed from seams of ships, are now used for making boards.

This Carrot Has Bad Habits



HAVE you ever seen a stewed carrot? Of course you have. And ate one, too.

But that is not the kind of a stewed carrot we really had in mind. Perhaps it should be termed the "inebriate carrot," for really in truly, cross our heart, this particular friend of the family table can become fearfully intoxicated, according to Professor Jagadis Chunder Bose, instructor of natural sciences at the University of Calcutta, India.

The professor was lecturing to a select group of professors at the University of Chicago. In the course of his discussion he mentioned that a chemist once left a dish of alcohol near a fine, upstanding, healthy young carrot one day. Sniffing the aroma, the carrot began acting disgracefully.

"Why, this vegetable was actually maudlin," said Professor Bose, "and did not revive until it had been taken out in the fresh air."

Shocking!

With the aid of the "emotiongraph," which he recently invented, the professor said he is able to prove that plants have emotions which the instruments record in a startling way.

Towers for Testing Aeroplanes

TWO steel towers, each sixty feet high, are now being used in England for the purpose of testing the effects of different air currents on aeroplanes. At the top of each there is a rotating platform, on which large models of aeroplanes can be exposed to winds from different directions.

The spot has been carefully chosen so that no stress or obstructions can deflect the winds or cause eddies of air which might affect the tests. The models can be placed in any position, and the platforms can be turned so that the wind can strike them in any direction, while delicate instruments register the velocity of the air currents.

By means of these towers different types of flying machines can be tested without danger to human life, and when the best models have been decided on there is another apparatus which tests the different kinds of propellers.

This is the "whirling table," which is sixty feet in diameter and is mounted on a vertical shaft, turned by an electric motor, so that the table itself can be made to revolve at various speeds up to 100 feet a second.

As the wind outside cannot provide all the different conditions that are required an elaborate system has been installed which, by means of fans and screens and obstructions, can produce artificially nearly all the atmospheric changes that an airman is called upon to face. Then, by means of models carefully constructed to scale, experimenters can ascertain more or less what will happen in certain circumstances.

Here's a Foolproof Poison

THE latest thing on the drug market is "foolproof" bichloride of mercury. During the last year or so there have been so many cases of accidental poisoning from this dangerous but highly effective antiseptic that manufacturers racked their brains to produce a tablet that could not be mistaken for anything else—even in the dark.

"Foolproof" bichloride of mercury was the answer. The tablets are strung permanently on a thread, like beads, and in addition they are dispensed in a bottle having a distinctive shape—unlike the ordinary bottle. Furthermore, the tablets themselves have a peculiar shape, are bright blue in color, and each one is labeled "poison."

The manufacturers say, and it seems with reason, that a person would have to lose all his mental faculties in order not to be able to detect these pellets from headache or other tablets. He might not notice the shape of the bottle or the peculiar shape of the tablet, its color and marking of "poison." But he would not be expected to ignore the string, which must be cut before the tablet is detached.

Flaw in U. S. Patent Laws

IN GERMANY a person who is granted a patent of any kind must work that patent in Germany within three years of the time the patent is granted or forfeit the patent right. In the United States you can take out a patent and never work it, if you don't wish to, and still retain the rights and privileges which the patent grants.

Aniline or coal dyes are patented in Germany and in the United States at the same time, but as the German manufacturer is not obliged under our patent laws to manufacture the dyes in the United States he manufactures them in Germany and at the same time controls the United States market for his goods through the patent granted him here.

New Plan for Summoning Waiter

"OH, WAITER!"

But said waiter seems not to have heard.

"Oh, waiter!"

Again no response.

You grow annoyed. The head waiter passes by. You endeavor frantically to signal—with as little success. If you are a woman you perhaps stamp your French heel. If you are a man you probably eschew naughty words under your breath.

Such experience is familiar to most all of us. Appreciating this fact, those looking toward efficient table service in hotel dining-rooms and cafes have struck upon a novel idea for attracting the attention of different waiters and indicating the desires of a patron. It consists of a standard carrying three electric lights, each of a different color.

The lights are operated by push buttons—a different button for a waiter, head waiter, or wine server. A light remains burning until a diner has received attention.

The scheme is still in its infancy. But we may see these signal standards in our hotel dining-rooms and cafes in near future.

Copper Colored Beauties Who Are Exact Duplicates of One Another

NO, THE accompanying picture is not a likeness of copper-colored triplets. It is a group of Samoan girls who, like all of the girls of their race, are exact duplicates of one another. How their parents are able to distinguish between them is a puzzle they alone can solve.

These Samoan Beauties Are Not Triplets—They're Chums.

Dark as is their skin it is fair compared with their eyes and hair. Their hair is black, soft and wavy, and it is usually worn hanging until they are married. The dark luster is embellished by the brilliant flowers which they twine in their hair—flowers which invite and entice by their rich coloring and rare perfumes.

Their eyes are almost as black as their hair, warm and pleasing. Their figures are no less attractive, for the Samoan girls are generally slight, especially when they are young. Their forms are symmetrical, and they are easy and graceful in their movements. This is especially true of the village girls, who are as happy and free from care as they are attractive.

These girls are naturally clever, but after they have learned to read and write and have mastered the first steps in arithmetic they do not worry their heads about more knowledge.

The climate is so warm in these islands that the girls wear scant clothing, not much more than some bright colored scarf wound about their hips. Their chief decoration are flowers and several chains of bright beads.

They are skilled at weaving cotton and in working in the fields, but a good deal of their time is spent singing and dancing, pastimes of which they are very fond.

They are much beloved by their men when they are suitors, but this love continues and grows after they are married. The men make great effort to treat their women well, fearing that they will be loved by men of neighboring tribes. The mental standing of their husbands is high, they are honorable, generous and good fishermen.

When the time comes for these young women to be courted the men will have their bodies tattooed from their hips to their knees. They will approach these girls in gentle words with a language soft and liquid. They will scatter plenty of flowers at their feet and serenade them with romantic strains. Gentle and kind as these damsels are, they are born coquettes and are not easily won. These people are pure Polynesians; they are dispersed over the Pacific from Hawaii to New Zealand.

Their land is a fitting setting for their natural beauty. It is rich in flowers and coral reefs. Part of the archipelago belongs to the United States and the rest is owned by Germany.

GEORGE WASHINGTON'S BIRTHDAY

HOUDON'S BUST OF GEORGE WASHINGTON.

THE ONLY AUTHENTIC PORTRAIT FROM LIFE OF MARY BALL WASHINGTON, THE MOTHER OF GEORGE WASHINGTON. OWNED BY W. LANIER WASHINGTON. UNRETOUCHED PHOTOGRAPH OF THE ORIGINAL PAINTING, AND THE SAME FACE, WITHOUT ALTERATION, SUBSTITUTED FOR THE FACE IN THE PICTURE OF GEORGE WASHINGTON REPRODUCED ABOVE TO SHOW THE MARKED RESEMBLANCE BETWEEN THIS PORTRAIT OF THE MOTHER OF WASHINGTON AND HER SON.

GEORGE WASHINGTON'S diary for the year 1789 contains the following entry:—

"Feb. 11—Went up to Alexandria to the celebration of my birthday. Many manoeuvres were performed by the uniformed corps, and an elegant ball and supper at night."

This was the year of his death. He died on the 14th of the following December, but his diary ten years earlier, in 1789, contains a similar entry, the date, February 11, being "old style" and corresponding to February 22 of the modern calendar.

Thus it appears that Washington's birthday was celebrated by a grateful people while he was still alive. It was also made every year the occasion of quiet merrymaking at Mount Vernon, where all the slaves on the estate, who numbered about one hundred and fifty, enjoyed a special holiday, with much feasting and drinking of "methigler"—a harmless brew of fermented honey, water and spices.

Neighbors and old friends were invited to dinner as a matter of course, and twenty-five or thirty people sat down to that bounteous meal in the "banquet hall" at the north end of the mansion. The repast, which began at half-past three o'clock in the afternoon, lasted for some hours, and everybody was expected to have a mighty appetite; for it was not the custom at Mount Vernon to serve lunch, and no supper was in prospect.

The estate was twelve square miles in area, much of it being forested. It was in a region exceedingly rich in game, and the venison, wild turkey, canvas-back duck and partridge served at Mount Vernon were obtained at the expense of powder and shot—not to mention the delicious fish which the river supplied. The master of this baronial property raised his own beef and mutton, and his vegetables were grown in a kitchen garden which to the present day produces regular crops of such "truck" for market.

With all these dishes, put on the table at one time, after the manner of the day, each gentleman present, who might chance to find himself opposite something that needed carving was expected to perform that duty. Puddings and pies accompanied the rest of the provender, leaving nothing for what we should call dessert except fruit and nuts, which were brought on after the cloth was withdrawn from the polished mahogany.

With the dessert came the wine, and plenty of it. There was "sack" (which nowadays we call sherry), port and madeira (imported by way of England), and "Brazil wine," which came from South America. At that period it was not the fashion for unmarried women to touch wine, and the matrons contented themselves with a sip or two; but the men drank heavily. Washington himself rarely went beyond a single glass. While his guests were drinking wine he would accompany them with cider, of which he was extremely fond, and which was made in great quantity from Mount Vernon apples.

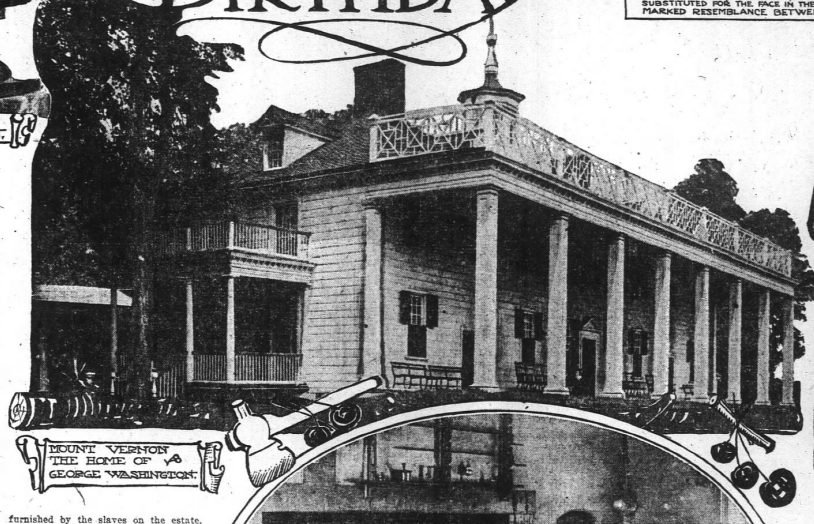
The father of his country called himself a farmer, and his "plantation" was so far self-sustaining that if deprived altogether of supplies from outside sources Mount Vernon and its people would have been able to get along very comfortably. All the farm labor was furnished by the slaves on the estate, and their clothing as well as most of that worn by the master and mistress of the establishment was spun and woven by a dozen or more negro women who were constantly employed at this work.

On occasions of ceremony such as this, however, Mrs. Washington was attired in a silken gown and her husband wore a suit of costly black velvet, with knee-breeches, black silk stockings, silver buckles on his shoes and fine lace ruffles at his wrists. His is an impressive figure as he rises at the table, a glass of madeira in his hand, to offer the first toast, to "My Guests." Five minutes later, at a signal from his wife, the ladies take their departure, and then follows the important business of passing the bottle, which, in obedience to custom, moves always "with the sun"—that is to say, from right to left.

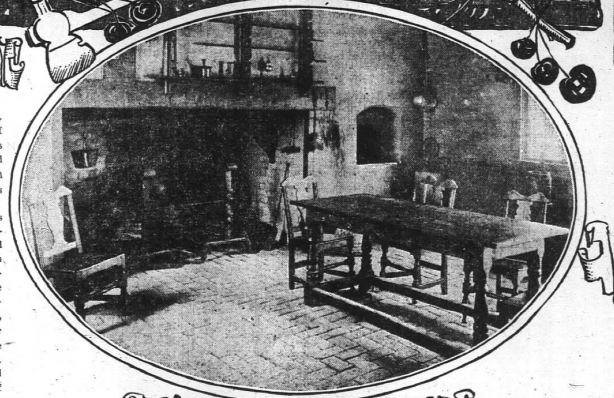
Washington as he appears at this celebration of his last birthday is an elderly man. The powder on his hair, which is drawn back and done up in a queue behind, conceals his grayness. He is rather deaf, and a set of false teeth, made of hippopotamus ivory, hides imperfectly the absence of a natural dental equipment long departed. Observed in a standing posture, it is seen that his legs are slightly bowed. In Trumbull's famous portrait of him in uniform this defect does not appear for the good reason that he sat only for the head, the legs and body being painted from a prize fighter, suitably costumed, who served as a model.

Perhaps there had been a fox hunt in the morning. Washington was very fond of sport, and for many years kept a pack of hounds. One of these dogs, which was a special pet of his, was called Sweetlips. Washington was very fond of animals. Not far from the house, near the river's edge, was a small deer park inclosed by a fence. On one occasion a favorite deer was missed and, its carcass being found hanging in a butcher's shop in Alexandria, Washington attacked the butcher with a whip and beat him frightfully.

In the evening after the men had left their wine to rejoin the ladies there were games such as "blind man's buff" and "hunt the slipper," with much romping among the young men and maidens, and perhaps some kissing. It was all in the fashion of old-time Virginia entertainment, with cards for the older people (played for small stakes), and, it is likely, a dance to follow—winding up, of course, with the Virginia reel. The music was furnished by a white haired old negro slave, who kept time by thumping the floor with his big foot.



MOUNT VERNON THE HOME OF GEORGE WASHINGTON



THE OLD KITCHEN AT MOUNT VERNON

A CITIZEN OF TODAY (6 FT. 2 INCHES IN STATURE) CLAD IN WASHINGTON'S UNIFORM. PHOTO TAKEN BY NATIONAL MUSEUM.

Alas, for the contrast! Fifty years later the house stood empty and deserted, undergoing a slow decay and exhibiting every sign of neglect. Window shutters hung from a single hinge; the grounds about the mansion, which had been so carefully kept, were overgrown with tall weeds. The servants' quarters and other detached buildings were literally falling to pieces. To such a point had ruin progressed that the melancholy condition of Mount Vernon was plainly visible to passengers on the Potomac steamboats going up and down the river.

How had such a state of affairs come about? The matter is easily explained. Washington when he died left the property to his nephew, Bushrod Washington, who was a Justice of the United States Supreme Court, making provision, however, that his wife, Martha, should retain ownership of it during her lifetime. She survived him two and a half years. Bushrod took little interest in the place and visited it scarce half a dozen times. The slaves were scattered, having been freed by a clause in the master's will.

Bushrod, and after him his heirs, sold off the land piece by piece, until only the house and 204 acres were left. Such was the state of affairs in 1853, when a woman, Ann Pamela Cunningham, of South Carolina, started the movement which was destined to preserve for the nation the most valued of its historic memorials. At that time Mount Vernon belonged to John Augustine Washington (Bushrod's son), and to him Miss Cunningham wrote, asking what price he would accept for the property. His answer was a refusal to sell. Nevertheless, five years later he agreed to accept $200,000.

To collect the money was an enormous task. Appeals for contributions were made to women all over the country. Fifty-eight thousand dollars was raised by Edward Everett, who to earn that amount delivered a lecture 122 times. The Masons, to which fraternity Washington belonged, helped substantially. The first payment on the purchase, $18,000, was made in April, 1858, and not long afterward the entire sum required was procured and paid over, the property being thereupon transferred to the ownership of the Mount Vernon Association.

The association is an organization of women. Mount Vernon as it stands today owes its existence to women. Men have nothing to do with its control or ownership, which is vested in a Board of Regents, each State of the Union being represented in this body by one vice regent. In May of every year the ladies who in this capacity represent the association spend a week at Mount Vernon and take counsel in regard to its affairs. There is not room for all of them in the ancient mansion, and so some of them sleep in the old servants' quarters and others on cots installed above the spinning room of long ago. The present regent is Miss Harriet C. Comegys, of Delaware.

Mount Vernon to-day is self-supporting. It has an income of about $20,000 a year, derived mainly from admission fees paid by 70,000 annual visitors. Vegetables, fruit and hay raised on the estate contribute something. There is also a dairy and the milk is sold.

Few people took the trouble to visit Mount Vernon when it was empty and undergoing a progressive decay. Nowadays it is different. The place to-day looks almost exactly as it did when Washington lived there. If his ghost were to revisit the mansion it would find things but slightly altered. The house is in all important respects as he left it. Most of the old furniture remains, having been returned by various heirs and other persons who came into possession of it. Even the crockery and silverware are the very pieces that Martha Washington knew so well and used so often.

Various States of the Union have taken pride in furnishing one or another of the rooms. Thus, for instance, the bedroom formerly occupied by Nellie Custis is now known as the "Maryland Room" because it owes its "ameublement" chiefly to patriotic Maryland women who have contributed authentic Mount Vernon relics for its adornment. The "New Jersey Room" is the chamber in which the Marquis de Lafayette is understood to have slept when he was General Washington's guest. Perhaps the only thing with which the former master would find fault is the arrangement of the lower floor of the mansion, which has been transformed into a sort of museum of Washington memorabilia.

What deserves most emphasis, however, is the admirable preservation of everything about the house and its surroundings. All possible effort has been made to restore the mansion, its furniture and its immediate environment to the state and aspect they presented when Washington was alive. This is a problem which, obviously, has been beset with many difficulties. Besides, there has been a fight to be conducted against the tendencies of decay.

Just for example. Before Washington died he expressed a desire and an intention to remove the old family mausoleum, a very primitive affair, in which relatives and forebears of his were buried. Mostly it was under ground and water had seeped into it. The same water has made a whole lot of trouble since. It came from an underground stream and only a few years ago was threatening actually to undermine the foundations of the mansion itself.

The danger became so serious and even alarming that in 1904 the Mount Vernon Association employed an expert engineer to find out what was the matter and make recommendations. He discovered the underground stream and recommended that a tunnel be dug to carry off the water. This was accomplished at an expense of $7,000 and cured the trouble entirely—the really serious nature of the menace being indicated by the circumstance that the tunnel now delivers 50,000 gallons into the Potomac every twenty-four hours.

On one occasion, many years ago, a gambler located his establishment within a few hundred yards of the limits of the estate. The association was anxious to get rid of the nuisance. The property occupied by the gambler was to be bought for a moderate sum of money, but the cash was not available. Here, as usual, lucky chance helped.

It so happened that Mr. Jay Gould went up the Potomac on his yacht and paid a visit to Mount Vernon. He had a talk with the superintendent of the estate, and, learning about the offensive neighbor, ascertained incidentally what the situation was. "No money?" said Mr. Gould. "Why, I'll attend to that. Here's a check."

The place has become a Mecca of pilgrimage for multitudes of persons from all over the United States. Indeed, if it were possible, it might be said that foreigners hold Washington in even higher reverence than we do, and distinguished visitors from foreign parts invariably find their way to Mount Vernon.

All of this enthusiasm is the direct result of the efforts of the association. For the interest attaching to Mount Vernon depends mainly upon the fact that its physical aspect and environment to-day are substantially the same as in George Washington's time. It reproduces the intimate circumstances of Washington's life and doings. Persons who go to Mount Vernon feel that they have done the next best thing to meeting Washington face to face. They see just how he lived, where his servants were quartered, the kitchen in which his meals were cooked, the garden in which the vegetables for his table were grown, and so on.

Entering the mansion, they are admitted to its domestic intimacies. They even behold the room in which Washington died, and its old fashioned bed, with four tall and slender posts, hung with the original white dimity curtains, and covered with the same spread that was used for his couch. The furniture of the room is the same—even to a liquor case in the corner holding three bottles of two quarts each. This, however, must have been for emergency use, inasmuch as Washington was certainly not addicted to stimulants.

Washington's bedroom, by the way, is said to be haunted. It is not that any recognizable apparition has ever been seen there, but the few persons who have occupied the chamber for sleeping purposes have been almost unanimous in asserting that they were beset by a consciousness of the nearness of some strange and brooding spectre—presumed, of course, to be that of the former proprietor of the mansion. Also it is averred that his footfalls are heard moving to and fro on the floor of the colonnade which connects the house with the old kitchen—the latter being detached from the main dwelling.

Although Mount Vernon in Washington's day was equipped with all the latest luxuries then known, it knew no carpets or rugs. On one occasion Washington did import a carpet which was intended for his library, but the cost of it was so great that his political opponents advertised the matter as a scandal. No President of the United States has ever been more abused and vilified than Washington, and he, in order to put a stop to the talk in this instance, refused to receive the carpet or to pay duty on it. It was bought in at auction by a Philadelphia woman, and a descendant of hers gave it not long ago to the Mount Vernon Association, so that to-day it finds itself by a curious chain of circumstances in the place for which it was originally intended.

When the ladies of the association are "camping out" for their annual week at Mount Vernon they take their meals in the old library and the cooking is done for them by an aged woman named Sarah, who is a great-grandchild of one of Washington's slaves. To-day she has a farm of her own, but it delights her to come and minister unto those who have made themselves caretakers in these days of the ancient mansion. Another old colored woman, of similar ancestry, occupies the spinning house and gives lessons in spinning with the wheel and in weaving after the old fashioned method.

The only fear for the future of Mount Vernon lies in the possibility of fire. Against this danger every imaginable precaution is taken. No lights, save candles, are allowed on the premises. In a vault near the house are kept four chemical engines, and there are four tanks of bicarbonate of soda and water, over each of which is suspended a receptacle containing a gallon of sulphuric acid. In case of emergency the sulphuric acid would be upset into the soda solution, generating quantities of carbonic acid gas, in the presence of which fire cannot live. In addition there are scattered through the mansion a number of portable fire extinguishers.

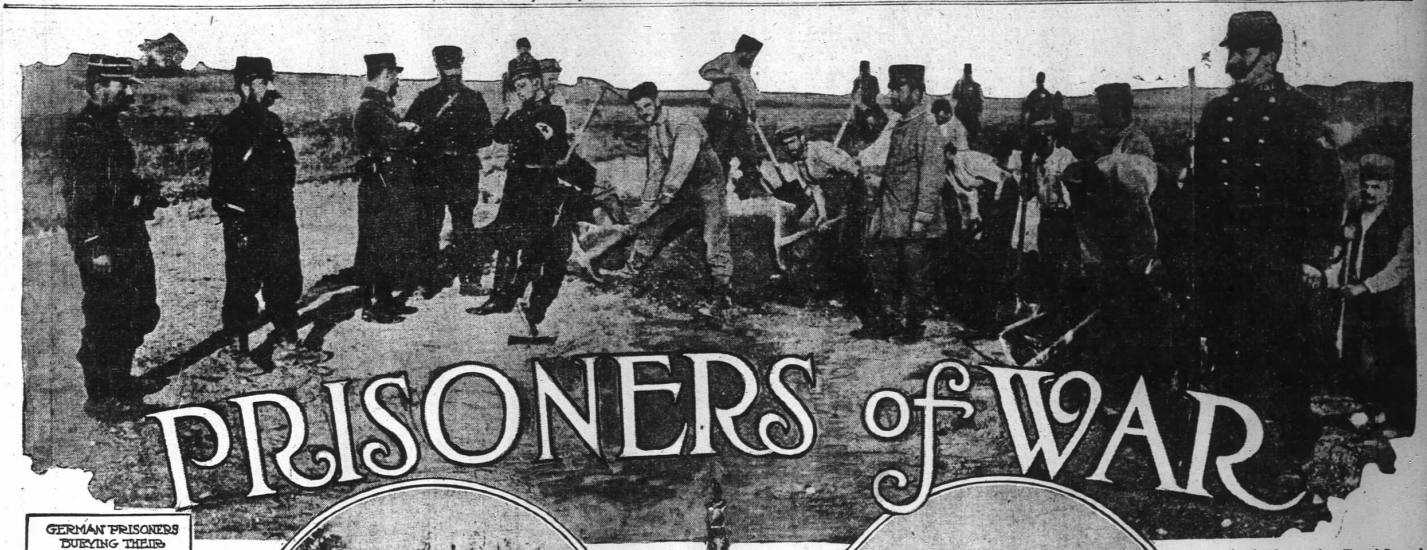
Sacred Flag of the Prophet

IN the inmost precincts of the old Seraglio at Stamboul (Constantinople) the Flag of the Prophet is kept in safety. Only on proclamation of a holy war is it unfurled to the eyes of a reverential multitude of believers, though without being removed. Its staff is closely set with golden nails and covered with green velvet. The flag of green silk is richly embroidered in gold with mystic scrolls and texts from Al Koran. According to tradition the silk material originally served as curtain to the tent of Ajsha, Mohammed's favorite wife. Thence it was treasured by the Ommajades in Bagdad, and brought to Cairo by the Abassides.

In the year 1517, when Sultan Selim I. conquered Egypt, he transferred it to Damascus, where the throngs of pious pilgrims on their way to the sacred shrine could do it homage. Mursd III., invading Hungary, carried it in the midst of his army to inspire courage. The Mosque of the Seraglio became its depository in 1595, in charge of the Sheik ul Islam, the religious head of Mohammedanism.

It was last unrolled in 1826, when Sultan Mahmud planned the destruction of the Janissaries. Neither the Russo-Turkish nor the Balkan wars of recent years gave cause sufficient to the Moslem Church elders to assume the responsibility of proclaiming a "holy war." Its unfurling arouses the fanaticism of all believers to frenzy. Every Moslem then must fight—fight a l'outrance.

Young or old, well or ill, rich or poor, married or single, busy or idle, you must obey the call. You must leave home, children, wife; all social relations are set at naught, all obligations ignored; you must follow where you are led, go where you are sent, do what you are ordered. No other consideration holds. It means a life and death struggle engaged in by nearly 200,000,000 men throughout Asia, Africa, even in Europe.



PRISONERS of WAR

GERMAN PRISONERS BURYING THEIR DEAD.

By Richard G. Conover.

BATTLERS behind bars, prisoners paying the penalty of patriotism, are the sorriest sights of war. The dead and the wounded of the fight have achieved a noble and visible glory. But the soldier pent up like a convict while he pants for the chance to strike a blow in his country's cause is a chained and chafing Samson shorn of his locks.

There is a special aggravation about prisonerhood in war times. The captured fighter feels no self-condemnation. He cannot look upon his loss of freedom with any acknowledgment of merited punishment such as the convict who has broken a penal code may now and then realize. The war prisoner defiantly insists he has committed no offence. Force without law holds him. A hair's turn of fortune in battle would have made him the jailer instead of the jailed. He is ripe for escape from the instant he is captured. There will be no rewards offered for his apprehension and he forfeits nothing if he is caught and returned.

The wounded who recover find themselves surrounded with kind and systematic ministration and with many more comforts than fell to their lot in camp and on the firing line. It is the prisoner who is liable to suffer in body and mind for months and years, finally dying from diseases contracted during captivity. His death is as certainly attributable to his patriotism and devotion as that of his comrade shot through the heart in a charge. And with this addition—he is deprived of his liberty and endures no end of suffering before he yields up his life.

In the present great European war it is reported that both the Germans and the Allies are taking fairly good care of their prisoners. Judged by the numbers captured on both sides, a new chapter of military procedure will have to be written upon systematic safekeeping of the great masses compelled to lay down their arms. The way of sequestering and caring for prisoners during all previous wars on earth must reveal itself a very pigmy way in view of the veritable armies that have been reported captured at various stages of the campaign. Bigger and broader methods will have to be employed.

Up to the thirteenth century there was no regular arrangement between nations for an exchange of prisoners of war, and the captured soldier faced execution or most inhuman treatment. In the ancient Assyrian, Babylonian, Persian and Israelitish wars, as well as in the great Greek conflicts, it was no uncommon thing to put the whole adult male population of a conquered State to the sword, leaving the women and children to be taken into slavery. This, in fact, was done quite frequently up to six hundred years ago. And history records Napoleon putting all his Turkish prisoners to death at Jaffa as late as 1799.

Since exchange of prisoners began and since humanity was first supposed to be exercised in the care and treatment of the captured soldier there have been two great prisoner-of-war epochs so rank with cruelty that they stand out from all others. One of these was the abominable conduct of the British captors of the Continentals in the infamous prison ships anchored in New York waters during the Revolutionary War, and the other the awful experiences of captives, both in England and France, during the Napoleonic wars. Other wars have had their tales of prisoner and prison horror, but they have been mild compared to the two epochs named. During the civil war there was also an outcry that prisoners were not treated as they should be, but bad as their condition might have been it could not compare with the prison ship or the Napoleonic quartels.

According to The Hague terms, prisoners of war are to be treated the same as government troops with respect to food, quarters and lodging. Prisoners who escape and are again taken prisoners are not to be held liable in any way for their previous flight. A prisoner is not to be forced to accept parole on the promise not to take up arms again during the war if he refuses to make that pledge. Governments are prohibited forcing paroled soldiers to enter the ranks again, but shall scrupulously respect word of honor so given. An officer captured with his men cannot give parole for them in a body, as such an act would be considered tantamount to desertion. Each man must bargain for his own parole individually. A recaptured prisoner who has violated a previous parole forfeits his rights as prisoner of war.

Article 495 of the Regulations for the Government of the Navy of the United States shows that Uncle Sam feels bound to live up to the terms of The Hague war regulations in every respect. This article provides for the treatment of prisoners of war by a commanding officer as follows:—

"He shall take care that all prisoners of war are treated with humanity; that their personal property is preserved and protected; that they are allowed the use of such of their effects as may be necessary for their health, and that they are supplied with rations properly cooked. He shall, however, have them properly guarded and deprived of all means of escape or revolt."

The United States Army Regulations also provide adequately for the care of prisoners of war. Article 1203 sets forth that the captured soldiers are to have a ration a day the same as the enlisted men. Article 1473 provides for the same medical attendance upon prisoners of war as is extended to "our own soldiers." With all of this latter day promised humanity, contrast the treatment of prisoners of war in the time of the American Revolution.

The most notorious of the British prisons was the old 60-gun man-of-war Old Jersey, otherwise known as the "Hell." She was moored at several places in New York waters during the Revolution, remaining longest in the vicinity of Wallabout Bay, on the Brooklyn shore. During the day the 1,000 prisoners crowded in the hold of the vessel were allowed air and sunlight as a great favor, the hatches or improvised coverings on the deck being slid back. At nightfall, however, the officer in charge of the guard cried out:—

"Down, rebels, down!" this meaning that all prisoners who may have climbed up a few feet to the various subdecks of the old war ship must get back to the bottom before the coverings were clamped.

So awful were the conditions on board that the same officer of the guard, in his regular routine of the morning after opening the hatches, cried out, "Rebels, turn out your dead!" And the prisoners in the hold were forced to lift up their dead comrades to the deck. It is estimated that between 11,000 and 12,000 Continental prisoners perished while on prison ships in New York Harbor. Most of them were buried on the Brooklyn shore, and so carelessly that during the first big storm after a burial a great number of bodies were sure to be washed out into the river.

With hardly any food, clad in rags, fever-stricken, and some with unattended wounds, the inmates of the prison ships were driven to mutiny many times. In October, 1777, two prison ships were set afire by prisoners and hundreds burned to death. They preferred deliverance in this way to further captivity. The Whitby, large transport, was also used as a prison, many citizens who should have been classed as non-combatants being confined in her. During the spring of 1777 the entire Wallabout beach between the Ravine and Remsen's dock was filled with graves of prisoners who succumbed to the awful conditions. In Trinity Church Cemetery there is a magnificent monument to the prison ship martyrs of the Revolution. Their bones were collected in 1808 by the Tammany Society and buried near the Brooklyn Navy Yard.

History also gives bad reports of the British prisoners in Philadelphia during the Revolution. The insufficiency of food was so great that rats were deemed a luxury. Some of the prisoners in their last starving agonies scraped mortar from walls and ate it, along with rotten wood, according to Dr. Waldo. The officer in charge of the Philadelphia prisons is said to have made a fortune through charging for prisoners' supplies that the prisoners never received. In New York the husband of a woman very much in the good graces of General Howe is also said to have amassed great wealth through his appointment to the jailership of prisoners.

Official records show that on September 30, 1779, there were 12,000 Spanish, French and American prisoners in England. There was no exchange with France by cartel up to January, 1781, when the number was 44,000. In September, 1798, the English prisoners in France were 6,000 and the French prisoners in England were 27,000. In 1811 the English prisoners in France were 10,200 and the French in England 47,600.

The Confederate prisons were located at Belle Isle, Castle Thunder, Danville, and the famous "Libby" in Virginia; Salisbury, in North Carolina; Charleston, South Carolina; Andersonville and Miller, in Georgia. Colonel D. T. Chandler, of the Confederate service, made a report on Andersonville during the war and denounced the way it was being conducted. After the war Henry Wirz, who had been the superintendent at Andersonville, was tried for establishing the prisoners' dead line, using bloodhounds to trail prisoners and general inhumanity. He was convicted and hanged.

From Libby Prison there was a sensational escape through tunnel digging, fully equal to the Confederate escape from the Ohio State Penitentiary. The chief mover in it was Colonel Thomas E. Rose, who was taken to Libby October 1, 1863. The first tunnel dug had to be abandoned, but early in February, 1864, the one that was to prove the way to freedom was completed. General Morgan, who had escaped from the Federal Prison at Columbus, was in Richmond at the time. Out of the Libby tunnel 109 prisoners escaped. Fifty-nine reached the Federal lines; forty-eight were recaptured and two were drowned. Rose was one of the prisoners recaptured, but was exchanged for a Confederate colonel two months later.

After the lapse of half a century there is still once in a while complaint heard of the privations and bad treatment at Libby and other Southern prisons. The fact is, however, that the Confederates toward the close of their great fight did not have half enough food for their own troops and it is not unnatural or inhuman for a nation to look first after the welfare of its soldiers in the field. Despite all the hardships, veterans still tell of many humorous happenings connected with the life in Libby Prison. For many years after the war Chaplain, afterward Bishop McCabe, of the Methodist Church, lectured on "The Bright Side of Life in Libby Prison," in which he excited roars of laughter by telling how the prisoners were squaddled by their own arrangement, under a "captain" and at certain hours, when lying on one side on the hard floor had become unbearable for the thin men, the command, "Spoon Over!" would be the signal for a general turning of the 1,200 prisoners.

Bulletins of the present great European war show that the Germans have established a big prison centre at Camp Doberitz, near Berlin. How many of the fighters of the Allies are held there is problematical. The Kaiser pays all prisoners employed cleaning streets or in the construction of roads at the rate of one mark a day, and there is a constant cry from the prisoners that this is insufficient for their labor and what they must do with their money.

England has prisons for the Germans at the Isle of Wight and the Isle of Man and at the iron works, Queens Ferry, in Wales. Some of the prisoners have been employed at the Newbury race course.

The British confined 800 prisoners in the North Dutch Church, 3,000 in the Middle Dutch Church at Nassau and Liberty streets, a large number in the Van Courtlandt sugar house and another group in the sugar house in Liberty street. The churches were stripped of their pews and flooring laid from one gallery to another. This gave Manhattan Island a prisoner population equalling fifty per cent of its adult citizenry.

In 1806 the celebrated prison at Dartmouth was begun. Sometimes 10,000 were incarcerated there. Official figures show that in 1810 there were 5,354 there and in 1811 the number was 6,329. Later on, during the American War of 1812, this number was greatly increased. There was an inland prison at Norman Cross, holding 6,000; one at Stapleton, near Bristol, holding 5,000; one at Valley Field, near Edinburgh, holding 21,500, while the hulks at Portsmouth held 12,000 in 1810. Plymouth hulks and prison held 8,000 and Chatham 5,000 the same year.

The Tour d'Angouléme, called the Place of Tears, was a French prison located on a high rock thirty miles north of Strasburg. This was known as the "French Hell" and all that happened to Frenchmen in England happened to Englishmen there. Thomas O'Neill, a British officer, published an account of his captivity at Quimper. There were 1,500 prisoners. Seven men had to subsist on three small loaves a day, or a small quantity of rice or beans barely sufficient for one person. Often when the prisoners started to eat, "fake" orders were given for a muster of the captives. While they were assembling the French soldiers, it is reported, stole the rations for future sale.

When a distemper broke out in the jail ten or twelve died daily. There was a rumor that faintly heard cannonading meant that the English were about to land. The commandant of the jail warned his prisoners that if this proved true they would all be put to death. This sounds absurdly awful at a distance of one hundred years, but it was plain fact then.

Officer O'Neill records that two delirious men asking for water in this prison were deliberately shot. Cats, rats, dogs and mice were eaten, he avers, to satisfy the pangs of hunger. When some of the prisoners were put on an allowance of bread and water the selling of firewood was prohibited.

Skunk, Long Barred From Society, Makes Debut as Household Pet

CHARLES B. CORY, curator of zoology at the Field Columbian Museum of Chicago, and one of the most widely known naturalists in the country, says: "Science has found a way to remove the scent glands of the skunk without in any way affecting the health or happiness of the animal. If this can be done with the young animal he can be made to become a household pet. Naturally of an affectionate nature, he will rival the cat and dog for your favors. Children can play with him at will. And, besides, he will rid the neighborhood of rats and mice. The flesh of young skunk is very good eating, as I can testify from personal experience. It is not unlike chicken and far better than possum or coon."

+ + +

SAYS Dr. Clinton Hart Merriam, also a well-known naturalist: "These animals, particularly when young, make very pretty pets, being attractive in appearance, gentle in disposition, interesting in manners, cleanly in habits—rare qualities, indeed. They are playful, sometimes mischievous, and manifest considerable affection for those who have the care of them. I have had, at different times, ten skunks in confinement. From some of them I removed the scent bags, but the greater number were left in a state of nature. One of these was particularly clever. While driving about the country he would sleep in my pocket. He was very frolicsome and playful."

NOW that the skunk has been introduced into polite society by the name of sachet kitten, and guaranteed by science to behave, will you make room for him among your household pets? Perhaps you have a little sachet kitten in your home already.

MARY has been sitting up quite late reading about the latest perils of her favorite movie actress. Mother, from her bedroom off the parlor, hears Mary lay down the paper, yawn sleepily, and prepare to retire.

"Mary," calls mother, "be sure to lock the back door. And, Mary, is Mephitis in yet? See that he's not left out all night."

"Yes, mother."

Mary goes to the back door. She hears a soft scratching from without and knows it is Mephitis—poor fellow, left out in the cold all this while!

Mary opens the door and in walks a handsome little black animal with a long and bushy tail thickly clothed with very fine hair. White markings streak its forehead, neck and back.

A nice Angora kitten?

The Polite Name.

Well, hardly. Mary's pet is nothing more or less than—now don't gasp—a SKUNK! But you must not call it that now. It has a new name—the SACHET KITTEN.

Now to tell you why. Science has dispersed with some former qualities that barred him from polite society, and now he is becoming a real household favorite.

But let Charles B. Cory, curator of zoology at the Field Columbian Museum, in Chicago, and one of the most widely known naturalists in the country, tell you what a fine pet the sachet cat makes—also a few other interesting facts about what he terms "a much maligned animal." If Mary should ever become real peeved with Mephitis, following out what Mr. Cory says, and wish to be real mean—why, she could kill the little animal and find it "the finest eating in the land."

Meek in Disposition.

"The skunk isn't such a bad animal as some persons would make you believe," declared Mr. Cory. "On the contrary, it is of a meek disposition. Of course, if you care to persist in teasing it, why, it is more than likely to protect itself. And, oh, what protection! 'Child of the Devil'—that is what our French neighbors called the skunk away back in 1636.

"But when not bothered the skunk is the nicest pet one could imagine. I have often been camping where several of them would come right up to the cabin door and play around. Of course, I did not annoy them, and in return they did not annoy me.

"Science has found a way to remove the scent glands of the skunk without in any way affecting the health or happiness of the animal. If this is done with the young animal he can be made to become a household pet. Naturally of an affectionate nature, he will rival the cat and the dog for your favors. Children can play with him at will. And, besides, he will aid greatly in ridding the neighborhood of rats and mice.

"Let me tell you a few more things about this animal, spoken of so disparagingly, yet so little known about by most of our people.

"Skunks may be numbered among our best animals, and, although they have the reputation of being undesirable neighbors, largely on account of their malodorous qualities, they are in reality one of our prettiest mammals. They are naturally inoffensive and are of great practical value to the farmer, as they destroy enormous quantities of grasshoppers, beetles and the like, and they also prey upon and kill large numbers of mice, ground squirrels and other small mammals. It is true that they occasionally kill chickens and suck eggs when they find a nest, but the harm which they do is as nothing when compared with their value to the agriculturist in ridding his gardens and fields of the various pests which destroy his crops.

Joins Club in Winter.

"Skunks usually make their homes in burrows in the ground, although they are not averse to living under an outbuilding and occasionally in an old hollow stump or log. In very cold weather there is no doubt that they hibernate to a more or less extent, but their sleep cannot be very deep or protracted, for on mild winter days I have often seen their fresh tracks in the snow. Sometimes several skunks live in a den in winter, and it is claimed that four or five are often found together—and sometimes as many as ten. It would seem probable that in most cases they are members of one family of the preceding season, although one authority states that as many as fifteen have been found in winter lying in one nest.

"The young are born in April or early in May and usually number from four to six, rarely more, although as many as ten in a litter have been recorded. They are very pretty little animals, and, as already mentioned, when taken young and the scent glands removed, they make interesting and often affectionate pets.

Victim of Writers.

"Much has been written about 'mad skunks' and the danger of hydrophobia if bitten by them. While there is no doubt that skunks can contract hydrophobia, in my opinion they rarely do so. I have myself been twice bitten by skunks and know several people who have been bitten by them, but in no instance were there any after ill effects other than would be produced by any simple wound. A naturalist friend of mine who has been bitten several times by skunks does not consider their bites more dangerous than any other of our common mammals. Cases of hydrophobia from the bite of a skunk have been reported, however, where persons have been bitten with fatal result.

"The flesh of young skunk is very good eating, as I can testify from personal experience. It is not unlike chicken and far better than possum or coon. Its taste is particularly agreeable. Enormous numbers of skunks are trapped annually and their skins sold for furs which in many cases are offered for sale as 'Alaska sable.' I don't suppose that many of our women know this. Perhaps I am doing an injustice to the fur trade by saying this, but it is a fact."

Dr. Merriam to Rescue.

Dr. Clinton Hart Merriam, also a well-known naturalist, pays tribute to the skunk as a household pet.

"These animals, particularly when young, make very pretty pets," he says, "being attractive in appearance, gentle in disposition, interesting in manners, cleanly in habits—rare qualities, indeed. They are playful, sometimes mischievous, and manifest considerable affection for those who have the care of them.

"I have had, at different times, ten live skunks in confinement. From some of them I removed the scent bags, but the greater number were left in a state of nature.

"I was the master of the cleverest young skunk that I have thus far chanced to meet. For a name he received the title of his genus, and we called him 'Meph' for short. While driving about the country in the performance of my professional duties he usually slept in my pocket. After supper I commonly took a walk and he always followed close at my heels. If I chanced to walk too fast for him he would scold and stamp with his forefeet, and if I persisted in keeping too far ahead would turn about, disgusted, and make off in an opposite direction; but if I stopped and called him he would hurry along at a short ambling pace and soon overtake me.

He Loved the Ladies.

"He was particularly fond of ladies. I think it was their dress that attracted him, but be this as it may, he would invariably leave me to follow any lady that chanced to come near.

"We used to walk through the woods to a large meadow, which abounded in grasshoppers. Here 'Meph' would fairly revel in his favorite food. His nest was in a box near the foot of the stairs, and before he grew strong enough to crawl out by himself he would, whenever he heard me coming, stand on his hind legs, with his paws resting on the edge of the box, and beg to be carried upstairs.

"If I passed by without appearing to notice him he invariably became much enraged and chippered and scolded away at a great rate, stamping meanwhile most vehemently. He always liked to be carried up to my office, and as soon as strong enough would climb up of his own accord. He was very sprightly and frolicsome, and used to hop about the floor and run from room to room in search of something to play with, and frequently amused himself by trying to demolish my slippers.

A Playful Pet.

"During the evening he occasionally assumed a cunning mood, and would steal softly up to my chair and, standing erect, would claw at my pants once or twice, and then scamper off as fast as his little legs would carry him, evidently anxious to have me give chase. If I refused to follow he was soon back to try a new scheme to attract my attention."

Now that the skunk has been introduced to polite society by the name of sachet kitten, and guaranteed by science to behave, will you make room for him among your household pets? Perhaps you have a little sachet kitten in your home already.

Old Styles Return in Wear for Wee Ones

International Fashion Bureau. Paris, New York, Chicago.

Dear Dorothy:—

I had to laugh at your witty paragraph about the absurdity of letting a white muslin drop skirt show beneath your summer silk gown, "like a petticoat lost from its moorings."

When you dug into that old trunk of grandmamma's after reading what the styles were going to be this summer, and routed out her silk gown of 1830, you forgot to hunt up something else that she would never have forgotten, to go with it and make a completed costume—the pantalettes.

Now maybe you would be good, and not poke fun at white cotton drop skirts, the 1915 version of pantalette.

But "I'm here to tell you," as a friend of the family invariably remarks when about to launch something emphatic, which way the wind is blowing in styles for kiddies this coming spring.

As far as I can read signs, the verdict seems to be, back to the dress of 1830 and 1870 for the wee ones, as well as for grownups.

Little Miss Nettycoat isn't going to wear pantalettes, to be sure, though no one doubts she would look just as cunning in them as grandma did at her age, but she, too, will show a few inches of ruffly, fluffy white beneath her full skirted gown of the spring, to prove that she, too, knows how to carry out period ideas in dress.

Her little waist will be sweetly surpliced, or cunningly rounded and dropped off at the shoulders, as it used to be in the good old days.

Little brother Tommy Tickletoes is going to follow the new mode, too, with straight-legged breeches coming to the middle of his fat little calves and a short roundabout that makes him look like the daguerrotype of grandpapa on mother's writing table.

Cousin Kate's little girl, the last word in daintiness, wears the dearest dresses, all practically on the same model. Kate is carrying out the same note in the dresses she is making her for spring.

It's what I call the long-waisted jumper and abbreviated skirt style, and the new skirt Kate is making now out of red and blue plaid seemed less of a skirt and more of a ruching than ever.

It was hardly a handspan deep, side plaited and set into a band and called a skirt. With it will be worn a jumper of soft red cashmere.

International Fashion Bureau. Paris, New York, Chicago.

For Sunday-go-to-meeting Kate has just made Rene a taffeta gown in two-piece style, which couldn't be more charming if it tried.

In the upper part she has utilized the long lines of the old-fashioned waistcoat, using plaid taffeta, buttoned straight down the front, to give the waistcoat look, and plain taffeta for sides and sleeves. The little plaited plaid taffeta skirt over which this falls is fastened to an underbody of cotton.

Quite the newest thing for little Tommy Tickletoes's clo'ses is straight little trousers and quaint little coat, almost waist length. The coat doesn't meet in front, but shows a bit of the cotton or silk waist, to which said little trousers are flatly buttoned. The model may be developed in serge or flannel, linen or galatea, and looks as quaint in one as in the others.

The eminently sensible romper for strenuous play is always good style for wee ones.

For party wear for little maidens, straight slips of daintiest wash cotton, beautifully embroidered and much sashed, are as good as they ever were, if not better.

Devotedly,

Anne

Plaid zephyr gingham and white embroidery enter into the building of this quaint little dress for a wee girl, with its round waist and full, ruffle-edged skirt redolent of fashions in vogue many a year ago.

In fact, this girlie has a dress very, very much like that which her great-grandmamma wore, many years ago. The little dress has two pockets. If great-grandmamma had worn hoop skirts as a child, no doubt the little girls, who wish to be in style today would wear cute little hoop skirts.

DOROTHY DULIN

THAT ALL SKIRTS MUST FLARE, IS EVIDENT

THE martial influence is clearly evident in the models for early spring and shows itself in the extensive braiding used both on suits and gowns.

IN the second figure the suit of green cheviot has the coat completely outlined with braid and fastened with buttons set close together. Wide braid borders the circular skirt and forms the deep cuffs. The collar is faced with white silk and bound with braid.

The suit on the left is of putty colored gabardine with collar and revers of black and white striped silk. The jacket is belted in the back giving the effect of the higher waist line. Below the belt the coat ripples and flares. The skirt adds several plaits front and back to its already generous width.

An attractive handling of black braid on gray and white check is illustrated on the right. Buttons and collar are also of braid but revers are of white silk. The sleeves show double cuffs, one of silk and one of braid. Shoes are of white buckskin trimmed with black patent leather.

LEADING 20 NATIONS AGAINST THE CZAR

IN THE PATH OF NAPOLEON

A Journey of 20,000 Miles

100 Years After His Downfall

BY JAMES MORGAN

DATES AND EVENTS—AGE 42-43.
May 9, 1812—Napoleon left Paris.
May 29, 1812—Left Dresden.
June 24, 1812—Entered Russia.
July 16 to July 16, 1812—At Vilna.
July 26 to August 13, 1812—At Vitebsk.
August 16 to August 24, 1812—At Smolensk.
September 7, 1812—Battle at Borodino.

With the empress seated beside him and his trumpeters before him, with his court and his servants following him in a long procession of coaches, he left Paris on a beautiful May morning as if for a fete. Crossing France and the Rhine, he entered Germany, where the princes of his allied states humbly stood by the roadside and waited to make their obeisance as the king of the kings of the earth passed by.

The king of Saxon came out to greet the master from whom he had received his kingly title and escort him to Dresden, where the emperor of Austria, the king of Prussia, the king of Bavaria and the rest of the satraps of Europe gathered to pay court to the sovereign of them all.

It was Napoleon's first appearance among them since he had married into the family of kings, and he proudly displayed Marie Louise, loaded down with jewels that dazzled and excited the envy of the queens and princesses of the subject and impoverished states. Some, indeed, felt that the young empress was over proud and too haughty toward her less fortunate relations; but with the emperor's manners no fault was found. When his father-in-law, the Emperor Francis, made haste to tell him the happy news that an antiquarian had discovered that the Bonapartes of old were a royal family, Napoleon did not laugh in his face. Nor did he permit the glint of unconcealable hatred in the eye of his step-mother-in-law, the Empress Marie, to discourage his kindly attention to her, and he interposed no objections to her stripping Marie Louise's rich wardrobe and jewel case of everything she coveted.

A BLUFF THAT WAS CALLED.

Not from idle vanity did Napoleon stage at Dresden that last spectacle of pomp and splendor in the drama of his reign. As he had gathered the czar and his other allies at Erfurt in 1808 to overawe Austria, he assembled the emperor of Austria and his allies in this second congress of kings to let the czar see that the monarchs of Europe were enlisted for the war as well as their contingents of soldiers in the great army which was already moving toward the Russian frontier.

He was leading strongly on the hope that a demonstration in force would bring Alexander to terms and that the Russian sovereign would not wait for him to invade the soil of his realm. "Alexander and I," he said in his review of the campaign, "were in the position of two boasters who, without wishing to fight, were endeavoring to frighten each other." But when the czar had disappointed him by not showing any sign of flinching, he dismissed his satellites and proceeded to Poland and East Prussia to place himself at the head of his army.

"The bottle is open," he said, "and the wine must be drunk." How bitter its dregs were to be no foretaste warned him as he left the beautiful city by the Elbe, into which, after seven months, he should silently steal back at night in a sleigh, his army lost and with not even a trooper for his escort.

THE 600,000.

The bayonets of more than 600,000 men, drawn from 20 nations, ran like a hedge from the feet of the Carpathian mountains to the shores of the Baltic. Coming from all Europe by that Northern sea, from the polders of the Netherlands, from the plains of Lombardy and from the shores of Calabria, they formed the greatest army Europe ever had seen. All the races of the Caucasian world were in its ranks, and all the tongues of Christendom were heard in its camps. Perhaps no more than a third were French. Certainly more than a fourth were Germans from the Rhine states. There were 30,000 Austrians, under Prince Schwarzenburg, and the Prussians numbered 20,000. Prince Eugene, viceroy of Italy, brought 30,000 Italians; Prince Poniatowski led 60,000 Poles, and there were cohorts of Swiss, Dutch, Croatians, Spaniards and Portuguese.

No ties of blood or language or nationality, or sentiment of patriotism united them. No conscious purpose animated them. They had not even been told whom they were to hate and why they were to slay. And that is why, in 100 could read a line of print. They only knew they had been called out to fight for Napoleon. He was the bond that drawn them together and it alone must hold them together.

Never had the master mind shown more vast and foresighted skill in sweeping and provisioning an army. He had seen personally, or was to see shortly the 600,000 wore. "These cost only $7 cents," he said of the samples. "They seem made finer than those of the Dutch, which cost $1.20." He bought 3,000,000 pairs of boots, and, to the orders, the soldiers who had to walk across Europe to join his eagles received from five to five pairs each, that they will arrive on the Vistula with two pairs in the knapsack and a third pair on their feet."

Enormous supplies had been collected by him at the headwaters of the rivers flowing into the theater of the war. His huge transports were in the thousands of vehicles and he had 180,000 horses, having all the cattle on the steppes of Europe and derprived the farmer's plow of its motive power.

AT THE GATES OF RUSSIA.

The main body of the army moved over the wide level fields by the River Pregel, along which the train for St. Petersburg today looks from the car windows of his Berlin-Petrograd line as it approaches the portals of the strange land of discovery. Although it is only an imaginary line, the most fortified in the world round so stirs the imaginings. One looks in vain for the visible signs of it. No great military fortifications are to be seen. Even across the chalk line that demarks the empire of the kaisers from the empire of the czars. Only at the station of the German cavalry is disclosed to view as it strolls along like a frieze on the horizon.

The incident does visibly thin out and taper off through the closing days of the trip, but the last town in Germany is as resolutely Germanic as any place between the Rhine and the Niemen. German faces and German mustaches, German caps and a German brewery still boldly assert their nationality. But the German station master rings the warning bell, and the train has hardly more than pulled out of that German station than a little brook is crossed—and all things change in a twinkling.

That little brook is the moat between Germany and Russia, between the Teuton and the Muscovite, between the West and the East. By its farther bank a man, standing to his knees in a pair of his boots, is seen vacantly up at the train. His shaggy, wavy hair scrambles out from beneath a high peaked can and his long yellow, unkempt beard straggles over the collar of a robe that is drawn in by a cord at the waist. There is no mistaking him. Tolstoi has not only drawn his picture true to life, but in his own garb he has immersonated him before the world. That Moujik on the shore of Russia is the brother of 100,000,000 Russian peasants.

Nothing in his background is as Russian as he. For while the train was crossing the brook, a lightning change of scene took place that would do credit to the mechanism of the theatrical stage. In the brief course of a journey of only a mile between the German frontier station and the Russian frontier station, one civilization vanished and another replaced it.

When the passengers descend from the train to the soil of the czars of all the Russias, they find themselves in a world transformed. Their faces, their eyes, their beards, their caps, their coats and their boots the people on the platform as the only souvenir of their immortal, but uninvited guest who left the town cherished. On that shaft in the square, which was erected by the Czar Alexander, this grim tale is carved:

RUSSIA
Surprised in 1812 by an Army of Only 70,000 Repassed Her Frontier.

That monumental stone was yet unquarried and the czar was at Vilna, 60 miles away, when at midnight three pontoons being completed, the men of twenty nations began to pour out of the forest and flow in torrents upon the undefended Russian shore.

That bank of the Niemen at Kovno well may be called the high-water mark of the red tide of the French revolution. It was there that the mighty force which took its rise when the French people burst the old Bourbon dam broke and spent itself on the sandy wastes.

THE INVISIBLE FOE.

The Russian commanders, as Napoleon intended they should, had divided their army when they saw his multitude flowing upon them from every direction. Thus separated it was impossible for them to make a stand. While the two Russian armies, therefore, fell back in an effort to get together and present a solid front, Napoleon moved forward between them in an effort to keep them apart and destroy them singly.

The familiar legend of a deep-laid scheme on the part of the Russians to retire before Napoleon for the crafty purpose of luring him on and on to his destruction is only a melodramatic invention, made to fit what happened. The plain truth is that they strove from the beginning to unite and stop him, while he strove to catch them until he sank exhausted from the chase.

He was disappointed at the outset of the campaign, when, after making preparations to fight for a foothold on the banks of the Niemen, he was permitted to cross unmolested and was welcomed to a desolate shore.

Dashing off to Vilna the next day with the Guard, he marched for three days through a terrible tempest of rain and sleet and wind unchallenged except by roaring and flashing thunderbolts, the Russian outposts everywhere vanishing like deer into the depths of the forests. Already the climate, with its sudden and fierce variations, was collecting its toll, and 10,000 horses had perished, frozen to death in June.

As Napoleon neared Vilna he advanced cautiously over the plain lying before the town. Surely the Russians would make a stand to hold the capital city of Lithuania! But not a bayonet remained to defend it. Surprise and anger clouded the emperor's brow as he entered the gate of Vilna. Weary, baffled, disgusted, he went to the palace from which the czar had so lately fled and threw himself upon a bed.

He complained of the Russian military commanders. "They are afraid of Alexander and me meeting and coming to terms." His sole plan of campaign had been to frighten the czar, if not by a mere show of force then by a sudden Austerlitz or a Jena victory after which he confidently counted upon another seductive meeting with him on the banks of the Niemen. But the fly declined to walk into his parlor again, as at Tilsit.

GONE STALE.

The Napoleon of Rivoli, of Egypt, of Marengo, of Austerlitz, would have left the abandoned town of Vilna in a review from his car window at the rate of 30 miles an hour. It utterly overwhelmed many sensitive natives of the grand army as they marched and counter-marched under the blazing sun or through wild blizzards.

The men dared not lay down their arms for one minute, step out of the ranks or go anywhere except in strong bands, for the dreaded Cossacks seemed always to be lurking in the gloomy forests. The French, we are told, ceased to curse, and the Germans ceased to sing. Homesickness became a well-defined and widely prevalent disease. Not a few forlorn boys leaned their heads on their muskets and chose to look in the muzzles rather than endure the anguished longings for their own fair lands.

It was toward the end of July when Napoleon at last overtook one of the Russian armies at Vitebsk. But instead of sailing in after supper or before breakfast, as the little corporal would have done, he postponed the longed-for battle a day while he waited for reinforcements. The Russians, however, took advantage of the delay to break camp in the night and escape, thus leaving not a track to tell which way they had fled.

Five weeks the grand army had made only 250 miles and that advance, although unopposed by any enemy in arms, had cost it nearly a third of its strength. One of the German divisions had lost a full half of its men. Of the 260,000 whom Napoleon had led across the Niemen at Kovno only 220,000 remained, flung out along a front of 150 miles.

For fifteen days the emperor stayed at Vitebsk, tearing down houses about his headquarters to give him an open space on which to review his troops, while he appealed to the imperial treasury at Paris for some "amusing books" as he had "moments of leisure." But no help came. After losing that precious fortnight and more of the short summer, he left the city by the Duna and crossed over the Dneiper, the great river of Moscow, on which Odin and Rurik, with the fierce multitudes of the north, had journeyed to the Black sea and descended upon Constantinople.

IN WHITE RUSSIA.

Onward the grand army toiled out of Lithuania into the real Russia, into "White Russia," until it stood before the many towered brick wall of sacred Smolensk, whose white domes gleam in the sun on the heights above the Dnieper. There once more the enemy was overtaken, and when Napoleon learned that the Russian armies were together at Smolensk, united for the defense of the city, he clapped his hands and rejoiced. "At last I have them." But again he lost a day before closing in upon the sixth river, and it was noon of the following day when his batteries opened fire. All afternoon the city wall withstood a pelting hail of lead, though the wooden houses behind it repeatedly caught fire. At the late setting of the northern sun, Smolensk still defied its assailants, who now rested for the night.

The fires within the walls continued to spread, casting a glare upon Napoleon's face as he sat before the door of his tent and gazed at the burning town. When the sun rose after a brief August night, its first rays disclosed the battered walls without a defender mounted upon them and the city wrapped in silence and in flames. A young French officer, creeping up to the foot of the wall and not hearing the sound of a living creature within it, looked out over a deserted city.

The quarry, for the cover once more, had escaped again, and the inhabitants had fled after the soldiers, instead of destroying the enemy and capturing a rich city, Napoleon, at the cost of 12,000 men, had conquered a heap of ruins as useless as the wilds of Lithuania. Moreover, he had to fight the conflagration to complete even that empty conquest. When that had been suppressed he entered the smoldering, depopulated ruins and flung himself upon a bed.

He was now nearly 400 miles from the frontier and still without the decisive battle that he had expected to deliver as soon as he entered the dominions of the czar. As he marched deeper and deeper into the vast Russian wastes and farther and farther into the short Russian summer, he had looked upon Smolensk as the goal of his campaign. Arrived there, he had thought to sit down for the winter in that great city of the Dnieper, while his army rested and recuperated for a great campaign in 1813.

But the warehouses of Smolensk were burned or empty, and the invader had to leave within the ashes of the city. There were no supplies for the men and the animals. And a hungry army cannot stand still in the presence of starvation.

TO GO BACK OR GO ON.

Hour after hour the emperor faced the hard choice presented to him, demurring as he paced his headquarters debating with himself. Should he stop or turn back or go on? Could his army winter at Smolensk? Dared he retreat and present himself a beaten foe before a mutinous Europe? Must he advance, even at the risk of the fate of Charles XII. of Sweden, the latest invader to plunge into the overwhelming spaces of Russia.

The problem really had passed beyond his own decision. In supreme emergencies the will of an army always overrides the will of its commander. When the soldiers have had enough of fighting, the battle is ended, regardless of the wishes of the general. And when they are starving, they can be successfully marched only in the direction of food.

Napoleon knew that he no longer commanded, but only followed his troops. "It is dreadful," he confessed, "but from Vilna half the army consisted of stragglers; now they form the corpses of it. With its composition and in its disorganization, motion alone keeps this army together. One may advance at the head of it, but not stop or go back."

With nothing but starvation and disease behind him and the ruins of a burned and deserted city ahead of him, Napoleon passed out of the gate of Smolensk in the middle of a night late in August and took the road to Moscow on the heels of the ever-retreating Russians. Hemmed in by forests, cowed to his British military adviser, Sir Robert Wilson, who was among the many beard grew to my waist and live on potatoes in Siberia than permit any negotiation with Napoleon while an armed Frenchman remains on the soil of Russia."

The czar was as helpless as Napoleon in choosing his course and only obeyed the wishes of his people. While the invaders had advanced to Smolensk across Lithuania looking for something to eat, the Russians, knowing they were divided and outnumbered, fell back, looking for safety. They did not care to sacrifice themselves in the defense of the alien Lithuanians and had been perfectly willing to retreat. But when they joined their forces united at Smolensk and felt the soil of Russia proper under their feet their spirit changed directly, for a fleeing dog will turn upon the pursuer at his own gate.

They rebelled against the strategists who had abandoned Smolensk, and they indignantly insisted upon defending their homes and their altars. Their outcry compelled the czar to replace the retreating commander, Barclay de Tolly, a general of Scotch descent, with the veteran General Kutusof. Although Kutusof was 72 and too fat to sit on a horse, he was an old-fashioned Russian who had just returned from hard fighting in the Turkish war to be hailed as the national hero. Besides he proclaimed his desire to settle a score with Napoleon, who had whipped him at Austerlitz, seven years before.

THE BLOODIEST BATTLE.

But he really did not wish to give battle again to the victor of Austerlitz and he continued to retire and surrender Russian soil to Napoleon until his army protested. After he had fallen back to within 75 miles of Moscow, he reluctantly yielded to the pressure from his officers and men and from the indignant nobles of that city, and drew up his 129,000 soldiers across the road where it passes at the village of Borodino, over a branch of the Moskwa, near the battlefield.

There he paraded before his kneeling, warriors a most venerated image of the Holy Virgin, and the priests of the church threw down their censers, with the injunction to die. If they must, to save the Holy City of Russia from the sacrilegious hordes of the west. Napoleon, on the other hand, displayed to his guard on an easel in front of his tent a large portrait of the king of Rome, which Marie Louise had sent him from Paris.

The story of the battle is not a tale of strategy and surprise, but of stubborn ferocity on both sides and headlong impulse. Nor did Napoleon sit his white Arab as at Austerlitz, maneuvering his forces like a switchman in his tower. On the contrary, he chose a point of observation on a hill threequarters of a mile from the front of his army and sat there on a camp stool with his feet in front, sometimes apparently asleep. He rose from time to time to rest his telescope on a gunner's shoulder and, again, in an effort to warm his feet, he paced back and forth a few minutes until the slight exertion seemed to have exhausted him.

He did not mount his horse in the course of the long, hard fought day until the fighting virtually was at an end, and painful functional disorder is said to have unfitted him for the saddle. Even a severe cold—Constant had neglected to give him his waterproof boots the day before—left him dull and inert and hardly able to speak.

Marshal Ney, at the front, where he was dripping with fire and winning the title of the Prince of the Moskwa, exclaimed in disgust that the emperor might better be in the Tuileries. In vain the marshal implored him for the assistance of the guard. The emperor refused to send it into action and risk the destruction of the corps which might be the one means of carrying him out of Russia.

The two armies were about equal in numbers. But the invaders, after months of retreat from the Dnieper to Smolensk through clouds of dust and furnace heat for two weeks, at last fighting with the Russian rearguard and capturing Smolensk, were ill-fed and worn down. The brutal and deadly tempest of fire and death raged from 6 to 6, even the Russians, with nearly 40,000 of their comrades dead about them, slowly gave way. But they retired slowly and in good order only a few paces from the crimsoned field, where they chanted their Te Deums and boasted with justice the keeping of their foes, whose own loss of almost 30,000 made an awful total that gave the battle the unhappy distinction of being the bloodiest of the nineteenth century.

Napoleon, having climbed upon his horse, rode over the terrible scene at closer range, after which, flushed with victory, he returned to his tent with "his hair in disorder" and his face "wearing a tired expression." He was satisfied that Kutusof would gladly retire the next day and he was content to accept a drawn battle.

ON TO MOSCOW.

As the Russians resumed their retreat, and the grand army in advance, the famished invaders were spurred forward by the hope of finding the fat larders and the fabled riches of Moscow. It was the one hope left them and "a Moscou! a Moscou!" was the last remaining cry to stir their wasted ranks.

Necessity often is the mother of strategy. Napoleon obeyed the instincts of his famished soldiers in ventaring beyond Smolensk, and he promised them. "You shall see Moscow," while he promised himself, "Peace waits for me at the gates of Moscow." But Prince Eugene came away from his stepfather sighing, "Moscow will be our ruin."

The bottle was open and the wine must be drunk!
